MAJORITY IN HOUSE GREATLY REDUCED; CLOSEST RACE SINCE WAR DAYS OF 1916

New York, Nov. 9. (By the Associated Press.)—Continued Republican control of congress but with the senate majority cut in half and the house majority slashed to a scant handful appeared today as a net result of the general election. Belated returns from Montana this morning sent the Republicans over the top in the house contest. Many contests are so tight that numerous recounts are certain to be asked.

San Francisco, Nov. 9.—Late returns from the far western states show the results of the vote of several important offices still in doubt. Chief interest is in the close contest for senator in Washington between Pendered, Republican, and Dill, Democrat. Dill was reported 5,000 ahead this morning.

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 9.—With supporters of Frazier recalled no partisan league governor claiming he will be elected senator by 15,000 majority. O'Connor, Democratic opponent, had a lead of 7,000 this morning. O'Connor's lead was cut from 15,000.

Detroit, Nov. 9.—The Democratic success in the Michigan election appears more pronounced today on the belated returns which show in addition to electing a senator, congressman and five state legislators that the party gained ground in many state contests. In many instances the party elected county officers for the first time in the history of the state.

St. Louis, Nov. 9.—Democrats of Missouri scored a sweeping victory in electing in addition to Senator Reed 11 to 16 congressmen, a gain of nine state school superintendents, all three judges of the state supreme court, twelve of the seventeen state senators and a larger majority of 150 legislators.

Oklahoma City, Nov. 9 (By the Associated Press)—Oklahoma will send seven Democrats and one Republican to congress. It is indicated in the nearly complete returns. Democrats wrested four congressional seats from the Republicans and re-elected three of their own congressmen.

Washington, Nov. 8 (By the Associated Press).—The country today watched with intense interest the nip and tuck race for control of the house of representatives, the closest since the war days of 1916. It saw most of the Republican leaders stand up against the onslaught; it saw scores of men brought in by the Republican wave two years ago go out with the Democratic undertow.

Volstead, author of the prohibition enforcement law, was the only Republican committee chairman to go down, but fell before an independent minister candidate, self proclaimed drier than Volstead himself. This fact often was overlooked by those who professed to see in the defeat of Volstead a punishment for the dry law.

While they had been expected to take a big hand in the election the women of the country were unable to elect one of their number in the helter-skelter race for senate. There will be no woman in the next congress. Alice Robertson of Oklahoma will go out then along with Winnifred Mason Huck of Illinois, elected yesterday to fill the term of her father, the late William E. Mason, expiring next March.

Mondell, for the last four years the Republican leader in the house, aspiring for a seat in the senate from Wyoming, went down in a vain race for the senate and a new leader will arise in his place. Speaker Gillett and Mann and Madden—all the big committee chairmen in fact, save Volstead, held their seats. Most of them never were in danger.

Every Republican leader of the house has often declared during the last two years that the majority—around 170 at the start—was too big, but none seemed to fear that it would be cut below 40. But starting in the East, the Democratic wave began picking up seats, gathered 23 in New York and then raced down the Atlantic coast, cutting across into Virginia and then turned to the Southwest, and doubling backed into Pennsylvania swept over into the Middle West country and towards the Far West in the hope of finding enough upturns to keep ahead of the Republican column coming along behind.

It was nearly noon today before the Republicans, racing for hours behind early Democratic victors, got abreast of the enemy. Then for some hours the two parties saw-sawed and the Republicans pulled to the front. Only the vast majority of two years ago saved them. The drift away from the administration was greater than they would have believed possible ten days ago.

News went by without bringing advantage to Republicans or Democrats. Among the last of the old timers to go was McArthur of Oregon, enmeshed in a local situation in which the Ku Klux Klan was said to have played a big hand against him. Stafford of Wisconsin, right hand man to Mann of Illinois, the free lance of the house, was bowled over by Victor Berger, the twice unseated Socialist, who came back to take his old seat. He will be the lone representative of the Socialists, as Meyer London of New York was overcomen by a Democrat.

Some of the big committees counted heavy losses among their members, as one after another Republican sitting members fell out of the fight.

Predictions were freely made a week ago by Republican and Democrat leaders alike that no woman would sit in the Sixty-eighth congress. Republicans admitted privately that Miss Robertson would be beaten, and there was no Democrat ready to predict the election of a woman on his side. The prediction was accurate so far as the next congress is concerned.

