Clippings From Backsville Telephone.

With the approach of Christmas, the Holiday Trade of Backsville assumes the proportions very pleasant to our merchants, this week will witness the advent in our midst of hundreds of our County friends...

The best kind of Christmas gift—one that would certainly be appreciated—is a couple of hams, barrel of flour, box of canned goods, butter, &c. Buck and Co. say they can supply these articles, with toys, nuts, fruits and Christmas goods, so cheap that no one would regret making the purchase.

Christmas Eve will be celebrated by our citizens at Hobson church. There will be choice selections of music rendered. An Oration by Prof. Knight, of Socastee Academy, and then the hearts of the little ones made glad by a Christmas Tree. Let all strangers feel that they are especially invited. Our ladies never do things by halves, and all who attend may expect a treat, 8:30 p.m. is the hour.

The pleasing smiles that have prevailed over the countenances of our friend, W. McE. Buck for past weeks, speaks the joy of a young man becoming the father of a bouncing boy, which event occurred in Marion some days past. Mother and her wail, and will soon return home.

The books of subscription for stock in the Herry Telephone Co. were opened on the 15th inst., and very near all the stock taken up. The construction of the line is an assured fact, notwithstanding the High Diligence of a few who always exhibit their displeasure at any enterprise organizing at Backsville. The line will be put in first class condition at an early day. The poles are already erected on part of line, wire, brackets and insulators are expected this week. Mess. Oliver and Singleton, of Socastee are the contractors.

Geo. C. Deaty, of Backsville is now on a visit to O'Neal County, Ga., from there he expects to visit Birmingham, Anniston, Tusculuosa and Tusculuosa. No doubt "Cornie" proposes to strike the "Festive Link" with the pole that is said to bring down the financial perilousness.

Mr. Elyon: Allow me space in your paper for a few items from this section.

People have finished gathering their crops and are preparing to have a big time killing hogs. (Come down Mr. Editor, and let us go on the beach and eat hog and rice. Thank you. Ed.)

People seem to be enjoying themselves to a greater extent than usual inhaling the invigorating air on the seashore. They seem to be in good spirits and waiting and hoping for the better day.

I would like to ask our County Commissioners a question through the columns of THE HERALD. A petition was forwarded to the Legislature asking for a road leading from Socastee to Withers Swamp and continued to Wampsee, and the request was granted. Now, have the County Commissioners discharged their duty by having said road opened to the public?

The question propounded to a certain firm of this place, we think not suitable to the columns of a public journal. A private interview would be more satisfactory. Ed. HERALD.

Little River and Long Bay Items

I will for the first time give THE HERALD a few items, which I hope may be found worthy of insertion and interest the readers.

Times seem to be improving in this vicinity and I hope the people will continue to improve in health, wealth, education and religion.

Isaac J. Cox, of Buck Creek's teaching school at Union Valley church. He has a large school and is getting along finely. Mr. Cox is a christian young man, opens school every morning with prayer and we wish him abundant success.

Well, Mr. Editor, the long wished for has made its appearance in Conway and we hope now to be treated to something else in the columns of THE HERALD than "railroad racket," but we would like to see one building from Smithville to Conway. We think it would much improve our part of the county. (No doubt, but that scheme is relegated to limbo reserved for the resurrection. Ed.)

There is a certain couple in Little River village that has appreciated the time for celebrating the nuptials four different times and every time disappointment met them. They are still pursuing the coveted object with determination. (Perhaps they think pursuit affords more pleasure than rental possession. Ed.)

However, some are marrying and others are waiting to get into the same marital entanglements. P.

Washington Letters.

The political world this week would be of the President is the chief topic of discussion, and while there are diverse opinions concerning its expediency and practicality, men of all parties willingly concede Mr. Cleveland the courage of his convictions—something really refreshing in a candidate for the Presidency, because so rarely seen. Many long headed politicians express the belief that the President's course on the only real vital issue of the day will cause a new alignment of parties in the next Presidential struggle, and one of the most exciting contests in the history of the country. Mr. Blaine's swift criticism of the message is practically regarded as a declaration of his own candidacy for the Presidency as the champion of the protection principle. It is thought here that the ending of the National Republican Convention at Chicago was due to the Blaine influence, and that it foreshadows his re-nomination.

Congress was organized quietly, and in a manner becoming the dignity of that body on its centennial anniversary, despite the bloodshed in the Democratic caucus and the anticipation of a deadlock in the Senate—the only interruption being from a religious enthusiast, who, at the moment of most intense silence in the House, chanted the doxology in a plaintive solo, greatly to the amusement of fully 5000 spectators; the poor man was cared for by the police, but he succeeded in favoring the President with the same tune at his reception. As usual on such occasions, many of the desks were burdened with beautiful floral favors, the gifts of admiring friends.

Only brief sessions of Congress were held the past week, as the committees have not yet been formed; Speaker Carlisle says that he hopes to be able to announce the House committees before the holiday recess; but he has a very difficult task before him, for there are about 143 new members to place. It is a remarkable fact that two thirds of the chairmen of the House Committees of the last Congress were decapitated by their constituents. A plausible reason for these changes is that the important Congressmen, in dividing the spoils, did not have enough offices to distribute; and so many familiar faces are missing from the places that will probably know them no more forever.

The only Committee yet appointed in either House or Senate is the Committee on Mileage of the House, which, as far as circumstances would permit, is the same as formerly, and this is rather an indication that, as far as practicable, the Speaker means to reappoint the same old committees.

