METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH—Rev. Thomas Phillips, pastor. SERVICES, morning, afternoon and evening.

TOWN CRIER.

OFFICE HOURS AT ORANGEBURG DEPOT.

FROM 8 o'clock A. M. to 2 P. M. FROM 9 o'clock P. M. to 5 P. M.

—We are informed just as we are going to press that the dwelling houses of Mr. Augustus Holman have been destroyed by fire.

—The gin house of Mr. T. Rickenbaker, together with about twelve bales of cotton was destroyed by fire on the 1st inst.

ATTENTION!—We offer a large quarto Family Bible to all who will get up a club of six subscribers, accompanied by twelve dollars in cash.

—We regret we were unable to secure a copy of the premium list of the fair, in season to print the remainder of the list in this issue.

—Coroner J. H. Fordham is called to Charleston on business, and has appointed Trial Justice E. A. Webster his deputy during his absence.

—On Monday night several shocks of an earthquake were felt in Columbia, Edgefield, Cokesbury and other sections of the State.

—According to a ruling in the post office department, anything written upon the back of a postal card, except the proper direction, subjects it to letter postage, three cents, and if not prepaid the rate is doubled, six cents.

The passenger trains on the S. C. R. R., on and after Monday next, will pass through Orangeburg as follows: Day from Columbia, 11.30 a. m.

—The News and Courier in an editorial commenting upon the recent Republican victories, very sagely remarks: "If Gen. Grant wishes to be renominated he will be renominated, and, if renominated, it will be very hard to prevent his election."

—Julius Glover, Esq., of the law firm of Glover & Glover, was married on Wednesday last to Miss DeTreville, the daughter of Col. W. J. DeTreville of this place.

—Married, by Rev. J. B. Campbell, on Wednesday last, Mr. W. P. Spencer and Miss A. Lewis. Mr. Spencer is a practical printer, and is now working in the office of the News and Times, and his conversion to the co-operative plan, we trust, he never will have occasion to regret.

ARRESTED.—C. S. Miller was arrested yesterday morning by Detective James Canton. It seems that he was offering alpacas to dealers at such extremely low figures as to arouse suspicion, and he was detained in a store until an officer could be sent for and his arrest accomplished.

The above item is taken from the Columbia Register. If T. Kohn & Bro., were not well known, and gentlemen above suspicion, they might possibly be arrested and brought before a trial justice on a similar charge.

Pardoned.

John L. Humbert has been pardoned by the Governor, and; we understand, is now at home with his family. This act of executive clemency merits the universal approbation of the citizens of this county, and although the defalcations in the treasury office during Humbert's term leave the county in debt, he is not regarded as the principal in this fraud, but as treasurer legally responsible.

The defendant was convicted at the January term, 1875, of the Court of General sessions for Orangeburg County of official misconduct as county treasurer and sentenced to imprisonment for one year in the penitentiary and a fine $1,000. Application was made to me for a pardon in this case immediately after the trial, which I felt obliged to refuse on the obvious ground that the example would be hurtful to the public.

The application being now renewed, I have re-examined the case, and I now reach the conclusion that the public interests will permit me to grant the pardon. Nearly ten months of the eleven months during which he would be confined have passed and the sheriff of Orangeburg county certifies that he has collected by levy and sale of the prisoner's property $705.60 of the fine. The prisoner is very young and was wholly without previous experience when he was appointed Treasurer.

I may add that the present petitions have the names of Hon. R. B. Elliott, A. B. Knowlton, Esq., J. H. Livingston, Esq., Rev. A. Webster, Wm. A. Hayne, Esq., H. L. Shrewsbury, Esq., Hon. J. J. Wright, of the Supreme Court, Hon. H. E. Hayne, Hon. W. B. Nash, Hon. Samuel W. Melton, Attorney General, Hon. F. L. Cardozo, W. R. Jones, Esq., and others of equal prominence and weight.

Mr. Solicitor Buttz endorses the application, and his Honor Judge Reed concurs on the ground that this punishment has already accomplished the ends of justice.

Under these circumstances, I grant the pardon, remitting the remainder of the sentence, both of imprisonment and fine.

CURING A HYPOCHONDRIAC.—The only way to cure a hypochondriac, or one who fancies himself with a disease which he really has not, is to humor the patient. Many amusing instances are told of successful treatment by this method.