Only in Iowa were the Republicans able to send back a solid delegation. In other states delegations were shot to pieces, both Indiana and Ohio, solid, heretofore, breaking up. New Jersey and Maryland, each gave a 50-50 break to the Democrats, but it was the big New York overturn that cheered the minority. The old district of William McKinley in Ohio was captured by a Democrat. Champ Clark's district, taken from him two years ago, just before his death, drifted back to the Democrats. Uncle Joe Cannon's district, from which he retired, remained Republican.

Cordell Hull of Tennessee, author of the income tax law and now chairman of the Democratic national committee, was among the Democrats who came back. Henry T. Rainey, Illinois, another Democrat high in party council, was returned after being out two years; and many others, who were not there two years ago, were returned.

The Nursery

The committee in charge of the Nursery wishes to say that Mrs. E. M. Eates will have charge of the Nursery and will call for volunteers, if necessary. The mothers are urged to leave their little ones in the Nursery and attend the services at the Gipsy Smith tabernacle. This is a great opportunity and the committee has gone to a deal of trouble to fit out the rooms comfortably.

DEATH CLAIMS NATHANIEL SHIVAR

Nathaniel Frank Shivar, well known as the founder and head of the Shivar Springs company of Shelton, Fairfield county, died yesterday morning about 9:30 o'clock at the Columbia hospital, where he had been ill since Sunday.

Mr. Shivar suffered from an attack of influenza and bronchitis two years ago and never seemed to recover his entire strength. An attack of kidney trouble last Sunday brought him to Columbia for treatment. His death brings real grief to large numbers of people throughout the South, who knew and admired Mr. Shivar during his life of usefulness.

Mr. Shivar was 58 years of age. He was the founder of the Shivar Springs company. He was formerly a traveling shoe salesman. He was also proprietor of the Star Shoe store situated in what was known as the Postoffice block of Columbia 20 years ago. He later sold out this business and moved to Spartanburg, where he opened another large shoe store.

Mr. Shivar suffered ill health in his younger days and was advised to try the Shivar Springs water. He gave up traveling and went to Shelton to drink the water and regain his health. So impressed was Mr. Shivar with the health giving value of this water that he developed a plant and began to market the water. He developed a business in water and also a bottling establishment, which became known throughout the entire South and other parts of the country. The products of this establishment were shipped to all parts of the United States and the news of the death of the originator of this business will be learned with sorrow throughout the entire country.

Mr. Shivar is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ida S. Shivar, and one adopted daughter, Miss Eva Grace Sharpe, both of whom were at his bedside when he died.

The funeral service will be held at Shelton this afternoon at 2 o'clock. The Rev. W. T. Derieux, D. D., and the Rev. A. J. Foster, both of Columbia, and the Rev. C. W. Salter, pastor of the Shelton Baptist church, of which Mr. Shivar was a member, will conduct the service. Interment will be in the family burial ground at Shelton.

Favors United Front by Allies

Rome, Nov. 9 (By the Associated Press).—Mussolini telegraphed the Italian high commissioner at Constantinople stating that he favored the united front by the Allies regarding Turkey and declared that Turkey had beaten Greece but could not claim to have defeated the entente. The Italian warship was ordered by the premier to remain in Constantinople.

Must Not Delay Conference

Paris, Nov. 9 (By the Associated Press).—Ismet Passa, the Turkish Nationalist foreign minister, informed the Allies that any delay in holding the Lausanne peace conference would be interpreted by the Angora assembly of the Kemalist army as a sign of hostility against the Turks and an indication that the Allies did not intend to live up to the conditions of the Mudania armistice.

Precincts of Scotland Yard Raided by Thieves

London, Nov. 8.—Scotland Yard, the world's most famous sleuth center, has been the victim of burglars. The thieves entered the lost property office of the bureau one night recently and stole a number of unclaimed umbrellas and overcoats.

Entry to the offices, which is on the top floor of the low building, was made through the skylight and the thieves escaped by jumping through a window on to the roof of an adjoining building.

