Slanderous Tongues.
Baltimore Sun.

It has been well and truly said that "the pen is mightier than the sword," and the saying applies even more forcibly to the human tongue, which was much in evidence and had wrought a world of good and evil—of blessing and cursing—many cycles ere pen and ink were known. It is the tongue of the eloquent orator and enthusiast that has, in all ages, incited men to deeds of wondrous daring and heroism; it is the tongue, too, of fiery marplots and demagogues that has led to the most disastrous upheavals in the world's history. But we need not betake ourselves to the chronicles of old to form an idea of its power for weal or woe, or to find traces of the ruin it has caused. We have all the evidence we want at our very doors. Who among us, even with a very limited experience, can be ignorant of the havoc wrought by the vile tongue of the slanderer—of the fair reputations it has blighted, the promising careers it has blasted, the brilliant prospects it has ruined? How many happy homes it has wrecked and the loving hearts it has torn apart and crushed beneath its merciless iron heel.

The simple lie, which hurts only the liar himself, is bad enough, for "lying lips are abomination" not only "to the Lord," but to every decent man and woman as well. The charge of untruthfulness is one which even the child resents with all its might. He may stand a great deal of bantering, but if he has a spark of self-respect in his make-up there is one taunt which his young spirit will not brook. Call him a liar, and he is up in arms at once. There is something so indescribably mean about lying that the veriest stripling seems to feel it instinctively from the moment he begins to reason. But if simple lying is bad, the two-edged sword of slander, which wounds both accuser and accused, is immeasurably worse—worse, in some respects, than theft or murder. For it is the theft and murder of that which people of honor and spirit prize far more highly than money, or even life itself. In the category of crime there are few acts to compare, in baseness or malice, with deliberate, cold-blooded calumny. The Founder of Christianity was exceptionally lenient with most classes of sinners, but the slanderer formed an exception to the general rule. In fact, almost the only instances of His indulgence in bitter invective are his references to the li-belous Pharisees, who were constantly misrepresenting Himself and His work.

Perhaps one of the strongest chapters in all literature is St. James' indictment of the unbridled tongue. The writer evidently felt deeper on the subject and knew from experience the truth of the words he penned: "Behold how small a fire kindleth a great wood! And the tongue is a fire—a world of iniquity * * * being set on fire by hell." Man has succeeded in taming all sorts of beasts and birds, but there is one little force which still remains untamed and unsubdued—the venomous tongue, a resistless evil, full of deadly poison. In the matter of libel, as in most other things, destruction is easier than construction. It is easier to pull down and destroy a reputation than it is to build it up again. And yet build it up again the destroyer must, if he would square himself with justice. There is no alternative. No amount of money will compensate for the loss of one's good name. Nothing short of complete vindication will suffice to right the wrong and clear the defamer in the High Court of Justice.

Cotton.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued a pamphlet containing an address by Dr. Seaman A. Knapp on the present outlook for cotton production in boll-weevil territory, and as this pest will in all likelihood invade this territory in the years to come, we give some extracts below for the information of our farmers. He states that if it were not for the boll-weevil he believes we would be making 20,000,000 bales of cotton annually. He says: "Look for a moment at the increasing demand for cotton. If you will notice carefully you will observe that it has doubled once in about 22 years. We may estimate 18,000,000 as a minimum supply in this part of the United States for the world's clothing at the present time, then turn back twenty-two years and we shall find that a little over 6,000,000 bales were sufficient; and twenty-two years prior to that 3,000,000 bales filled the demand; and twenty-two years before that 1,500,000 bales met the exigencies of the trade. If we pursue the same line for the future in 1932 it will require 26,000,000 bales and in 1854 it will be necessary for us to produce 52,000,000 bales of cotton to meet the demands of commerce.

"Seventy per cent of the cotton of the world is produced in the cotton states of the United States. The two great necessities of the world of products of the soil are food and clothing. It is seldom in human history, if even before, that one nation has a monopoly of either of these great interests.

"The planter is entitled to a just compensation for the production of cotton, but if the price is forced to a point above what the world can afford to pay for its clothing it will remain on the hands of the planter. If it were not for the boll-weevil I believe we should now be making 20,000,000 bales of cotton annually. Not that the boll-weevil reduces the crop so much, but it does so reduce among planters the confidence that a crop can be made that fewer acres are planted." He then goes on to argue that the boll-weevil will in the future be a prominent factor in cotton production.

Woman's Age

often does not agree with her appearance. Pain and suffering add to the years till many women look much older than they really are.

Many women, availing pain by the regular use of that effective remedy, for women, Wine of Cardui, keep their youth and beauty.

Take CARDUI

Mrs. Annie Vaughan, Raleigh, N. C., tried Cardui and writes:

"I was sick and worn out almost unto death. My sister finally persuaded me to take Cardui. Before I had taken five bottles I was well and strong."

Try Cardui. It is for women. Its tonic, building qualities should restore you gently to health. Thousands of women have found it to give them lasting benefit.

Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to cure a great many women who have found a refuge for modesty in his offer of FREE consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores and regulates womanly functions, abolishes pain and builds up and puts the finishing touch of health on every weak woman who gives it a fair trial.
