Recently the tomb of Elward III, in Westminster Abbey, was opened, and the body of 'Longshanks,' as he was called, was found in a remarkably good state of preservation. The flesh of the face had turned to a yellow powder, but the part in the bair was still there and the shape and the form of the body remained intact. Around the hend was a narrow silver band, on which was engraved his name. The remains were placed in the tomb 600 years ago.

It is generally believed that orators control republics, but the men who have had the longest tenure of power in this country were not speakers at all.
