W. W. LUMPKIN IS AT REST

CONFEDERATE SOLDIER, KNIGHT
TEMPLAR OF DISTINCTION AND A SOUTHERN CITIZEN OF DISTINCTION

With a great concourse attendant upon the sad rites, the body of W. W. Lumpkin was laid to rest, the interment at Elmwood cemetery followed the services at Trinity church held at noon. In the throng that filled the large edifice there were few who did not know and care for the kindly lovable man who had just died, and many of his brotherhood were there, Knights Templar Masons, Knights of Pythias and Confederate soldiers attending in companies of their various organizations. The Confederate veterans and Knights Templar came in the uniforms that Col. Lumpkin had himself worn with so much pride. Among the members of the fraternal orders were many who had come from a distance to show their love

THE OBSERVER.

The carnival has come and gone. It took away a goodly number of dollars. What did it leave?

Spring is well named. All around us vegetation is springing into life, and the base ball spirit is springing into being.

A noted writer has divided the people of the world into two classes—those who lift and those who lean. The work of the lifters spells progress; the leaners stand in the way of progress. Each lifter is a cog in the wheel of forward movement, while each leaner is a clog in the selfsame wheel. Lifters or leaners, which are we? Do we make things more, or do things make us more?

That man is well-informed who knows that he is ignorant; that man is ignorant who thinks he knows it all.

Confidence in one's self is necessary to success, but this very confidence implies a recognition of one's limitations. There is a vast difference between modest self-poise and brazen assurance.

Criticism intended to be helpful is good, provided the critic knows what he is talking about; criticism intended to be hurtful is bad, whether or not the critic knows what he is talking about.

There is a state law against the sale of cigarettes to minors, yet a great number of the cigarette smokers in our State are minors. The question then is, how do the boys get the cigarettes? Do they buy them, or do they have individuals of proper age to buy them? The Observer believes it would not be venturesome to say that the boys have bought and can buy cigarettes, and that they have bought them in Batesburg. There are cigarette smokers among the boys of Batesburg. You have seen some of them smoking and so have I. We may not have seen them make their purchases, yet they do make them; and every time such a purchase is made a state law is violated.

It is not my purpose at this time to discuss the harmful effects of cigarette smoking. My object now is, to bring this matter to the attention of the authorities and of our people generally. Let the sale of cigarettes to boys be stopped, and then let every effort be made to keep the boys from smoking. In another issue something will be said in this column about the harmful effects of cigarettes on the young.

The services at the grave were in charge of the Knights Templar and the solemn highest Masonic rites were observed in the last services. By request of Col. Lumpkin his four sons, Hope H. Alva M., Morris C. and Bryan H. Lumpkin acted as pall bearers. Honorary pall bearers were: U. R. Brooks, W. R. Henderson, C. O. Brown, H. E. Wells, Willie Jones, W. G. Childs, F. H. Hyatt.

From the fraternal orders and organizations of which Col. Lumpkin was a valued member, and from the many friends in Columbia and South Carolina, and other States where he was well known the floral tributes came, expressing sympathy and regret from those who knew and loved the good man.

Col. Lumpkin was one of the widely known citizens of South Carolina and it is probable that no one in Columbia had more personal friends than he. He was well known and loved by hundreds in every walk of life. He was of the old South and for the new and his fidelity to the one and his courage for the other endeared him to thousands

FINE MILLINERY AT MONCKTON'S

GREAT NUMBER OF BEAUTIFUL PATTERNS THIS YEAR

The millinery opening at the Globe Dry Goods Co in Columbia on Wednesday was indeed a revelation. Such an amazingly large line of hats could scarcely be imagined if eye had not seen and brain been set awirl with the wonder of it all. The store from the very door is abloom with spring and is bordered and arched with masses of lovely flowers leading back into the millinery department.

There the women flocked from early hour to late and there they found the widest sort of range for their whims and fancies. Mr. Monckton, manager of the Globe, stated that he had bought a daintily large line of millinery this year, but that the great numbers in which the women were flocking to the store, and the enthusiastic praise with which they were expressing their admiration already justified his venture.

All the hats are made in New York or imported by the Northern houses from Parisian shops and they are the very latest things of the season; all are beautiful and many are most distinctive and unique. One is immediately struck by the number of magnificent ostrich plumes used in every imaginable color, and by the exquisite quality of the flowers which appear in such quantities, both on the hats and in the show cases.

The prices and style range from the simplest and most reasonable to the most elaborate and quite costly—though none could be considered to enter the class of extravagance or extreme in either price or style and rich and poor may be satisfied. In an adjoining apartment the new wash suits and the pretty lingerie and tub dresses of all sorts allure the women shopper who finds there also an amazing variety and a wonderful reasonableness in price. It would be hard to estimate the number of women who entered the Globe Wednesday—they were there in numbers as early as 8 o'clock, Mr. Monckton stated.

HOLDS JOHN MILLER FOR CIRCUIT COURT

Lexington, March 14.—John Miller, a white man, was bound over to the court of general sessions by Magistrate Thos. L. Harman today in the sum of $500.

Miller was accused of assault and battery with intent to kill, the direct charge being that he fired two shots from a double-barreled shotgun into the house of John Head, a white farmer, living near Saxe-Gotha, on the night of January 29, last, while an old-fashioned candy pulling was going on, injuring four occupants of the room, Head's wife being among the injured.

The preliminary, which consumed practically all of today, about 15 witnesses were sworn. John Miller is an uncle of Sheriff P. H. Corley and is also a relative with Deputy Sheriff Miller. Both of these officers gave damaging testimony against the accused. They told how they had taken the wadding which was picked up at the yard of John Head where the gun was fired, and compared it with the shells found in the gun of the accused. It matched one of the shells exactly.

Deputy Sheriff Miller, who was with the party at the time the dogs trailed up to John Miller's house and treed, told of going into the house and making an examination of the gun. He stated that, in his opinion, the gun had recently been fired.

Both Sheriff Corley and Deputy Sheriff Miller swore that the shoe which Miller had on the next day after the shooting fitted the track to the letter that led from the house of Head.

A man and his two sons testified that they heard Miller say on the same night that the shooting occurred that he could not live a Christian life because some people had been trampling on his toes, and that they had now begun to trample upon his heart and that he expected to get satisfaction before the sun arose the next morning.

J. W. Lyles, who was sent from the penitentiary with the dogs, stated that the dogs carried the track straight to John Miller's house, two of them running up on the porch and baying. A little later one of the dogs struck a new trail and carried it several hundred yards away to the home of a widow. He said that he had to force two of the dogs to take this trail, which he considered a strong sign that the right party was at the home of John Miller.

Several parties testified that Miller was under the influence of whiskey on the night in question. The deputy sheriff stated that John Miller's wife told him that her husband was drunk.

At the conclusion of the Miller case, Mr. Sharpe moved for a dismissal of the charges pending against Ben Roland, who was arrested on the same charge, but this was refused and Roland will be given a preliminary at some date in the near future.

There was a large crowd in attendance.
