

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

A series of Chadwick Papers would be a distinct addition to letters.

The divorce might not be so popular if the clergy would quit denouncing it as an evil.

Nan Patterson preferred married men with blue eyes as the jurymen to try her case. The worst jury in the world for Nan would be composed of married women with green eyes.

Prof. Millard, of Indianapolis, says that Noah was the original millionaire. There is corroborative evidence that he owned the earth at one time.

It might be a good way to settle it if the Cabinet members should shake dice for their jobs a couple of time a week.

It would lessen suspicion if Tom Lawson were to assure us that he does not propose to utilize all this advertising by going on the stage.

Latest reports indicate that there's nothing the matter with Kansas, and that William Allen White's horse-whip scars are healing rapidly.

The President evidently has no grudge against Mr. Loupp for writing that book about him, as he has appointed him Indian Commissioner instead of naming him for Pension Commissioner.

They are making preparations over in Manchuria to fight that decisive battle of the war again.

Count Cassini insists that Russia will "fight to the bitter end", unless, of course, the Japs cut the end off.

After Tom Lawson gets through with the Standard Oil trust he will have material for the publication of a new dictionary of invectives.

The cruiser Pennsylvania has broken all speed records by running like a Republican candidate in Philadelphia.

From a formal statement issued by Secretary Shaw we infer that he means what he said about it, only that he did not say exactly what he intended,

"Every one can appreciate a big drink of cold water before breakfast", says a medical sharp. Yes, but the man who is not a Prohibitionist has the keenest appreciation of it.

Senator Penrose wants a man punished for using indorser instead of endorser. In the case of Ohio bank presidents the penalty should apply in either case.

Only a few more days left for the girls to make up their minds to propose.

Notice To Pensioners.

I will be in the Auditor's office on each Saturday during the month of January, 1905, for the purpose of receiving applications for Pensions. All who wish to make application for Pension must do so at that time. Those already on the Pension roll need not make new application, but must report to me in person or by writing me at Camden so their names can be placed on the Pension roll for 1905. Those who have left the country must be transferred to the county where they now live.

W. F. Russell,
Pension Commissioner.

New Hotel.

Mr. C. P. Lowrance, lately of Yorkville has opened the house lately occupied by Judge W. F. Russel on Main Street as a commercial hotel. This hotel will be known as The Commercial Exchange. He will appreciate any patronage given him, and will make his guests feel at home while with him. The location of this hostelry is two doors North of the corner of Main and DeKalb Streets, just slightly North of the Camden Baptist Church, on the other side of the street.
