From the Jacksonille Repablicai. Cuneral of General Gaincs.

companies, as well as the several staffs srving the highest praise for the alacrity h which they turned out, and their excel t which they thrned out, and their exzel thearing on the occeasion. he body was borne in front, on a splendid tha body was borne in front, on a splendid tabelige, prepared for the occasion, with obelisk, surmounted by a golden eagte ped in mourning. The car upon which it splaced was drawn by six black horses, placed was drawn by six black horses, ile a fine charger, suitably caparisoned, led in the rear. The procession marched the sound of appropriate funeral airs, finelinyod by the Crente Band.
He streets were tined by a ned out to witness the ceremonienes. The rch was filled to overflowing by ladies and atlemen. The body was conveyed into aisle and placed in front of the pulpit, The address of the Rev. Dr. Hamitton, was eloquent and appropriate tribute, to the eloquent and appropriate tribute, to the aracier and memory of the illnstrions deased. He detailed, in graphic style, th incipal incidents of his life, and did ful stice to his exalted virtues and services, After the discourse, the procession was rmed, and conveyed the body to the place sepulture, in the "Old Grave Yard." We d not winess these final ceremonies, and unnot therefore dsccribe them.
The whole of the proceedings testified the igh eacared fel for the memory of the illus ious deceased, by the ctlzensti Movie, , ic melancholy pride which they feel in hav ig melanchory pride which they feel in hav-Ig his honored remains deposited in our city. re long we shall expect of see $a$ suitable re long we shall expect to see a suitable znotaph, erected by ourcity, over the grave, point out the spot where lies one of the urest patriots, most gallant soldiers, and disnguished officers, our country has ever posThis distinguished soldier was the oldest fifer in the American army, and his career vas marked, throughour, by the most usefful nd brilliant services. His original commison, as ensign, bore date the 10 th of Janua$y, 1799$. A few years after, he was select d to make a topographical, sur he wilderness from Nashville or the location of a milite or the location of a military. T ious duty he performed to the sat $t$ was found that Spain refused to 18 nd obstructed the American trad zulf, he P 1 esident determined to nilitary collector of cetstoms for th of Stephen's," and selected St tephen's," and selected Lie or that office, to which soon after led the duties of Post master at lart, with a supervision as agent over the otthe post masters and mail contractors, and ca iers, in the extensive section of country rom New Orleans to Augusta, Georgia, th sreater portion of which was then a wilde ness. While in the discharge of these var ous and complicated duties, he was instr nental in the arrest of Col. Burr, on th Combecbee, and had him carried to Ric mond, Va., for trial Gen. Gaines had Captain; but begun to tire of the $d$ ployments of a peace establishment army, and, obtainıng permission from commanding General Wade Hanntinn ired rromn the service, and tu ned his a tion to the ion to the Law, a profession which be had tudied before entering the army. tered ppon the practice in the counties of Washington and Baldwin, in the then Mississippi Territory, with flattering auspices-but the declaration of war against Great Britain in 1812, called laurels. He was pattineculaly wist distinguished in the action of Chrystler's Field, ond he was severely (wounded by the burstingg of a shell. The important services by which he gained his high reputation for gallantry a soldiership form eonspicuous passages in military history. He received in rapid suc-rank authorized by law, and particularly complimentary from being conferred as war-brevel, expressly stating the fact that it was conferred on him "in conseqnence of his gai-lant and meritorious conduct in battle." The General Government awarded him a vote of thanks, with a gold medal, and the States of thanks, with a gold medal, and the States of New York, Virginia and Tennessee, each From this time, General Gaines devoted bimself to the military service of his country, aiding in perfecting the army, and erecting our national defences. He was always disninguished for his scientific knowledge as a settijer, and suggested inany valuable im-proovements and experiments. In the Florida war, he book a brief but active part, and way anxions to have stared in the dangers demands of the serviee required his presence General Gaines was alwnys passionately devoted to this couniry. He loved lier honor and prosperity above his own fife. To thy special qualities of a soldier, wwhich he possessed in the most chivalrous degree, he uld ed the attaintnents of the scholar, particnlarly in all branches appurtenant to his profession. His inany able reports and communieations o the Govermment, evinced his inrellectuallabilities, and the temper of his paThe . t , t , The death of this great man will be garded aa a national loss. Thongh he h gone full of years, at the alloted end of lif noblest lessons of patriotism, and patriotic service.
By the citizens of Mobile this national loss By the citizens of Mobile this national loss will be particularly regretted. As we have ill be particularly regretted. As we hav nes of this city. His first, marriage was ith a daughter ef Judge Harry To dog would neither appear to recognize presence, not would he touch the meat.
The toll house consisted of two rooms, $w$ as a bed roor entrance, and whicn was lighted by as ased window at the foot of the bed. The front had two wi ndows; a tolerably lage one near the door, and a small lattice, whose diamond shaped squares of glass were encased within thin plates of lead. To none of the winception of the one in the bed room.
At the usiual time, Mrs. Pollard retired to rest, but in vain endeavored to sleep; the dog still remaining in the same immoveable dogstion as when his master left himm. position the night was more chilly and dreary than The
any. The falling of snow had a heavy storm of cominingled , which the wind now blew agrinst tho casements with terrible force-almost nppearing as though it would raise the hoonse from its very foundation. Inseemfilting night for deeds of blod a fitting night for deeds of blood! Mrs. Poleach repitition of the keeng blast continued.
Stories of robbery and bloodshed increased, which she had heard years ago, now rushed through her mind with virid distinctness; and her imagination increased their enormity a thousand fold. She lay thus unable to sleep, iuntil as near thought slie heard the sound of a single foot step outside the house. She partly raised herself, and bending forward, listened for a continuance of the somd with enger intent ness. She soon heard the step ngain, and this time distinctly. They now nppeared to be quite near. She now listened for the dog's raising some alarm-but not the slightest movement did he seent to make. Her the animal's not taking notice of the noise outside. Another nioment, and she heard a sonnd as of some one removing the glass out mediately followed by the sharp click of the handle, which fastened it on the inside, turning round. Still the dog gave no sound or indication of what was going indication of what was going on.
Mrs. Pollard was now almost frantic with excess of fear, feeling assured that she must excess of foar, feeling assured that she must indowheodly in $n$ few minutes be murdered.

