NIGHT

By Grace Noll Crowell

Thank God for night—with its great gift of sleep— More wonderful than all His gifts to men! For stars that walk the dream-ways and that keep Their wide-eyed watch until dawn breaks again; Thank God for blessed silence down the land, More soothing than the drip of summer rain; For darkness—soft and cool as some dear hand Laid on a forehead feverish with pain. Oh, only those who carry sleepless scars And know how sweet sleep is that comes at last, And only the eyes that have looked long at stars Have learned night's secret as it marches past; Have learned to know how quiet God must keep To guide an earth through stars—that men may sleep.

Will Exhume Body Of Youth

Anderson, Aug. 20.—Request was formally made today by H. C. Miller and Proctor A. Bonham, attorneys for J. R. Thomas, held in the county jail here charged with poisoning and drowning his son, Maxie Thomas, 15, that the body of the boy be exhumed for further examination of its vital organs.

The petition was made before Judge M. L. Bonham, and was unopposed by Solicitor Leon W. Harris, who named one physician to join with another named by defense counsel in a post-mortem.

Maxie Thomas' body was taken from the Saluda river on the night of July 30, after he and his father had gone on a fishing trip. Thomas explained that his son had fallen from a rock in the river and drowned before he could reach him.

In an investigation that followed, showing Maxie's life was insured for more than $30,000, the boy's father was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Coroner J. M. Clark. At the coroner's inquest, State Chemist Robertson testified that traces of poison were found in the viscera of the dead youth.

Thomas, in his petition through counsel to the court, alleged that "in the circumstances in which the examination of the viscera was made, that the result thereof could not be relied upon as accurate, dependable or conclusive." Contention was made that in addition to the stomach various other vital organs should be examined for traces of poison if the test was to be considered accurate and definite.

After setting forth claims to indicate that the examination of the dead youth's stomach was too superficial to provide conclusive evidence, the petition asked the court or order was as follows:

"Wherefore; the petitioner prays: That this honorable court do order that the body of the deceased, Maxie Thomas, be exhumed under and by the direction of competent physicians, one of whom is to be selected by the petitioner and one by the solicitor, and that said physicians be so selected, be authorized and directed to remove the kidneys, the spleen, the liver, the heart, and such other organs and parts of said body, as in the judgment of said physicians are essential to a proper determination of the existence or absence of poison in the said body; and that said physicians be further authorized and directed to carefully and properly seal said parts so removed, and personally transport and deliver the same, under seal, to a competent chemist, designated by the court, for examination and analysis; said parts of the body to be kept by said chemist under seal, until such examination is made and thereafter to be retained and preserved under seal by him, until the further order of the court. That said physicians, or either of them, be permitted to be present at such examination and analysis, and to observe the same.

"And that it be further ordered that such examining chemist file his original report of the results of his examination and analysis with the clerk of court for Anderson county; and he furnish the solicitor and counsel for the petitioner with a copy of said report."

BUILDING FURNITURE TO AN IDEAL
A PAINTING by Rembrandt, a chair by Chippendale... each is something more than just a painting or just a chair. They are the work of masters.
But all of the masters did not live in the past. There are painters today whose works will one day be "old masters." And there are cabinet makers as good as Chippendale.
And these craftsmen of today... they, too, are building furniture to an ideal.
Of such furniture are our stocks composed.