REED OF MISSOURI "WITHOUT PARTY"

St. Louis, Nov. 8 (By the Associated Press).—United States Senator James A. Reed, who was re-elected for his third term in Missouri in a Democratic victory in Missouri yesterday after having been repudiated by his party two years ago, is "a man without a party," according to a letter from former President Woodrow Wilson which was made public here today.

The letter dated October 27, ten days before the election, was addressed to former Governor Lon V. Stephens and stated that if Reed should be elected he would be in the senate "repudiated by Democrats and elected above their own party by Republican votes."

The letter was not made public during the campaign and served as a reply to one to the former president by Mr. Stephens in his capacity as former president that "as a result of the primary showed clearly that a large majority of Democrats of Missouri are with you, in your policies and favor the league of nations."

It was written with the thought of informing President Wilson of the outcome of the primary.

Mr. Wilson's letter: "My Dear Governor Stephens: I am sincerely obliged to you for your letter of October 27. I know how entirely competent you are to assess the true situation in Missouri and I value accordingly the carefully considered information conveyed in your letter."

"I do not think I ought to attempt any advice as to the election. I am too far away from what I may call the interior conditions of the situation. I feel, besides, that leaders like yourself can be confidently counted upon to guide the loyal Democrats of Missouri to the right course of action."

"If Reed is returned to the senate he will, of course, be elected a man without a party, repudiated by Democrats and elected above their own party by Republican votes. I think that the usual opinion of the senate would be to elect him a man without a party."

GOOD SERMON LAST EVENING

Last night the services at the Gipsy Smith tabernacle exceeded all others in point of attendance, interest and great preaching. There were fully 5,500 people seated or standing around the big building and many turned away when they saw the throng standing outside the doors. Everything possible is being done to seat the vast crowds and to take care of the visitors who drive many miles each night to hear the world famed evangelist.

The director, Charles S. Allen, led the choir of more than 200 voices, and the congregational singing was inspirational, the boys and girls singing with vim when called upon.

The preacher was at his best last evening and drives his message home to his hearers.

Mr. Smith read the lesson from the fifth chapter of Luke, the story of the crowding of a boat by the Master from the Galilean fishermen, Simon and his partners, and the following miraculous draft of fishes, so great that the "net brake" and the boat and another called to its assistance began to sink with the mass of the catch. From the words, "Launch out into the deep," as a text, the preacher launched into the heart of a message of earnest urging to the church people. The substance, with no attempt to repeat verbatim the sermon, is in resume as follows:

"The inference in the words of the text is that we may be in the shallows. There are three indications now of this fact: The talk of the religious people; the frequent style of our preaching; and the condition of our prayer-life. In the old time we used around the table and in the sitting room in the home talk of God and of righteousness and things of the spirit; how many now in their homes commonly practice this sort of a talk? In our parlors and about the table, in social meetings and quiet conversation we do not, we religious folk, speak of the things of the kingdom. If religion is mentioned in the social group there is a hush if you mention the Master and ask your friends about their relation with Jesus, there is embarrassment and uneasiness."

"The preacher told of a visitor to his room who had talked an hour interestingly and brilliantly about things in general and who halted and stammered when the question was personally put, 'Are you a Christian?' 'I hope so,' replied the visitor. 'Pray for me that I may be faithful.' Mr. Smith said he took from the mantel a picture of a woman and three children and showed it to the visitor. 'A family group?' he asked. 'Yes,' replied the preacher. 'Are you married?' asked the visitor. 'I think I am, I—hope so! Won't you pray for me that I may be faithful,' the preacher had responded—to illustrate the fact that one should have no doubt about his relationship to Jesus. 'We don't have to think so and hope so,' said the preacher with all earnestness. 'Thank God we can know we are children of God. We ought to be able to say so. We know insurance and merchandise and law and medicine—and we can talk about those things; we should be able to know Christ and talk of the things of His Kingdom one to another.'"

"Another evidence that we are in the shallows is much of our preaching. It is sometimes more like a magazine than the flaming message of an ambassador for Christ. Still another evidence is the low-state of the prayer-life of professed Christians. We do not pray in secret; we do not attend the prayer meetings. We can get crowds to the motion picture entertainment, to the social gathering, to the lecture, but when we call on our people, our church people, our Christians to meet for prayer—few respond. We shall never move the world until we launch out into the deep and are filled with the spirit of God."

