

You know the dead-house at Charity hospital... I had had a case of aneurism that pushed all of us, and being a young man...

MIDNIGHT IN A DEAD-HOUSE

We were sitting alone in the twilight leisurely puffing at our cigars when one of the hospital nurses came out and whispered to the doctor that Sailor John was "again."

An awkward plethoric beetle buzzed around the gas-jet in an irregular orbit... The doctor lifted the sheet and felt the pulse of the patient.

These were a rattle in the throat, a long-drawn sigh, as if all the sorrows of a lifetime were relieved as it died away... Then there was a twitching of the muscles around the mouth.

"It is a little difficult for me to tell exactly what were my feelings. That they were peculiar I frankly admit. I fell to studying about the cause of this motion on the part of the skull, and examined closely to see whether or not there was a string attached and a stud at playing one of his prizes."

"I laid down my pipe, still keeping my eyes on the unpleasant object and tried to laugh away the morbid sentiments that had now begun to rise within me. I whispered to myself how much I would have railed at any brother physician should he have told me of experiencing the slightest feeling of nervousness under similar circumstances."

"That's a fact; I don't believe I ever told you my experience in the dead-house of the hospital after Sailor John's death. I never cared about saying anything regarding it, for I have to confess it, for the first time in my life I was a little weak."

"I shall see him again—the willfully blind... I shall see him again—the willfully blind... I shall see him again—the willfully blind..."

"I shall see him again—the willfully blind... I shall see him again—the willfully blind... I shall see him again—the willfully blind..."

"I shall see him again—the willfully blind... I shall see him again—the willfully blind... I shall see him again—the willfully blind..."
