

COUSIN OF LATE R. J. REYNOLDS ENDORSES IT

"I wish I could tell every one of my friends over the South how much I've been benefited by Sargon. "I was in a street car wreck eighteen months ago and the shock completely undermined my nervous system. It was impossible for me to get a good night's rest, there was such a ringing noise in my head, and my legs ached so bad. I was losing weight and strength steadily when I started Sargon.

"Five bottles built me up from 130 pounds to 145 and every pain I had disappeared. That ringing noise in my head cleared up, I sleep fine and my strength and vitality have been completely restored. I used the Sargon Pills along with the tonic and the two medicines together are the finest I ever took in my life."

The above statement was made by William Reynolds, of Clarkston, Ga., who is Atlanta District Sales Manager for the Texas Oil Company and a cousin to the late R. J. Reynolds, tobacco magnate. Sadler-Owens Pharmacy, Agents.—Adv.

"Very Latests"

By Cecile

Milady's coat this season will be of the charming new wrap-around style shown in the illustration, with shawl collar and swirl cuffs.

Of necessity the coats will be longer . . . a natural concession to the new mode in dresses.

Of course, the new coats are all versions of the new silhouette and designed for the mode of slender chic, showing the new flares or slightly molded straight lines.

Among the favorite furs are beaver, lapin, caracul, Persian lamb, raccoon, kit fox, Canadian wolf, badger and Russian lynx.

Fabrics are varied, and include Kashmere and suede, broadcloths, velour de noir and imported tweeds.

Individually appropriate fur trimmings are the boast of the shops, so Milady is confronted with a great many styles of trimmings to choose from. Indeed, this idea of individual fitness in all things is gaining a greater and greater hold on the world of fashion. Perhaps a revolt against the sameness of most things . . . who knows? Even the men are beginning to look for variety and exclusive individuality! Can women do less?

This fall the woman has her choice in coats and frocks of Princess, flare and silhouettes . . . all three charming and effective.

There seems to be a positive vogue for smart daytime things in black. Anyone who lunches on that New York avenue of fashion, Park avenue, cannot fail to notice this. One suit of nappy dull-finished worsted was observed, extensively furred in shaved Persian lamb, with a vestee and collar of the fur, sleeve capes and narrow cuffs and wide, triangular front panels down the spirit of the tight-waisted coat. To perfect this ravishing outfit, there was a black felt hat with Persian lamb draping it for a turban brim. A jeweled pin was worn stuck through one side.

READING — THREE KINDS OF MEN — SURGERY

I occasionally read a book or essay, and, while agreeing in the main, reject certain portions. It has occurred to me that possibly the portions I reject contain precisely the truths I need to correct my errors; whereupon I examine my objections with such care and intelligence as I am capable of. I recommend this course to all readers. A reader is master of the situation: He may be as unfair as he chooses, without chance of reprimand or cross-examination. A reader should not reject conclusions of a writer without consideration. Why read at all if we accept only such conclusions as are agreeable, and meet our own views.

The people abuse bankers very generally, but do the people realize what bankers say about us?

Lately I was in the smoking room of a Pullman car, and there were three clean-cut strangers present, who turned out to be bankers from the same section of a country. Presently they began talking of their business, and I have not lately heard a more intelligent resume of life and men. They knew the people as few writers know them, and their comments were fair and charitable, although very candidly admitting our faults.

One of them gave this description of the men of his community, dividing them into three classes; he was president of a national bank, I learned in course of a conversation in which they did not know I was interested:

- 1. One-half of them were honest, and entitled to credit; a few were slow but would finally pay. 2. One-fourth were careless, somewhat shiftless, got into all sorts of difficulties because of these habits, and had to be watched closely. 3. One-fourth were dishonest, lazy, and hopelessly from every standpoint. I have been wondering since if this country banker did not give a fairly accurate estimate of the men of the world.

The Mayo brothers, at Rochester, Minnesota, are probably our greatest experts in surgery. They say more than half the operations performed in this country are unnecessary. . . . I shall believe that; I depend upon the best experts in considering things I do not know much about. Everyone knows of horrible and unnecessary butchering in surgery.