Dr. Crawford, a Baltimore physician had a troublesome patient, a man who had taken it into his head that he was slowly dying of a liver complaint, when he had nothing at all the matter with him, barring the delusion. The doctor sent him traveling, and he soon forgot his disease altogether; but, unfortunately, he had no sooner returned home in the best of health, than news came of the death of his twin-brother, of scirrhus liver. He was thereupon seized with the fancy that he, too, was dead, like his brother, of liver-complaint.

Dr. Crawford was sent for, and after hearing the story, merely remarked: "Oh yes; he is dead, sure enough, and probably his liver was the death of him, as he expected it would be. However, I will soon ascertain that by opening the body before putrefaction sets in. Bring me a carving knife." The knife was soon in the doctor's hands, and he stepped towards the hypochondriac; but before he could commence his post-mortem examination, the dead-alive man jumped up, shouting "Murder!" dashed out of the room, and out of the house, and made across the country; he ran till he ran himself out, and fell from exhaustion. Finding nobody followed him, as soon as he was able he returned to the house, and thought he lived a score of years longer, he was never heard to complain of liver again.

To be continually subject to the breath of slander, will tarnish the purest virtue, as a constant exposure to the atmosphere, will obscure the brightness of the finest gold; but in either case the real value of both will continue the same, although the currency may be somewhat impeded.

The seeds of repentance are sown in youth; by pleasure, but the harvest is reaped in age by pain.

How to Get an Education.

Some of our young friends in this section are writing us to know by what means they can secure what they seem very anxious to gain—an education. Some of them are waiting for good friends to aid them. But if any one wishes to be educated, let them go to work and get it. There is a way where there is a will. No one should ever wait for something to turn up; but just take hold and turn it up. Rev. M. Trafton, D. D., of the New England conference tells in Zion's Herald how he went to work to get an education, and the same path of grand success is open to our young men of the South. After telling us how he earned $250.00 in one year to buy himself off from obligations to learn a trade, he says:

"The last of December, and my last week's work was finished, and I settled my account with my old master. I had earned the money, and he brought out my indentures, and put them into my hands. I was free! But I declined, and asked him to retain them, which he finally consented to do. I had no home to which to go, and thought it would be a kind of bond connecting me with the visible world; and I might be glad to go back to my bench again. Had he died, his executors could have called me back by the terms of the instrument, after I had joined the conference, as I was not of age at the time of my union with that body.

And now for Kent's Hill. To me it seemed the original Eden. I commenced my preparation. It may strike the reader as strange, but I could get no money for my labor, nothing but store pay, as it was called. I procured some clothes, made a bargain with the stage agent for a passage to Augusta, and paid him in shoemaking. The last of February I got into the stage at 9 o'clock in the evening, reaching Augusta in the morning, stopped with father Oliver Beale, the preacher stationed there, and by some means reached Kent's Hill two days before the opening of the term. No shoemaking was done there—farming and furniture manufacturing only. I at first went to turning chair stuff, six hours a day. The scholars labored for their board which was rated at one dollar per week, devoting the morning and evening to study. After a short time I saw an easier way to get on. I had a good trade, and had brought my kit (tools) with me. Why not become a cure of "soles" without ordination?

We were crowded into one building, and lodged in one room, on little cot bedsteads, and all occupying one room for study. connected with the seminary was a little one story house, at a short distance called the hospital, and, as it was without patients, a few of us petitioned to the agent for its use, which was granted. Two took the front room, and I got the old kitchen and a bed room adjoining. In the kitchen I put a bench and spread my kit, and put out my sign.

I found I could by a half day's labor pay for a week's board. I borrowed an old bedstead from Rev. G. F. Cox, financial agent of the school, which bedstead wouldn't stand, or couldn't, unless it was supported by the walls. I went into the swamp near by and pulled some hazel-bark of which I twisted a bed cord and so lashed the old thing together; filled a sack with straw, procured some blankets from the Seminary, and, with an old chair, and a little pine table on hinges, so as to be let down out of the way, and my room was palatial. It was a decided improvement on the shoe-shop, hammock and sheep skins of the previous years. I have seen rooms more elegant, and furnished in a higher style, yet I have never, save in a single instance, of which I may tell my readers by and by, seen the equal of that little room.

And thus commenced my all too brief student life. None of the "faculty" of that early period in the history of that grand old school, which has sent out into active life so many hundreds of laborers, are now alive, and but few of the students who were filling the classes at that time.

It is safer to be attacked by some men than to be protected by them.

If the weakness of the head were an admissible excuse for the malevolence of the heart, the one-half of mankind would be occupied in aggression and the other half in forgiveness; but the interests of society peremptorily demand that things should not be so; for a fool is often as dangerous to deal with as a knave, and always more incorrigible.
