The Grasshopper Ontlook.

A Des Moines (Ta ) correspondent says: Professor C. V. Katey, chief of the United States Entomological Commission, or as it is popularly spoken of the "Grass-hopper Commission," has been here for a day. He is a young man of evident acquirements as a naturalist and fitness belives as follows, if I correctly report what he said:

The Rocky mountain locust, differing in color and in length and texture of wing from the familiar red locust (Caloptenus femur-rubrum - our common grasshopper) - more active, voracious and capable of long flights, has been pecting to be kicked every minute." known for two hundred years. Its home is in the sub-Alpine plains of the Northwest, the Red and Saskatchawan river countries, in a vast country north of our territories in the British Dominion. It frost. It does not migrate except when driven by hunger. In dry seasons or in a series of dry years, or when the number has enormously increased, migration becomes necessary, and the States are invaded in swarms. Against their descent there is no known obstacle,

In sparsely settled regions they will strip farms of every green thing in a short time, and then either fly or march to other fields. In thickly settled, entirely cultivated regions they would do great damage in spots, but "innumeran old country. The question I heard asked in the East is then answered: "Will the grasshoppers drive us into the Atlantic?" No. Professor Riley has a better answer yet. They never have and vasion; this limit will recede westward. Then they have an irresistible instinct hatched here invariably fly northwestwardly, attempting to reach home. They cannot perpetuate themselves here. They would never maintain existence after the second year, even if let alone by birds and parasites, which destroy both eggs and insects, and men.

Now what is the prospect for the next and for future years? This: The region from which such vast swarms have come for three years must be about drained of its surplus. The dryness there is not likely to continue longer, and with food plenty the locust will not migrate. The return swarms of 1877 do not returnthey are destroyed. Birds have increased enormously in all this region and destroy myriads. There is some compensation; hogs thrive on them. There was no return in 1876-they came late and

They will not invade the States this fall, and this is the last year for the present, perhaps for many years, possibly for twenty years—this is his prediction; and he says: "When the locust scourge is fully understood, and the farmers unite in determined effort to counteract it, it will cease to be so much of a bugbear and no longer interfere with the settlement of the beautiful and productive western plains which it visits at irregular in-

The Luxury of Cold Water.

The plague of winter is cold, and the plague of summer is heat, but we can do of." great deal to lessen the miseries of bath seasons. Now that we are approaching the dog-days, it may be well to point out that by means of a liberal use of water one may pass through the summer furnace without suffering any serious discomfort. Water is good for other things besides the allaying of thirst. It has a permanent determination to evaporate, and as it cannot evaporate without heat, it consequently diminishes in the process the heat of our rooms. Pans of of ice in it, and place in the bedroom, and mark in half an hour how many degrees the thermometer has fallen. It ought to be six degrees, at least, and will be eight if he is not stingy with his ice, and this improvement in the temperature will last for hours. If the heat still remains too great, throw up the bedroom windows, fasten a blanket, or traveling rug across the space, and drench that well with water. In five minutes the air in the room will be reduced to that water's temperature. Never mind the breeze.

Honor Old Age.

Bow low the head, boy; do reverence to the old man as he passes slowly along. Once like you, the vicissitudes of life have silvered the hair and changed the round face to the worn visage before you. Once that heart beat with aspirations co-equal to any you have felt; aspirations crushed by disappointment, as yours are perhaps destined to be. Once that form stalked proudly through the gay scenes of pleasure the beau ideal of grace; now the hand of Time, that withers the flowers of yesterday, has warped that figure and destroyed that noble carriage.

Once, at your age, he had the thousand thoughts that pass through your brain-now wishing to accomplish something worthy in fame; anon imagining life a dream that the sooner he woke from the better. But he has lived the dream nearly through. The time to wake is very near at hand; yet his eye even kindles at old deeds of daring, and his hand takes a firmer grip of his staff. Bow low the head, boy, as you would in your old age be reverenced.

Too Practical a Joke.

A short time ago the treasury officials received a check from an apparently conscience-stricken individual at Boston. The check was for a sum of money which the writer said was due to the United States. He said that he had been converted by the ministrations of Moody and Sankey, and he made haste to restore the money out of which he had defrauded the government. His newly awakened religious sentiments were expressed in such beautiful and pathetic language that several of the stern-hearted officials were melted to tears. The check was sent on to Boston for collection, and today it came back with the indorsement of the bank on which it was drawn that they had no knowledge of the drawer.