"She's a banker's daughter." "No wonder she draws so much interest."

First Business Man: "Miss Burke is applying for a position in my office. Did she ever work for you?"

Second Business Man: "No." "I see. How long was she in your employ?"

Two men were talking about horse racing and remarking upon the silly names given to many horses.

If I kept a race horse I know what I should call him," said one.

"What?" asked the other. "Change of a Dollar."

"But that's absurd, isn't it?" "Is it? Tell me anything that goes more quickly."

Shy Girl: "Oh, but mother objects to kissing!"

Bright Lad: "Well, that's all right; I'm not kissing her, am I?"

He: "I can tell by looking in a girl's eyes just what she thinks of me."

She: "How annoying!"

AWAKENING

Five o'clock in the morning. The hum of a motor comes in at my open window . . . a realization that the new day has arrived exactly on time. Other motors rattle in their loose running-gears; the growl—the treble of human voices add to the evidence that the morning is on—the town is awakening!

Soon the blare will be on, the rush, the helter-skelter, mad chase for daily bread, if not more—the town is getting on its feet, after a night of rest; the swelling energy manifests itself; the odor of browning bacon—the aroma of delicious coffee—the snap of the electric toaster. . . . A new sheet is in the typewriter; thoughts come cheerily in the sweet morning air—the town is awakening.

An area of concerted effort, the contact of elbow with elbow, the purr of breathing in unison, the glow of the municipal soul. Every man at his post—the day is on.

Routine may become deadly. A town afflicted with routine may be walking in its sleep—and that is evidence of a nervous affection which might be improved by treatment. A town never gets anywhere that has an epidemic of somnambulism. Maybe the town is not awake after all, in spite of its noise and grind.

My town is awake, if you will permit personalities. It is alert to grasp every idea calculated to bring civic good to its people. It is not committed to a policy of every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost. Health, morals and mutual benefit are included in our demands as well as our prayers. It makes a town when its people feel like that. Schools, churches, society, civilization are our inspiration. Good citizens make a good town where good people love to stay. I love to hear a reference to "the old home town," where the wakefulness was genuine, not pathologic.

Individuals may awaken—but the community's spirit must awaken before the town is real. Some of us might well study the habits of the prairie dog!

Bates To Begin Sentence Soon

Greenville, Nov. 11.—James R. Bates, sentenced to serve one year and pay a fine of $1,000, upon being found guilty by a jury of misconduct in office as register of mesne conveyance for Greenville county, is expected to begin serving his sentence the latter part of the week.

Whether Bates will be sent to the county chain gang or to the state penitentiary in Columbia rests with Supervisor F. Pridmore, who said today he had not yet reached a decision.

Bates was at liberty today under bond of $2,000 and with his attorneys was arranging a number of business matters before beginning the service of his sentence. He expects to report to county officials the latter part of the week.

Engraved Christmas Cards

We are now showing new samples of Steel Engraved Christmas Greeting Cards in a variety of lovely designs. Engraved Cards are individual, neatest and best, and are becoming more stylish each year.

THE SAFE THING TO DO IN BUYING CHRISTMAS CARDS IS TO DEAL WITH AN EXPERIENCED FIRM

The sending of Christmas Cards is a social custom in which correct usage counts most. Your Christmas Cards reflect your individuality. Above all, you want them to be up-to-date, correct in style and in engraving, and the proper reflection of our own personality.

The advice and assistance of a dealer, experienced in handling Christmas card orders is invaluable.

Does the casual, itinerant, unattached house-to-house canvasser or the friend who is selling cards in an attempt to raise money, have the necessary experience or background to wisely advise you as to the many social conventions which must be observed if your card is to properly reflect your own personality and adhere to proper social usage?

We invite you to call and see our samples, or if you prefer, we will gladly send them to your home for an inspection.

We would deem it a pleasure to look after your requirements.

Say "Merry Christmas" With Individual Cards This Year.
