THE GROWING STORE

Meet Me at Tapp's

An old colored Preacher used sound logic when he declared that "God is voting for our salvation and the devil is voting for our damnation, but the election will go whichever way we vote."

No use to get our backs up about the hardships in life, we better buckle to our job and do our bit to increase production. Would that some great leader appear who could reorganize our individual interests in each other. We can ourselves see to it that the devil don't get our votes for the damnation of our own souls. The hearts of men should be warmed to the core for the welfare of each other. If delight and not envy, could grasp the hands of the cunning, ambitious men, and take them in crowds down through their old boyhood lanes, that they might once again hear, with boyhood ears, the joyous singing, soaring lark, would it not bring back peace to the great unrest? We think it would.

Because it seems necessary to the awakening of a baby brain of the dangers of fire, they must get their little fingers burned several times. There are thousands of big babies who fancy that they are clever and cute in their shopping, but in place of being wise they are getting their fingers burned. The big store has grown big because it commands a greater patronage than the little shop; just as the young giant, weighing 200 pounds and six feet tall, with all bone and muscle is stronger than the dwarf. Our big store is crowded full of new fall merchandise, carefully priced prorata on the department store plan. We have often explained the approximate saving on each article you buy in our store, because of the many different departments the cost of doing business on each article is much less by our department store arrangement. We sell the cloaks for less, because we do not depend upon the cloaks alone to pay the entire expenses of this store. If we had nothing but cloaks, suits, dresses and waists, we would have to charge a larger profit for them to meet our expenses. Do you see the point?

Man's intentions, like whirling leaves in Autumn's Gusts, are lifeless outcasts of a throbbing corpse; be-shorn of grace and graceful in helplessness.

Don't you really think that most claims of perfection are merely visualized intentions?

Is the Woolworth building perfect? Compare it with the firmament.

Are our goods perfect? Compare them with your ideals.