ed free-

Mrom the National 1atelliggncer.
Miss Maria Edgeworth.
The last steam-packet from Liverpol brought us the news of Miss EdGEworn's death. She died on the 21st of May, at her death. She died on the 21st of May, at her residence in Edgeworthstown, county of Longford, Ireland, above eighty-two years old. mitted to do so mithh to bless and to benefit mankint; fewer otill to poroovero in the abors to the end, and live so long to witness hee good they had done. In every quarter of the world-and here in more than in other countries beyond the limits of the British Empire-the hearts of many will be saddened by the intelligence as with a sense of personal loss. To many of us she the friend of our childhood, who took us gently by the hand, and led us in the paths where those who most loved us wished go. To many of ns, in our riper years, she has lightened the hieavy hours of solitvde or of sorrow of sorrow. To all who have listened to her she has been a safe counsellor, speaking in lones of cheerful encouragement, and urging us to whatever is honorable and good, by precepts of winning wisdom, and by fictions so faithful to life that they seem to have the force of living example. To all indeed, whe have thus known her-anu whu com, conm hereavement.
But all who But all who have loved or admired her was serene and bappy; ; that she enjoyed to the last not only extraordinary powers, but all the pleasures of life she had powers, valued -and that she died on the spot which was a ways her home, starrounded by those whom he entirely loved and trusted, and followed by the blessings of her suffering countrymen, or whose relief she made her latest literary the banquet of life, where I had been a happy guest. I confidently relied upon the goodness of Creator." goodness of Creator." And again, a few weeks since, she wrote : "Our pleasures in literature do not, I think, decrease with age Last first of January was my eighty-sceond birthday, and I think that from books I had best and gentlest in her own nature and in the hearts of all whom she could reach, either by her modest pers by her modest personal example, manifold influences of her genus.

