SWIMMING POOL, GIFT OF COL. SPRINGS, NEARING COMPLETION

Will Be Up-to-Date In Every Detail. Filtering and Cleaning Systems Items of Interest. When Completed October 15th, Will Be One of Finest Pools In the State.

Work on the new swimming pool, it is reported, will be completed by October 15th. At that time Presbyterian college may claim ownership of the finest and most modern natatorium in South Carolina. This new unit, another gift from Colonel Springs, will complete Leroy Springs gymnasium, as fine and as well equipped a college gymnasium as may be found in the South. Complete with a pool that is perfect in every detail, and furnished with every improvement that science has conceived, the new swimming pool building will stand as a beautiful monument to the generosity and friendship of one of P. C.'s most distinguished and valued supporters.

Announcement was made last spring that the pool would be added to the physical plant of the college for use this fall. Accordingly, work was started during the summer months, and the building was well-nigh finished when the football squad reported in Clinton for early practice on the first of September. Little work remains except the actual tiling of the pool. This will require several weeks, after which students will be permitted to try their swimming and diving prowess.

Although definite plans have not been made public as yet, it has been intimated by persons who ought to know, that the conclusion of work on the pool will be followed closely by a ceremony of dedication. This will be one of the gala occasions of the college year—a day on which Presbyterian college will formally accept the pool and endeavor in some small way to show her appreciation to the donor.

The new swimming pool will be the final unit of a physical plant that has attracted considerable attention. An Associated Press writer, visiting on the campus to get "the low-down" on the Blue Hose grid squad several days ago, expressed the opinion that P. C. has, for its size, the best physical equipment to be found south of the

The new pool will bring about a change at the local institution. Swimming classes will be organized during the year and it is expected that every student will at one time or another take part in the swimming program of the college. President McSweeney has intimated that before long swimming may be added to the requirement for graduation. This custom has already been adopted in many other schools and colleges. As an example in South Carolina, Winthrop requires natorial proficiency before granting a diploma. Every year the newspapers bear the news of scores of persons who have lost their lives through lack of ability to take care of themselves in the water.

Interesting features of the new pool are the purifying system, the heating plant, and the cleaning equipment. The filters have been so arranged that clean, pure water will replace the old every eight hours. This will insure clean, healthful water at all times. Sediment may be removed from the pool without draining, by a sort of vacuum cleaning attachment which scours the bottom. The heating unit will serve the entire gymnasium, thus lightening the load of the central heating system, which has been overworked for the past few years. New water mains have been installed and there will never be any shortage of water for the shower baths or for the pool.

COED SCHOOLS PREFERABLE

Dr. Albert Britt of Knox College, Says Cause of Separation Is Archaic Doctrine.

Galesburg, Ill., Sept. 14.—When I undertook the presidency of Knox college I had been for 25 years a resident of New York city. Most of my contacts were with an environment in which coeducation was still regarded as a daring and dangerous experiment—a necessity, perhaps, but still a disagreeable one.

Four years at the head of a coeducational college have proved to me—if proof were needed—that this attitude is the result of an unnatural and archaic doctrine. Coeducation and not separate education is the natural and effective method.

And yet it is at this point that many students and parents hesitate or turn back. This is the question scanned most often with suspicion and perhaps most frequently with hostility. Why?

The tradition of separate education for the sexes in college was borrowed outright from an old-world system which tacitly assumed that women were not capable of intellectual development. The older colleges of the east carried on the tradition with no thought of doubt or weakness. Women were not admitted to college because it was believed that women were not capable of receiving that which colleges were supposed to give.

This idea was long since exploded. Only the prejudices and false conclusions that it engendered remain. Women need no longer prove their right to be heard in college nor labor to establish their ability to receive an education of any sort on even terms with their brothers.

By the same token the day is long past when coeducation must prove its virtues or concede superiority to the policy of separation. The burden of proof, in point of fact, rests upon the separatists.

Coeducation is a recognition of the normal relationship of the sexes which begins in the family and continues through life, and it is a denial of the assumption that the four years from 18 to 22 should be lifted out of the current of the normal and dedicated to an existence which we fondly believe is one of cloistered monastic or conventual seclusion.

It offers a fair basis of intellectual competition between men and women—perhaps the only plane on which the sexes compete without prejudice, jealousy or patronage.

In the daily contact of the class room the false glamour with which each sex tends to invest the other disappears and their relationship is placed upon firm basis of mutual understanding and respect.

The social life of the co-educational college is self-contained and continuous. Its control is simple since there are practically no outsiders involved and all the individuals concerned are equally subject to college authority. For the same reason there is less surreptitious association and little of the false romance that surrounds a clandestine adventure.

Extra-curricular activities—except athletics—are participated in and controlled by both sexes, thus giving students a useful preparation for the relations of the working world, in which the tendency is more and more toward a duality of activity and control. We dream of the perfect institution as we dream of the perfect life and struggle toward it thru the handicapping and clogging errors that beset humanity. Probably perfection has no place in the human scheme since it implies the finish and static, and progress comes only with the maintenance of the dynamo, so in what is here said no one should seek a formula for the perfect college.

The goal is rather that institution which most clearly mirrors all that is highest and best in our national life and most effectively stimulates effort toward lifting that life to a constantly higher plane.

In the midst of a standardized world the need grows greater for human individuality. The highest test that can be applied to any college is the quality of the individual that it produces. This production can be most effectively carried on where groups are small enough to place the highest possible premium upon individual achievement rather than upon mass effect.

To achieve this result requires the most normal relationship among individuals and that which most nearly approaches the healthful conditions of daily life. The convent and the monastery grew in an age whose customary state was one of war, disorder, and uncertainty—in all respects the opposite of our own.

Cauliflower With Tomato Sauce

Put the cauliflower in boiling salted water and cook until tender; drain, pull florets apart and lay in buttered baking dish, pour over them a cup of tomato sauce; sprinkle top with buttered crumbs and bake until the crumbs are browned.

Cottage Cheese Pie

Mix 1 cup cottage cheese, 1-2 cup sugar, 1-3 cup honey, 2 beaten egg yolks, 2 tablespoons melted butter, 1-2 teaspoon flavoring, 2-3 cup milk. Pour into one crust, dust, dust lightly with cinnamon and bake until custard is set and crust lightly browned. Serve with meringue, if desired.

Flies are dangerous. They are also the filthiest insect known. They deposit germs in three ways. By contact, vomit spots and excreta. They taint everything they touch. FLY-TOX kills flies. It is safe, stainless. Simple instructions on each bottle (blue label) for killing ALL household insects. INSIST on FLY-TOX. FLY-TOX is the scientific insecticide developed at Mellon Institute of Industrial Research by Rex Fellowship. FLY-TOX brings health, comfort and cleanliness with its perfume-like fragrance.—Adv.
