Be faithful in the performance of duty, patient in the endurance of trial, hopeful in the midst of difficulties, and even trustful in your Heavenly Father's care.

If farmers could be persuaded to act together with the purpose of securing honest and economical administration of government, the effect would be reduced, general thrift promoted and politics purified.

Lewis Yarborough, of Spartanburg county, has bequeathed 140 acres of land to the Yarborough Chapel. His father had previously given 80 acres. The rents of these lands will go to pay the pastor's salary and will render the church nearly self-sustaining. The church is Protestant Methodist.

A projected game of base-ball, on last Sunday in Charleston, was nipped in the bud by the prompt action of the chief of police. It is singular that some people are so forgetful of their obligation and responsibility to the Lord of the Sabbath, nay, even the proprieties of the occasion, as to think of planning such a game on the Lord's day. The police are to be commended for their promptness in suppressing it.

Mr. Stephen R. Rhodes, a brother of Capt. Thomas E. Rhodes, died on Saturday night of hemorrhagic malarial fever, after a brief illness. Mr. Rhodes was employed in the government work on the Congaree River last summer, and it is supposed that he contracted the disease from which he died from the exposure incident to that work. The deceased was buried on Sunday afternoon, Rev. A. H. Lester conducting the services. The Salamander Hook and Ladder Company, of which he was a member, attended the funeral in a body.

Mr. Rhodes is remembered in this community as, at one time, the foreman of the Horry News-office. He was a quiet, unassuming man who retained the respect of those with whom he was associated.

We are reliably informed that a horse and a mule were drowned in Little Bee Swamp, near Gallivants Ferry, last week. The horse belonged to Vandyke Johnson, of Horry, and by careful management was brought to the shore on this side but died soon after getting on land. The mule belonged to a negro, name unknown, and was lost in the swamp.

Without a dam on the Marion side the bridge is a delusive humbug. It was intended, at least, at the time the project of building the bridge was agitated, that Marion would straighten the road and throw up an embankment to a sufficient height to enable travelers to cross at any stage of the water. It is with the greatest difficulty, when the swamp is full, for a person, who occasionally travels the road, to keep the road with certainty.

A little trouble and labor, in blazing the trees and putting up stakes in the open places, as way-marks and directors to the traveler, would save to him great annoyance and probably the loss of life and property. If the county commissioners of Marion county are not disposed or prepared to construct a dam it is reasonable for the travelling public to demand of them that they prepare something like the above suggestion to guide the lonely traveler safely to his destination.

Advice For Girls.
Louisa M. Alcott says: "Girls don't be in haste to wed. Build up healthy bodies by good food, plenty of exercise and sleep. Learn all the useful household arts before you attempt to make a home. Cultivate your minds with the best books, that your mind may be clear and your judgment sound. School training alone will never give you. Choose your amusements wisely, for youth must have pleasure, but not waste itself in harmful frivolity. Above all select your friends with care. Avoid girls who live only for fashion, flirtation and enjoyment, and use the privilege all women may claim, to decline the acquaintance of young men whose lives will not bear inspection by the innocent eyes of women. Let no delusion of wealth, rank, comeliness or love tempt you to trust your happiness to such a one. Watch and wait till the true lover comes, even if it be all your life, for single blessedness is far better than double misery and wrong. Spinners are a very useful, happy, independent race, never more so than now, when all professions are open to them, and honor, fame and fortune are bravely won by many gifted members of the sisterhood. Set your standard high and live up to it, sure that the reward will come here or hereafter, and in the form best suited to your real needs."

A fifteen-year-old girl in Clarke county, Ga., is seven feet tall. If her tongue is as long in proportion, we are sorry for the man that she marries.

Attention is called to the new schedule of the W. C. & C. Railroad in this issue. Trains leave Greenville at 10:47 A. M. and reach Chadbourne at 1:51 P. M.

What is Happiness.
How different is peace from happiness. Happiness is the result of harmony between our wants as creatures and the world without; peace is the harmony between us as spiritual beings and the Father of our spirits. The one is as changeable as the objects or circumstances on which it relies; the other is as unchangeable as the God on which it eternally rests. We may thus possess real happiness and real peace. Yet either can exist without the other. Happiness can be denied by us in order that the blessings of peace may be possessed. But never will He take from us peace to give us happiness. Happiness without peace is temporal; peace along with happiness, that, indeed, is eternal.