INVITED TO A WEDDING.

"There are palliating circumstances in my case," remarked Agustus Cæsar Paddington as he crossed the Danube and appeared on the dead-line. "No doubt-no doubt," blandly replied his honor, "and we will now take them into consideration. You were found lying on two sides of an old board fence, far from the scenes of busy strife and the hum of industry. You had evidently intended to crawl through the fence, but at the half-way point you got tired and took a rest. You were arrested in halves, sir, there being an officer on either side of the fence."

"I now desire to say to you," continued Augustus, "that I was invited out to a wedding.

"And you went?" "And I didn't go. I was on my way there when-when-this-fence you spoke of insisted in crossing my path. I tried to dodge it. I sought to climb over it—I offered to light it, and finally I tried to crawl through it. I think I must have been temporarily insane."

"Certainly you were. I know just how you felt. The ground seemed to be skylarking around-all buildings were on the move-there were more than a million lamp-posts around. I suppose your defense is that a clean shave and a top-dressing of bay rum produced the mental and physical condition spoken the back end of the car, but Brown, Cava- fifty wooden legs. Yours truly,

HIS WAS A FUNERAL.

"My brother died, you know," began Ephraim Cowles as he emerged from Duga Pass and stood in the full light of the morning sun.

"Yes, brothers are dying all around us," replied the court. "If I had any brothers I should expect them to take their chances with the rest."

"H died, sir, out in Springwells, and I was going down to the funeral." "Of course you were, Mr. Cowles, and of course you felt very sad at the bad news. But you didn't get down there. "No, poor John! I didn't!" exclaimed the prisoner, wiping his eyes on his sleeve. "I met with a bad accident,

sir. The horse ran away and threw me

"Correct, Ephraim, entirely correct, but wasn't it funny where you landed. You were thrown a mile and a half to a foot, landed in a Woodbridge street saloon on your feet, and you walked directly to the bar and said you'd take some sugar in yours." "Was I in a saloon?" asked the prisoner, seeming greatly astonished.

"That's where you were, my boy, and wasn't a first-class saloon, either. When our folks first saw you you were trying to bite the bar-tender's thumb off, and he was getting ready to gouge your eye out."

"Is that possible?" gasped Ephraim.
"I'm telling you nothing but the best brand of truth to be had in the market. You had already demolished two tables and broken several bottles of rare old wires made of alcohol and logwood. When a man is going to his brother's funeral, and the horse runs away, you can't tell what strange things will

"Well, you seem to know best about it," said the prisoner, as he buttoned his coat, "I'll go down and tell the man that I didn't mean to bite him.' "Oh, no, you won't. I sent him your regrets an hour ago, and informed him that he could draw on you at three days' sight through the house of correction. Thirty days is the figure."

"And I'll go up as soon as I see about the funeral. "Delays are dangerous, Mr. Cowles. You had better go up right away."

"I won't!" "But you will!" And so he did. It made Bijah red in the face to lift the fellow into the buggy and tie his legs around one of the seats, but the law must be enforced if the Ludlow, a suburb of Cincinnati, had a effort snaps off every suspender-button

FOILING EXPRESS ROBBERS.

