Bethune Community Fair October 21st

The Community Fair at Bethune this year will be somewhat varied from the one of last year. With the adverse crop season it may seem that the fair would be generally poorer than the one of the past season, but Bethune is looking for the best fair they have had in years. The one given last year has taught those in charge a great deal in regard to the things that go to make success. The fair will miss the president of last year, Mr. A. B. McLaurin, who passed away suddenly last spring.

The gathering this year will be of one day's duration only, last year it having lasted for two days, Friday and Saturday. There will also be a change in the system of arranging and judging the exhibits. All articles will be in place and ready for judging on Thursday afternoon at four o'clock. Judging will begin promptly at four so as to be completed Thursday night with the exception of the livestock which will be in place early Friday morning so as to have judging completed before the gates are opened. All entries will remain in place until late Friday night or Saturday morning when they may be removed.

There has been some change in the personnel of the Fair. The following is a list of Departments and Chairmen thereof:

HOG SHIPMENT

It is desired to get up about 200 hogs and ship them in a double deck car in order to bring down the freight cost per hog as a double deck car goes at lower rate than hogs in a single deck.

Everyone who expects to have hogs for shipment about the first week in November will please notify the County Agent in advance.

If possible these hogs should weigh between 160 to 220 lbs. as this is usually the weight desired for the very top prices. However, lighter and heavier hogs may be shipped at a slight decrease from top prices.

Respectfully,
HENRY D. GREEN, Co. Agent

SOUTH CAROLINA STATE FAIR OCTOBER 17-22

Columbia, S. C., September 26.—Though it doesn't seem like a year since the turnstiles at the State Fair Grounds ceased to click on the 1931 Show, it has been almost that long, and less than a month from this week the State Fair of 1932 will be in full blast. The dates are October 17-22.

Despite the so-called depression, the State Fair Society has gone right ahead with the Fair in a big way, feeling, Paul V. Moore, Secretary said, that the people need the Fair more in times like these perhaps than when everything is rosy.

The State Fair is the great cross road of South Carolina—the annual meeting place for many thousand people—and the whole plan is to make the week gay and more worth while than ever before. The amusements are tip-top, the exhibits are the finest the fair has ever offered. There will be a great out-door Musical Saw, something like the one that made such a big hit last year. The finest Poultry, Pigeon and Rabbit Exhibition in the South. And, of course, the big Carolina-Clemson race with all its frills and thrills. In addition a first class high school game will be held on School Day, which is Friday.

So Mr. Moore says for all South Carolinians to write down in their memory books the dates of the State Fair and prepare to meet their friends there next month.

CAMDEN WINS FIRST GAME OF SEASON

SOUTH CAROLINA PRODUCTS EXPOSITION AT CHARLESTON

Charleston, Sept. 27.—South Carolinians will turn their eyes toward the vast resources of their state when more than fifty manufacturers of a varied assortment of goods display their wares at the South Carolina Products Exposition here October 3 to 8.

Gathered from the Piedmont to the sea, articles of an amazing variety, expected to be a revelation to residents of the state and others from afar who have been accustomed to view South Carolina as an agricultural community exclusively, will be shown at the Fort Sumter hotel. As an added attraction there will be entertainment features during South Carolina Products Week, such as band concerts on the Battery, overlooking the sea; nightly fashion reviews in which lovely society girls will serve as models, and aquatic sports in Charleston's historic bay.

The exposition is sponsored by The News and Courier to prove to South Carolinians the extent to which they can be self supporting and to foster a "Buy South Carolina Products" movement.

Three railroads serving Charleston—the Southern Railway, Atlantic Coast Line, and Seaboard Air Line—will offer special rates to and from Charleston from October 2 to 10. This rate will give a round-trip ticket for a one-way fare plus twenty-five cents, and applies throughout South Carolina and in Augusta and Savannah, Ga.

Hotels in Charleston also will offer special rates to visitors during the exposition.

The city of Charleston is backing the exposition, as are Charleston organizations and civic bodies throughout the state. Chambers of commerce of cities and towns all over South Carolina are cooperating to make it a success.

Visitors will see an array of manufactured goods including such an assortment as fine printed cloth, hosiery, shirts, handkerchiefs, towels, women's dresses, wall cleaning materials, statuary, canned fruit and vegetables, cheese, butter, toys window shades, draperies, bed spreads, mattresses, paints and varnishes, asbestos products, cigars, bagging for wrapping cotton, novelty and bedroom furniture, chairs and numerous other articles.

Manufacturers are arranging attractive booths and exhibits of their products. The Fort Sumter hotel, where the exposition will take place directly faces Charleston harbor, overlooking the Battery, and Fort Sumter, where the War Between the States began.