A Singular Physiological Fact

 The transference of vitality which appeato take place when young persons are bitually placed in contact wwith the aged, very competent, anthorities. "A n not common cause," obseryes Dr. young sloeping with the aged. This fact, however explained, has been long remarked, and is well known to and is welt known to every nnprejudiced op server. Ihave on several occasions met wi the connterpart of the following case: " was, a few years ago, consulted about a pal sick ly, and thin boy, of about four or fi years of age. He appeared to years of age. He appeared to have no specific ailment, but there was a slow and remarkable decline of fleeh and strengh rid of the energy of the functions; what his nother very aptly termed a gradual blight.
After inquiry into the history of the case it came out that he had been a very robust and plethoric child, up to his third year, when his grandmother, a very good person, took his grandmother, a very good person, took him to sleep with her ; that he soon afterward lost his good looks ; and that he coninned to decline progressively withstanding medical treatme. him to stcepapast from the age wescribed gentle tonics, chan similar manner, althongh seldom to so great an extent; and instances have come to my knowledge where they have suspected the cause of this debilitated state. Thesped facts are often well known to the aged themsflyes, who consider the indnlgence favorable to longevity, and thereby illustrate the selfishness, years,", in some persons, increase with their Evare of the medical practitioner is well nwact, and parents are generally aware of the fact, and parents are generally advised not to allow their infants to sleep face of the surrounding scene to look more wild and lonely dhan ever. As Mrs. Pollard sat in the small front apartment of the house, er fears gradually increased more and monote, in her imagination conjured up a thousand is her imagination conjured up a thousand Iread forboodinge, and antiost fancied that each ley, was some bone when now about the val-

$$
\begin{aligned} & \text { po } \\ & \text { ro } \\ & \text { re } \\ & \hline \end{aligned}
$$

 pain and anguish; and the deep mouthed baying of the dog. At length the struggle ceased, and anl became still as death.
When digl When daylight appeared, Mrs. Pollard ose and dressed with as much speed as the Weakness and terror of the night had occasioned would permit. She then sat down by he window, to awit, The window, to await the apparance of the first person who might pass, for she conld not strmmon sufficient courage to enter the othet snmmon sufficient courage to enter the othet room alone. In a short time a teamster approached, whom she hailed; and ts soon ns $\qquad$ a rough countenance by no means preposses sing. He resided in a house some five or six miles, and which was at least that distance from any dher. He had ocenppied it for years, followed his present business, and disposed of his meat by taking it it in his wo posed of his meat by taking it it in his wagon to the differnt families in the vicinity. Mrs.
Pollard had been unacquainted with him unPollard had been unacquainted with him until the time of her marriage; but the familliarity arisifg from weekly visit to her house, and the cddiality with which liarity arisigg from weekly visit to her house, and the eqdiatity with which her husband invariably received him, now inspired her with more onfidence towards him, than from his looks ste woold otherwise have done.
'I Pollard as he butcher entered her dwelling.
'Johnt tras fotivesee his facher, wlin is not expected to tive, and will not return until tomor力pw; and I am nearly frightened to death for ve have got more than a hundred sover eigys in the got nouse, and in a hany of theso reb-bers were to come, they would murder me. bers were to come, they would murder me.
Wopt you stay and keep me company until Joh comes back?
Ilaring the first part of this address, GodIuring the first part of this address, God-res did not appear to listen with mach ap-par ont interest; ; but the monent Mrs. Pol. art mentioned the money, his face assumed an expression of singular import, and his gref eyes fashed quick glances from benenth his pert and shaggy brows, as though some. his pert and shaggy brows, as though something had suddenly moved him. I am sorry,' he replied-and speaking in a low delib|  |  |

| :--- | :--- |

 ness and intelligence of usted. The faithful he instrument of punishment on his master for the enormity of hiig crime he had intend ed to commit. and teamster dressed the weynds of Dash, and then pusgued his journey. Mrs. Pollard now feel uny furWuin twany thanks, Mis. Pollard accepted his offer; for she had often heard her husband Das her kept by them with ns much care as tho nmount of money which might have been to part with him.
Fame hans no necessary conjunction with praise; it may exist without the breath of a

CAMPBELL & SEAY.
 PA TENTMED ICINES,

NORTHAMERICHNFARMER,
 Hifile eninily:

Sketches, Jokes,
Whittlings,'
ps, Nexs Itens, vavazu

FULLER INSTITUTE
TEEENWOD, ABEVILLE DITTT. S. C.

DR. CULLEN's

Min

