PASSOVER—THE FEAST OF FREEDOM

Passover, the Jewish religious "Independence Day," will be observed this year beginning on Wednesday evening, April 20. As biblically prescribed the festival is observed for one week.

The festival celebrates the deliverance of the Jews from Egyptian bondage. With Moses as their leader they experienced a miraculous leave-taking about twelve centuries before the common era. The narrative of the Exodus together with the ceremonial laws attendant are given in great detail in the second book of the Bible.

In addition to the eating of unleavened bread, called matzo, the festival is characterized and ushered in by the joyous ceremony of the Seder. Here the youngest member of the family asks four simple questions about Passover, and in response the father recounts the narrative of the Exodus. Songs are sung, and there is much joy and thanksgiving.

The keynote of the holiday is freedom. Not only is physical freedom essential, but spiritual and religious freedom are stressed. Tyranny in whatever form must be eradicated, and he who shares a belief in the Divine can never be partner to servitude or oppression.

In our own day the significance of the Passover message is doubly meaningful. While men have turned from outright slavery there is still economic oppression and the denial of freedom and liberty of body and conscience. Thus is the age-old message of Passover as full of portent today as it has been through the ages.
