COLUMBIA TELESCOPE,
AND SOUTH-CAROLINA STATE JOURNAL.

VOL. [illegible] COLUMBIA, (S. C.) TUESDAY MORNING, MARCH 7, 1826. [NO. 10.

COLUMBIA TELESCOPE
BY BLACK & SWEENY,
Printers to the Honorable the Legislature of South-Carolina.

TERMS.—Three Dollars per annum, payable in advance, or Four Dollars payable at the end of the year.

Advertisements are inserted at the rate of seventy-five cents for every twenty lines, or a less number, for the first insertion, and forty cents for each continuance.—Those from non-subscribers must be accompanied by the cash, or a responsible reference, or they will receive no attention.

FOR THE COLUMBIA TELESCOPE.

I hate all pomp and pageantry and show,
And fame and honor, purchased by base wealth,
Perish such sordid glory! all I ask below,—
Oh! grant them heaven! is competence and health.

Or should it please a gracious power above,
To bless my humble heart and comfort life—
Oh! let me know the duties of mutual love,
And give beside a faithful friend and wife.

With these to solace woe's unhappy hours,
And chase the fear, which sorrow bids me shed,
To sooth my pain—to cheer when fortune lowers,
And smooth the pillow 'neath my dying head;

Whom would I envy! not the proud and great,
Who roll in luxury and who bask in fame;
Who die in wretchedness—to live in state,
And barter bliss—to gain an empty name!

Oh no; content with these I'd pass my time,
And bless my lot whilst clambering life's steep,
'Till tir'd of earth—and yet unstained with crime,
I'd yield my breath—and calmly sink in sleep.

ALBERT.

[SELECTED.]

THE SAILOR BOY'S DREAM.

'Twas midnight—the billows were lulled into rest,
The bright beaming stars shed their light o'er the deep;
When watch worn and weary, with sorrow oppress,
I sank in the soft soothing visions of sleep.

Methought that I trod on my own native plain,
Where in childhood's joy'd gambols I often had strayed,
The highland re-echoed the voice of each swain,
And my path with sweet wild flowers was richly arrayed.

Each scene was to memory still faithful and true,
The streamlet still murmured along the green vale,
The nightingale drank of the light falling dew,
Then repeated its heart thrilling music again.

I dreamt that our cottage yet stood on the moor,
The moon shed her radiance around the dark trees,
I softly approached, raised the latch of the door,
And with eagerness gazed on the friends that I lov'd.

My parents beat o'er me with joyful surprise,
My sister Ellen hailed me once more to my home,
While friendship beam'd forth in their soul-speaking eyes,
They cried from this circle no more shalt thou roam.

But dearer than all were the transports that past,
Then my bosom was wet with my Mary's warm tear,
When in silent affection the wanderer she clasped,
And sighing breathed softly, 'tis Alfred my dear.

But the thunder's loud peal broke the vision, it fled,
The white curling billow foamed high on the deck;
The blue lightning gleam'd thro' the shrouds o'er my head,
And the wild waves and wind drove our vessel a wreck.

O fancy, O fancy, why lead the fond heart,
To revel in bliss and drink deep of delight,
Then swift as the dark flying whirlwind departs,
And leave it enshrouded in horror and night.

From the Barnstable Gazette.

PRINTING OFFICE.

A place of this description, like the busy world in which it is situated, is a scene of toil, embarrassment, joy, distress, instruction and amusement. Sometimes the gilded coronet of hope dances before one eyes; at others, the grim visage of disappointment peers at us from behind the dark curtain of adversity. If occupation adds any quills to the wings of old father time, truly he gallops with the inmates of a Printing Office, and like the wicked they "do not live out half their days." This is a place most peculiarly liable to accidents, some of which are of a perplexing, others of a laughable nature. The types which are set up and placed upon what are termed galleys, have every appearance of solidity; yet in fact they are as tender as our consciences. The slightest touch will disarrange their order, and the temper of the Printer's Devil, the starting of one type will have an effect upon its neighbor, and set the whole of our p's and q's together by the ears. One of the worst enemies we have to fear, is a clonk; it marches in, conscious of its importance, and with a sweep of majesty,

"Lays loose the siege of war."

