You have no right to the title of Christian, no matter who gave you your ordination to the church. I repeat, you have no right to the title until you are rooted and grounded and filled with the spirit of Christ. Are you following Jesus Christ?

When I was a Gypsy boy, my father sent me along with the other nomad lads and girls of the tribe to peddle willow brushes, cane chairs and notions, the handiwork of the tribe. In those early days of my life there was one game we Gypsy children never tired of playing, and it was "Follow your leader." God isn't a monster. He doesn't ask men to do the impossible, but He does ask that they make an honest attempt, and if you do not make an honest attempt, either in business, socially or privately, then you are not playing the game.

The trouble with the churches, the trouble with the town, is the fact that so many people never darken the hurch doors. It is not true that they hate the church. Often these people that are not churchgoers are the first to write a check to help the church. But what they are sick of is the kind of religion some of you Christians have. The thing that they hate in the hypocrisy of those calling themselves Christians. These selfstyled Christians do more to damn the program of the church than any luence. The greatest foes of the church are those of our own