The Long Watch and Desperate Attack of Four Men ou a Railroad Train-A Terrible Battle at Lightning Speed. An attempt was recently made to rob the United States Express Company's car on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railroad a short distance east of Ligonier, Ind. The railroad authorities had heard of the contemplated raid reveral weeks previous to its taking place, and had taken steps to foil the robbers. The four men who were afterward captured were seen loitering around the station at Elkhart, Ind., and were watched. Chief of Police Purdy and twe assistants boarded the eastern train, No. 6, and secreted themselves in the express car. The officers went out as far as La Porte, as they were confident no one there knew them. Conductor D. C. Smith, who had charge of the train, was in the secret, and so arranged it that the officers were enabled to board the train without being seen. On the right of the door through which the robbers were expected to enter was concealed Detective Cavanaugh behind a pile of boxes, and on the left Tibbits and Brown, Chief Purdy, O'Sullivan and Hart were concealed at the other end, so as to confront the robbers, and Express Messenger Carleton was busy at work in the open space in the center of the car. It is learned that there was not far from $200,000 in the car; of this only some $18,000 or $20,-000 was in currency; the balance was in coin, in transit from San Francisco to New York, and was packed in boxes containing $20,000 each. The express matter was so arranged that the passage was left only sufficiently wide to compel the robbers to pass singly from the door to the center of the car, where they expected to have a struggle with the messenger. Chief Purdy graphically tells the story of what then transpired: "Nothing transpired to arouse suspicion till the train was leaving Ligonier, when man's breath beat quick, for we knew then that the attack was shortly to be made. The train got under way, and was about two miles from the station, running at full speed. A key was inserted in the lock, and while every man was straining his eyes and ears, the door, first slowly, then quickly, swung open, when four powerful, strapping fellows, two of them with blackened faces and two wearing masks, leaped into the car. The messenger was quietly looking over his bills. The robbers quickly and quietly passed up the aisle that had been left for them, and Cavanaugh as quietly and quickly shut the door behind them and fastened it. They did not notice the move. The first robber to enter reached Carleton, and, roughly laying his hand on his shoulder, said: 'Hello.' Carleton looked up, and four ugly-looking revolvers were thrust into his face. He muzzles. The man with his hand on Carleton's shoulder was about to pull the ropes from his pocket with which to naugh and Tibbits interrupted them. We each of us selected a man and pounced upon him. It was one of the most desperate fights I ever witnessed. The desperadoes knew they were contending for liberty, and fought like tigers. We did not desire to kill them, and, although each of us had a cocked revolver in one hand, we only used our billies, and we first knocked the revolvers out of their hands, and then clinched them. They were powerful men, and gave us a desperate struggle. It was the first time since I was on the police force that I cocked a revolver intending to use it. One of the robbers, Latty, was the most desperate man I ever saw. Two officers bore him to the floor, but he struggled to his feet, shook them off, and regaining possession of his revolver, endeavored to cock it, when it was knocked out of his hand by Sergeant O'Sullivan, and he was then secured. Within five minutes the struggle was over, and every one of the thieves was secured, and, strange to say, not one of us was injured, and Latty was the only robber who received any serious wounds, mostly blows about the head. There were seven or eight passenger coaches in the lightning speed." The prisoners were taken to Toledo and locked up in the Central station. Their names are: Milton M. Latty, a farmer; A. C. Bellman, formerly a conductor on the Lake Shore; Emory Christie, at one time a brakeman, but now a Extract for pains and inflammations. They were all taken back to Noble county, Ind., Saturday, handcuffed, under charge of Detection (TVI). charge of Detectives Tibbits and Cavanaugh. Latty is a tall, raw-boned man, awkwardly dressed, and is the worst Beef Cattle-Native..... looking one in the crowd. He wore a button-hole bouquet, and as he came out of the station on the way to the depot muttered: "Disgraced, disgraced for-ever." He was handcuffed to Hathaway, a middle-aged, heavy-set man, with dark hair, mustache and goatee, and bearing in his countenance evidences of dissipation. Latty is a nephew of Dr. Latty, a prominent citizen of Goshen. Christie is a small man, with light hair, red face and quite talkative. Bellman is the typical square-shouldered railroader. Bellman and Latty have families; the others have not. Christie is the only one who would talk. He said the thing was planned eighteen months ago, but it was not until the present time that they could bring themselves to make the attempt. He says: "When I entered the car there last night, and saw the messenger sitting so unconcerned, I knew we were caught. If there had not been more officers than there were of us, we would have got away."

Their Derivation. The word pamphlet is derived from the name of a Greek lady, Pamphylla, who compiled the history of the world in thirty-five little books. "Punch and Judy" are the relics of an ancient mystery play, in which the actors were Pontius Pilate and Judas Iscariot. "Dollar" is from the German thaler, which is derived from Thal, the Valley of Joachim, in Bohemia, where the silver works were situated that made this coin. "Bigot" is from Visigoth, in which the fierce and intolerant Arianism of the Visigoth conqueror of Spain has been handed down to infamy. "Humbug" is from Hamburg; a piece of "Hamburg news" was in Germany a proverbial expression for false political rumors. "Gas" and "gust" have the same parentage. An Inventive Convict.