One whisk of this garment, this day sent Rufus King under the table instead of to England, and exposed a gentleman and lady whose marriage had just been put in type. At another time more serious consequences have arisen: a murder has been put on our floor, and brother Barkingham sent neck and heels into a corner—even our friend Jenks with the whole Island of Nantucket, were upset in a galley. But next to a clonk, we dread a gentleman orator; though we certainly are men of letters, yet deliver us from all general declamations—no eloquent flourish of an orator's fist, knocks the President of the United States and our Probate Court to pieces, and at the conclusion of the argument, we found that he had destroyed 63 bales of cotton from Charleston and about 15 reputations; but the unkindest cut of all was he took off our head, which of course annihilated our future efficiency.

We were always in favor of uprightness, consequently dislike learners, the chief employment of one of which is to distort the types of our valued patrons, and overturned two wealthy houses, a meeting house, and a mill pond—and then they make more confusion in the world in two minutes, than even our industry can rectify in six hours. Another set of plagues are your triers, who come to investigate the mysteries of a Printing Office. They resemble, in a degree, the old lady who cut open her bellows to discover the secret, why the wind should come out. A column of matter upon a galley, is a special article of astonishment, and of course they must look well to the affairs and take up a word or two to examine. Little Governor Trour, the other day was lifted from his companions in the column who were standing around him, like a body-guard, and held up to admiring eyes, by an amateur in curiosity; the consequence of this rash act resulted in a melancholy severance of his form of comeliness and his Excellency came tumbling down upon his astonished troop of soldiery, who frustrated himself in despair at the event. A brimstone coat upon a polite gentleman is a very pretty thing any where but in a printing office; it sets upon the principal of the lever, as we had an opportunity of experiencing not long since, for while a particular friend of ours was making a particular bow to us in front, the mischievous bobtailed coat was making sad work in the rear; for, O sad to tell, the General assembly and Judges of Common Pleas in the state of Rhode Island were hoisted from their seats the actions on the civil docket, by short process, disposed of, and Clients and Lawyers all sent out of court with most marvelous perspitch. These are but slight sketches of the incidents and awful calamities which are innocently caused by our visitors, and those who have a proper regard for such weighty characters, solemn events, high intentions as are scattered about the purlieus of a Printing Office, will be careful lest they create

A wreck of matter and a crush of words,
Which would squeeze Captain Symms' theory into pies.

By order of James S. Guignard, Esq. Ordinary of Richland district,

WILL be sold, at the house of Mrs. MARY FLEMMING, and at the shop of the late Dr. R. L. GREEN, dec. on the SECOND MONDAY in March next, all the personal property of said deceased, except the Negroes, consisting of one Horse and Saiky, some Cattle, Household and Kitchen Furniture, Shop Furniture and Medicines, &c.

Tabernacle Academy, AT MOUNT ARIEL.

THE Trustees of this Academy take a pleasure in announcing to the public, that at the late examination of the students of this Institution, their most sanguine hopes and expectations were surpassed.

The discriminating accuracy and rapid advancement of the students in their various studies, were such as could only have been effected by the most assiduous application directed by a teacher of the first literary attainments and experience in his profession.

They congratulate themselves and the public on the flattering prospects of the permanency of this seminary of learning under the very able direction of the Rev. Joseph Travis, A. M.

The police of the village is entirely within the control of the Trustees, which enables them to exclude every thing which might tend to the introduction of vice and dissipation. The Trustees would also inform the public that the Academy is located in one of the most healthy situations in Abbeville district; as an evidence of which there has occurred but two cases of fever among the students, seventy in number. The prices of tuition are as follows:

	PER ANNUM
Reading, Writing and Arithmetic,	$15
Grammar, Geography, Logic, Rhetoric, &c.	20
Latin, Greek and Hebrew,	25
