

Christian Education Cure for Unrest of Present Times

(Contributed)

Various and difficult are the problems which demand consideration today by the loyal citizen who would plan and build and legislate to safeguard the rights to liberty, property, and the pursuit of happiness. The political situation bubbles with discord. Men and measures are lauded on the one hand and censured on the other. Industry lags because there is controversy between labor and capital. Labor accuses capital and capital labor; so industry is reduced, the wheels of progress slow down, and misery and crime stalk through the land. In the religious realm faith is diversified and feverish. Many minds are today attempting to size up the needs and requirements of the human soul and meeting about the same success as Job's comfortless comforters. The world has its share of turmoil and distraction now that calls forth all the endeavors which Christian citizens can put forth.

But the present situation is not radically different from that which other periods of history have encountered. Human misery is no new thing. Problems of state and society and region have ever been, and ever will be the inspiration which is responsible for making of history.

It is interesting to note the fight which history throws upon our own perturbed generation. Deep thinkers have undertaken the task of prescribing panaceas for all ills and ailments, and as a consequence, unique philosophies have been evolved, tested and consigned to the junk pile. Plato, Seneca, and Kant discoursed masterfully upon many of the world's problems and won its admiration but not its confidence. What is philogophy? Simply an invention of the human mind. But human invention cannot account satisfactorily for the origin, development, and destiny of mankind, nor does it offer an intelligent explanation as to the cause of human misery, and that is why philosophies fail.

But human effort has not been confined to the preparation of philosophies and the building up of civilizations. Because of the remnant of the Divine image which clung to man through the fall, he could realize without the aid of written revelation, that he is a physical being, that he couldn't die, that he couldn't annihilate himself. This circumstance stimulated his powers of invention with reference to his phisic nature; so that the world today has a supply of man-made religions and make-believe gods. There is a pathetic element in this brief survey; for it involves the slavery and the tragedy of human souls floundering in seas of uncertainty and speculation and superstition with no vision of the Pilot's face.

Now, experience and revelation both teach that we may not expect entirely to banish from this world human misery and the unrest that is so evident among us. Still there are effective remedies for this unrest, and the chief of these remedies is Christian education. According to Christian standards and ideals, men are born equal only in respect to their inalienable rights; they are not born equal in their natural powers and faculties. Equality was not the principle upon which the pounds and talents were distributed in the parables of Jesus. Since these differences in the natural powers exist differences in wealth and station are inevitable. However, those of higher station dare not forget that those of the humbler walks do have their inalienable rights. Poverty is no absolute proof of laziness, nor is wealth absolute proof of industry. In the parable, the man of few talents, who was faithful, was commended as well as the man of many talents.

If these ideals were generally recognized and lived up to, there would result a mutual respect between the employer and the employee, and much of the unrest of the land would disappear.

These ideals are inculcated in the Christian colleges of the land. These colleges, therefore, become a strong defense in this day of unrest. They should be strengthened that they might do even more effective service. Commendable, therefore, are the efforts of the trustees of Lenoir College to add $200,000 to its endowment. This fund should be over-subscribed. Strengthen the Christian colleges.

IN LOVING REMEMBRANCE OF OUR DEAR FATHER

John F. Rish departed this life August 31, 1919, making his stay on earth 75 years, 2 months and 24 days. He leaves a loving wife and eight children, two brothers and three sisters to mourn his departure.

A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.

Sleep on dearest father
And take thy rest,
God called you home,
He knew best.

Well done thou good and faithful servant, enter ye now into the joys of thy Lord. May the good Lord ever be with us all and prepare us to meet him on that happy golden shore, where no farewell tears are shed.

Written by his loving children.

Attention! Ladies Only! Attention!

New offerings for this week in Suits, Coats, Dresses, Skirts and Hats at this popular store--yes, popular because low prices merit our popularity. Man never remembers the bad things he buys. Women can't forget them. It is all in the standards of comparison. Women are more skeptical about durability. That is why the business of catering to her is an incessant struggle. When you buy a garment from us it is just one article less you've got to atone for.