John Bryant, of Alexan Iria, a convict now serving out his term in the penitentiary at Richmond, Va., has made what he calls "a Castle of patience." It represents his labor during three years and a half when he was not employed in pricon duties, and is a structure about seven or eight feet long. four wide and from three to four feet high. In general shape it looks like an English castle of feudal times, with towers, battlements, gateway, etc., and is made of 365,000 pieces of wood, each about two inches long and of the width and thickness of a small knife blade. The wood is from twenty-five different kinds of trees, and to fashion each splinter or "jack" it had to be handled eight times. No nail, screw, wedge, glue or other things of the kind are used in holding the material together. It is interlaced or latticed much after the fashion in which many picture frames are nowadays made. The castle is adorned with photographs and pictures. which, while not in keeping with the design, give it a pleasant appearance. In one part of the castle is a room meant to represent the prisoner's cell, and it is a faithful portrayal. This work, which is the result of an immense amount of calculation and labor, was all done by Bryant, under many disadvantages, and the only tool or instrument employed by him was a shoe knife, the blade of which has been worn down nearly to the handle. Bryant looks upon the castle with great pride, and when visitors speak in praise of it he can hardly suppress his tears. It is a monument to his industry and patience, though it may be considered of no great practical value. Bryant is allowed to sell to visitors small picture frames made in the style of the castle. Before entering the penitentiary he was a waterman at Alexandria.

Men differ on nearly every issue. There have always been opposite parties in politics and religion, though the measures fought over one day may be universally adopted at another, and those sacrificed regarded as heroes and martyrs. Medicine has also been subject to revolutionary disturbances. When Drs. Harvey revolutionary disturbances. When Drs. Harvey and Jenner announced their discoveries, they were held in contempt and ridicule by an in-credulous and ignorant public, yet to-day they are received and honored by all as benefactors. When Dr. Pierce announced his Discovery, many seemed to doubt, and were skeptical concerning all medicines and doctors, but proof of merit has dispelled all doubt and to-day the Golden Medical Discovery is the standard remedy in curing the most obstinate diseases of the liver and blood, having almost entirely superseded the old-time sarsaparillas by reason of its superior merits.

Murder in the First Degree is generally brought to light, but thousands of quiet murders, of which the world never hears, are comm thed by the administration of wrong medicines. The dy-peptic, the bilious, the lever-ridden, the rheumatic, are too often potsoned with deadly drugs, when the persistent use of Tarrant's Effervescent Selfzer Apericat with proper precautions as to diet and regimen, would inevitably have worked a speedy and thorough cure. In k-dney diseases, bowel complaints, fevers, nervous paroxysms, and all other ailments that reduce the strength and vital power of the system, sustain, refresh, purify, cle use and regulate it with this invaluable saline remedy. Sold by all druggists.

THE SUN.

NEW YORK.

THE SUN continues to be the strenuous advocate of reform and retrenchment, and of the substitution of statesmanship, wisdom, and integrity for hollow pretence, imbecility, and fraud in the administration of public affairs. It contends for the government of the people by the people and for the people, as opposed to government by frauds in the ballot-box and in the counting of votes, enforced by military violence. It endeavors to supply its readers—a body now not far from a million of souls—with the most careful, complete, and trustworthy accounts of current events, and employs for this purpose a numerous and carefully selected staff of reporters and correspondents. Its reports from Washington, especially, are full, accurate, and fearless; and it doubtless continues to deserve and enjoy the hatred of those who thrive by plundering the Treasury or by doubtless continues to deserve and enjoy the harred of those who thrive by plundering the Treasury or by surping what the law does not give them, while it endeavors to merit the confidence of the public by defending the rights of the people against the encroachments of unjustified power.

RIDGE'S INFANTS

The all-wise Creator has provided the Mother's milk for her babe, and IF BOTH ARE HEALTH, no other food should be given for the first few months. But if the Mother's milk does not estisfy and nourish the child, or when it has to be brought up by hand, then FURE COW'S MILK, PROPERLY diluted and the addition of a little RIDGE'S FOOD, should be used.

It is widely certified that RIDGE'S FOOD is one of the best preparations in the world. Thousands of children are daily fed on this delicious diet, and cases are not rare where RIDGE'S FOOD used as a last resort, the stomach retained it, and the child apparently dying from excessive vomiting and exhaustion rapidly recovered.
