Sentiments of Governor Chamberlain.

It must be considered that our Governor is a capital hand to make a speech. We are not sure, but managing an army or a nation, we notice with pleasure the favorable comments of the press North and South, on the recent speech of the Governor in Charleston. The good people at home and abroad, all commend the Governor's sentiments on education, and reform, and especially that there should be an efficient State Government; and what he has effected in that direction has inspired the disparing with hope for the future of our State. We cannot think that the governor sympathises with the State Agricultural College should be stiged in its infancy because it did not happen to be born in the vigor of rown manbood We cannot presum ovale our prudent and dis- ble for winter, than the low lands of Morgan, H. J. creet Governor would favor the the coast, either in this State or Mouzon, W P policy of being generous before being just, or that he would found to spend the winter in the Murray, J W heing just, or that he would ask the people of the State to be so prodent as to neglect, at least to pay the interest on the money furnished by the General Government to support the Agricultural College, which has been taken and appropriated by a former administration for its own use. The government allowed the use of one tenth part of the original sum to be applied for the purchase of an agricultural farm, but the Trustees in their economy only proposed to apply the interest for this object, but the State has neglected to pay even this, and left the trustees without the means as yet of even paying for the farm purchased and meeting other contingent expenses,

The Governor has a way of translating his words into actions which gives them peculiar emphasis. Ex-Governor Perry in a recent letter to the News and Courier pays the Boyd, G. M. Governor the following tribute.

In the last election I opposed Governor Chamberlain, with all my influence, because I thought he would sustain and encourage his party in their corruption and dishonesty, in Byars, D. D. their oppressive taxation and extravagant expenditure of the public money. I now cheerfully confess that Black, Dr. J. B. in all this I was mistaken, and that Bolles, E. A. his administration has been honest, Bobo, Simpson wise and patriotic, as far as it was Bensley, J. S. possible for him to make it such.

Orangeburg.

Orangeburg C. H., S. C., Novem- Campbell, Simeon ber 20-Of all the counties we have Capers, W. I. visited in this State, none have impressed us more favorably than Orangeburg. It is one of the best counties in the State, and, judging by what we have seen of it, far in advance, in material prosperity, of most of the other counties. It is large in area and population, and is skirted and traversed by rivers and railroads affording ample means and conveniences for transportation. The soil is Canthan, A.