"The first thing that Jesus always does when He is going to take men and women into a new life, a deeper life, is to reveal to them the possibilities which slumber in their own nature. Of course, in every man or woman there is unfolded, as a bud, the whole possibility of saintliness and power with God and man. It is unfolded in your nature, and your great aim should be to discover what God has put in you by regeneration. I believe in regeneration. I have no sympathy with this modern teaching that everybody begins with God in Him and they have just to develop a God which is born in them. I believe in regeneration as the impartation of the very life of God in the soul, and when the life is imparted it contains within it the germ of eternal bliss. But you want to know the possibility hidden in your soul. You are a partaker of the divine nature, but you want to know the contents of the possibility."

Graphically the preacher pictured the great revival meeting in the Judean country—led by John the Baptist.

Washington, Nov. 8.—The nationwide Democratic landslide eliminates Warren G. Harding as a possibility for the Republican nomination in 1924, according to statements by politicians of both parties in Washington today.

The West is in open revolt against the variety of Republicanism represented by the administration and the East intolerant of Progressives is simply Democratic. This is the conclusion of those who are endeavoring tonight to analyze a situation without precedent in the history of the country.

The president's best friends, Frelinghuysen in New Jersey, Kellogg in Minnesota, Townsend in Michigan, New in Indiana and Mondell of Wyoming have been eliminated and the leader of the Republicans in the senate, Lodge, has managed to hold his own, despite his distinguished service, by a margin of 8,000 or 10,000 votes.

The defeat of Pomerene in Ohio, if indications are verified, has proved of little comfort to the president, for Ohio elected a Democrat governor and filled its house delegation with an abnormal Democratic quota.

The single fly in the Democratic ointment is the defeat of Hitchcock in Nebraska. That reversal is attributed to German voters unable to forget Hitchcock's fight for the secure fo nations in 1920.

It is understood that the president has thoroughly digested the situation and that he will offer no objection if another is selected to run before the people two years hence. With the Old Guard swept from the map, the Progressives will take charge of the Republican camp, it is indicated, and already Borah's prediction of a third party is given close attention. Some observers cite a radical ascendency in Republican circles and express fear lest Henry Ford, running as an independent, smash all Grand Old Party hopes two years hence.

With the defeat of Pomerene, on whom Democrats were understood to be hopeful of centering in 1924, the situation is apparently chaotic. Reed of Missouri, having won two fights against the opposition of Woodrow Wilson, will unquestionably attempt to control the party, it is said, but the fact that followers of Wilson would never accept his leadership eliminates him as a presidential possibility, according to indications. There is likewise gossip that Democrats can not join enthusiastically in a crusade having for its object the elevation of former Richmond, either Cox of Ohio or McAdoo of California. At present, it is undeniably true that Governor Smith of New York, who swept that state from top to bottom, ex-Governor Ralston of Indiana, and Ferris of Michigan, who display dynamic power in normally Republican strongholds, are deeply impressing those anxious to elect a Democratic president of the United States.

Word comes to Washington that Progressive Republicans will organize the senate after March 4 and relegate to the discard Lodge of Massachusetts. This they can achieve without trouble, it is said.

With the retirement of Underwood of Alabama as minority leader, and the elimination of Pomerene, a struggle depends between Reed of Missouri and Pittman of Nevada-Harrison of Mississippi will probably not be available because of the disinclination to elect another Southern Democrat, especially on the eve of a presidential election. As both Reed and Pittman supported Underwood, the Alabamian's influence will probably be withheld, but the Wilson following, going to Pittman as against Reed, will result in his election, it is judged highly probable. Democrats in the house, even if they do not control, intend to sidle up to North Carolina, who on account of illness has been absent longer than a year, and elect Garrett of Tennessee leader. It is not believed that the national committeeman, Cordell Hull, reelected from Tennessee, will oppose his colleague.

Gillett will be reelected speaker, but without enthusiasm, it is said, although there promises to be a real battle against the ambition of Longworth, Alice Roosevelt's husband, to be leader of the majority.

House Party of College Girls

Miss Alice Arthur of Converse College will arrive tomorrow evening to spend the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Arthur, and bring as her guests the following college friends, Misses Elise Simpson, Sadie Wilson, Virginia Boozer and Elizabeth Dudley.
