By SPECTATOR... COMMENTS ON MEN AND THINGS

The recent presidential campaign was on a low level. What, by the way, is a Party Platform? The Democrats and the Republicans had proclaimed through their respective platforms what they would do, if elected, but the two candidates seemed to promise more and more as the hectic speech-making continued.

I wonder why Mr. Kennedy promised so much, since the Democrats had been in full control of both the Senate and the House. Lyndon Johnson was the Senate leader and in the best position to get things done—and undone; Mr. Kennedy, on the other hand, was a Senator of no special distinction or service.

"Now that the tumult and the shouting are over let us resolve to save whatever we can from the horrendous oratorical blasts.

A proper platform, I think, would have emphasized the urgency of the need for reduction in taxes, individual and corporate; and it would have resolved sternly against wasting billions of dollars in foreign give-aways.

Our finest statesmanship could have declared emphatically for re-vamping the vast, sprawling Federal bureaucracy. Instead of something like that we have heard all manner of offers to spend the tax money collected from the people.

I repeat the very sensible observation of a big enterprise which uses its advertising space to talk plain old common sense to the citizens of our nation.

"The Bigger the Government, the smaller the People."

Everybody—labor union member, farmer, veteran, ship owner, road builder, importer, sheep herder—everybody seems to want special "benefits" from the government. So they demand help, and get a law or regulation. That requires a bureau to enforce it, taxes to pay for it.

That is how Washington bureaucracy has grown to more than 2,000,000, and taxes have grown ruinously high.

Laws and regulations are written by government employees, and Americans are being drowned in laws they don't understand, because they can't grasp, taxes they cannot afford.

Self-reliance (another name for self-respect) is like a muscle—unused, it soon becomes flabby. Our enemies know it, count on it. That is why every time we ask Government for something instead of doing it ourselves, we surrender, we lose another bit of America."

Common sense, how rare it is!! As the Spanish proverb says: "Sen-tido comun! Es mas raro de todos los Sentidos!" Which means, "Common Sense! It is the rarest of all the senses." Yes, indeed!! So-called common sense is most uncommon!

A clear, impressive statement by Dr. Raymond Miller in an address before the New York Chamber of Commerce commends itself persuasively to me.

"Theologically I am a believer in God. You may say why do you bring that up? I bring it up, gentlemen, because I don't believe you can understand or comprehend international affairs today at all unless we recognize that the main battle lines are being drawn between materialistic atheism and the philosophy in God Almighty. Theologically, I am a believer in God, but I realize that my wishes are not always in line with His will. I have learned that He has plenty of time even though I have not. Hence my creed is to study and work as though I am to live forever, but to try to live as though I am going to die tomorrow.

Socially, I enjoy people. I find that I can learn from every person. Each has its own distinct personality and ability.

I am thankful I was born in America. I did not ask for the privilege. I like our life and system where service capitalism can function within the framework of the rules of government, and not where state capitalism has become extreme and the individual is a pawn of the state.

There are many basic reasons why Communism will eventually fall of its own weight but these are not of importance today because the strategists of the Kremlin and Peking are determined to conquer the world, and to date they have done a creditable job in attaining their goal within this century.

Time is of the essence in this thing, gentlemen. I wrote an article in 1951, some of you probably saw it, published in the Harvard Business Review, where I said that we have lost 250,000 people per day for five years to Communism. I thought I would be challenged on it but I was not because I was right. We do not recognize the fact that to date people that think as we think have made practically no victories in the world. The victories for the minds of men—I can't go into detail—but they are the new countries in Africa. They are patterned after our Constitution. They like our government—Lincoln, Wilson, Washington are the three heroes of the world. But they do not understand that we have an economic liberty within a political liberty.

Mimilaty Communism has won few battles in the 'battle of the minds' it has won more people in one generation than ever before in history by any military conqueror. If the dictators of the Sino-Soviet bloc would disappear from the stage; the facts are that the majority of the people of the earth would still hate Capitalism. We could not go on with business as usual.

The world today is on fire with ideas. The chief ideas of men everywhere center around the fact that they cherish the hope that their future will be better than their past, and that the future for their children will be better than the present is for them. This hope cannot be accomplished unless man can enjoy at least a semblance of protection from the economic birds of prey. When he realizes he is merely a pawn in the hands of the local money-lenders, or of a local capital organization, or of an American organization lined up with the native vested interests, then no matter how much our own government tries to change the point of view, it is an impossibility."

Some concrete suggestions:
"Build understanding of our liberties and private enterprise system around the world based on the revolutionary spirit that has created capitalistic America. Come in here as you would into a church and think of these men. They built liberty, they built capitalism, and they built this type of thing when their revolutionary spirit revolted. We in America today have largely lost our revolutionary spirit. We are afraid of the world revolution. And the fact remains that we are the product of the greatest economic revolution of all time.

Assume the responsibility of leadership. We all too often blame the mistakes of business have created the situation that makes a diplomatic headline. And I will say this, I have never been a part of government. At two or three times I have been a consultant. My work has always been with business or with university. There are not many government servants, civil or military, in Cuba, South America, the Congo, and way stations. We, as a people, have been judged by two groups of Americans, missionaries of the church and the businessman. The missionaries have done a good job, the best yet. How much briefing in anything but profits do companies ever give people going overseas? Necessary as they are, and they are, does the overseas business representative ever understand anything about the country? How many 'natives'—and I put the word 'natives' in quotes—I wrote this; I seldom ever write a speech but I did this because I wanted to know what I was saying exactly—how many natives are in position of real and not puppet authority in overseas organizations?

If we will follow the precepts of Lincoln, of Wilson, of Washington, and of the missionary in how to get along with human beings, to live and let live, think and let think, understand rather than tolerate—if you forget everything else I have said today please go home and look up the dictionary. Don't use the word 'tolerate.' It means you hold a man in contempt. Understand him; don't tolerate him. Then the future is right and Capitalism can compete and survive, otherwise it will be engulfed by some other system before the turn of the century."

This gentleman has spoken soberly. I spent many years with French, Belgians, Dutch, English, Scots, Panamanians, Colombians, Cubans, Ecuadorians, Peruvians, and I endorse the sage counsel of Dr. Miller. It is timely.