Growth of a Big Book.
When Webster's Unabridged was first published in one volume, it was a comparatively small book. Some years after an addition was made of 1,500 pictorial illustrations, a table of synonyms, and an appendix of new words that had come into use. A few years later came an entirely new revised edition of larger size, with 3,000 pictorial illustrations, then, after an interval of a few years, a biographical dictionary of nearly 10,000 names, and a supplement of nearly 5,000 new words were added, and now there has come a new and most valuable addition, a Gazetteer of the world, of over 25,000 titles. The work is now not only a dictionary, par excellence, but a biographical dictionary, a gazetteer of the world, and a great many other good things in its many valuable studies.

Mail Road Breaker.
The operating terminus of the W. C. & C. Railroad is now at the 34th mile post, which is about 4 miles from Conway. The camps were moved to that point last Saturday. The track is being laid very rapidly and it does not rain to interrupt the work.

But Mrs. Cleveland's respite is a respite must be of short duration. The Fifteenth Congress will be on in a few weeks, and bushels of cards are already only waiting ingress to the capacious receiver of Bristol-boards which stands just outside of the Red Parlor of the White House. The President's pretty, gracious wife is by no means surfeited with the homage of the fashionable and official world of Washington, nor of the great unwashed, after an experience of one brilliant season. She loves it, and society is still in love with her. She is young enough and handsome enough and winsome enough to enjoy her position thoroughly for six more seasons yet, and this will probably be her good fortune.

You occasionally hear men, wise otherwise expressing their opinions as to whether the late Presidential starting tour will yield good results, and so long as opinions are entirely harmless things, I may as well repeat them. Some say that there was decidedly too much of Mrs. Cleveland and too little of her husband about it all. Others say that Mr. Cleveland, as a representative of Democracy, should have given utterance, to something clear-cut and incisive concerning natural affairs, that he comported himself like one politically biased, and that old time statesmen did not come and go in that non-committal matter—nor affect the decorous aspect when appearing before the people. On the other hand Mr. Cleveland's admirers maintain that his trip was not barren, political, and that the approaching elections will prove it.

Secretary Whitney of the Navy is the only member of the Cabinet who is now absent from his post. He is said to be a victim of over-work, having pursued his official duties during the heated term instead of taking rest and recreation. His condition is such that there is no prospect of his being able to prepare an annual report of his Department. The Secretary has rendered valuable public services as the head of the Navy, and even his temporary retirement from duty is a cause of regret. The Whitney's open house has heretofore been the most marked social feature of this Administration. The Secretary is wealthy and they have entertained with princely hospitality. Should his health continue so poor as to necessitate a retirement from social duties, this festive house would be greatly missed by the gay world of the Capital.

Washington Letter.
(From Our Regular Correspondent.)
This is the busy season of the year at the Capital—the season of preparation. The President is busy preparing his message to Congress. The Cabinet officers are busy preparing their annual reports. The chiefs of Bureaus and the heads of divisions are busy compiling the data from which these reports are made.

But bustling preparations here are not confined to the business of the Government. The mistress of the White House and the mistress of the boarding house are equally busy preparing for the annual event—the advent of the fashionable season, and opening of Congress with its retinue—legislators, lobbyists, office seekers, fortune seekers, fortune spenders, men of ideas of schemes, and that great transient population peculiar to a great Capital.

The coming Congressional session will be a long and busy one. It will probably continue until after the two great political parties will have held their Presidential nominating conventions. The session preceding the national conventions, with the accompanying intrigues that go before Presidential nominations, the campaign and the election of a President, will naturally give a zest and spice to social affairs here during the season, and render it a notable one among those whose histories have been written.

Life at the White House has been uneventful even since the President's return. It has no mistress just at this time. The President and Col. Lambert work industriously at their desks all day long, and after office hours the President drives out to his country home, where Mrs. Cleveland has spent most of her time since their return from their great Western and Southern trip.

But Mrs. Cleveland's respite is a respite must be of short duration. The Fifteenth Congress will be on in a few weeks, and bushels of cards are already only waiting ingress to the capacious receiver of Bristol-boards which stands just outside of the Red Parlor of the White House.