The bitterness engendered among the Democrats over the Doorkeeper's fight has brought to light allegations that both Donelson and Winterbotham, late incumbents of that office, are defaulter, and it is whispered about the capitol corridors that the Republicans will introduce a resolution for the appointment of a committee to investigate the accounts of these officials.

It is believed that the nominations of Lamar for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, Vilas for Secretary of the Interior, and Dickinson for Postmaster General will be confirmed without difficulty by the Senate.

The Evangelical Alliance of the United States, embracing 2000 delegates, and numbering among its members many of the most eminent divines of the country, held its session in the Capital the past week, and the occasion was a season of glorious spiritual edification to thousands of Christians believers whose privilege it was to attend these meetings.

One of the most pleasant events of the meeting of the Alliance was the President's reception of the organization in a body, the members being personally introduced to the Chief Executive by Wm. E. Dodge. When it came the turn of the Rev. Dr. Burchard, who made the famous alliterative allusion in reference to rum, Romanism and rebellion, in the last Presidential campaign, a general smile went around, and it was especially bright on the faces of Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland, both of whom extended a very cordial greeting to the noted divine, who also appeared to share fully the spirit of the situation.

The Barnwell People relates the following incident concerning Capt. Stoney:

The following story of Capt. W. K. Stoney has never been in print, but it is too good to remain longer private property. As The People gives it to the world and vouchers for its truthfulness. During the late unpleasantness Capt. Stoney was a member of Gen. Hagood's military family. Then as now he was a capable officer, and there as now he was compelled by their slightness to wear eye-glasses. At the battle of Port Walthall Junction, near Petersburg, in May 1864, while the Brigade was advancing upon the enemy, Capt. Stoney was severely wounded, a rifle ball passing through his body. Gen. Hagood saw him fall and sent Capt. P. K. Molony, his Adjutant, to ascertain the extent of his injuries and render him such assistance as he could. Just as Capt. Molony reached him Capt. Stoney faintly and Capt. Molony thought all was over with his comrade. He followed Gen. Hagood, who was directing the forward movement in person, and said "Your Bill is dead." Capt. Stoney rallied, however, and was carried back to Petersburg by the ambulance corps before the engagement ended.

It was several days before pressing military duties gave Gen. Hagood an opportunity to visit him in his quarters. He found him comfortably quartered in the house of a well-to-do family and tenderly cared for by a good motherly Virginia lady. Gen. Hagood expressed his great pleasure in finding him alive and in such excellent lands and tried to comfort him with the hope of early recovery. Capt. Stoney didn't have much to say, on account of the nature and severity of his wound, but his good nurse-spoken volumes when she said to Gen. Hagood, "wilt is much better, General, and will get well. Give several young ladies called to see him this morning, and as soon as they were introduced, before he said a word to them, he called for his spectacles." Her prophesy proved true and Capt. Stoney has done the State as good service in peace as he did in war.

The Bible Association of South Carolina was organized at Columbia last week. It is the outcome of a convention of the Bible societies of the State, which met at the N. M. C. A. rooms, in Columbia on Thursday last, with the Rev. William Martin, president of the Columbia Bible Society, in the chair.

Delegates were present from the Abbeville Bible Society and four of its branches societies, Greenwood, Troy, Two West, Long Cane, and also from Cedar Springs, Blackstock, Charleston, Chester, Cheraw, Columbia, Darlington, Horry, Sumter, Union counties, and the Union Benevolent societies of Fairfield and Richland.

The Rev. Alexander McLean D. D., secretary of the American Bible Society, and the Rev. T. B. Law, district superintendent for North and South Carolina for the same society, were also present and took part in the proceedings of the convention.

The Rev. John Kershaw, of Sumter, was elected president, and Dr. John Forrest, of Charleston, secretary of the Bible Association.

The following were elected officers for the ensuing year: The Rev. William Martin, president; the Rev. E. T. Horn, D. D., vice president in First judicial circuit, and the other circuit; Mr. R. D. Sem, secretary, and an executive committee of five, of which the Rev. N. M. Woods is chairman.

The Rev. Dr. Woods delivered an address of welcome to the delegates. Reports were received from delegates of the work being done by the auxiliaries, and on Friday evening the Rev. Dr. McLean, secretary of the American Bible Society, and Dr. Forrest, of Charleston, addressed a public meeting in the Baptist Church.

Hardships of a Western Editor.

"Our paper is two days late this week," writes a Nebraska editor, "owing to an accident to our press. When we started to run the edition Wednesday night, as usual, one of the gey ropes gave way, allowing the forward gliderlike to fall and break as it struck the floor flopper. This, of course, as any one who knows anything about a press will readily understand, left the gang plank with only a flip flap to support it, which also dropped and broke off the wapper check. This loosened the flanking from between the ramrod and the flibber snatcher, which also caused trouble. The report that the delay was caused by overindulgence in intoxicating stimulants by myself is a tissue of falsehoods, the peevish appearance of our right eye being caused by our going into the latheway of the press in our anxiety to start it, and pulling the coupling pin after the slap bang was broken, which caused the dingus to rise up and well in the optic. We expect a brand new glider flake on this afternoon's train."—Chicago Tribune.

No man ever offended his own conscience, but first or last it was revenged on him for doing it.

Only a Women's Voice.

The bell had rung and the car was about to start on its down town trip from the Exposition grounds yesterday afternoon, when he boarded the car. It did not require more than a glance to convince every one who saw him that he was drunk—very much so, in fact. He sank into an unoccupied seat in the corner, leaning his weary head against the fare box and in a moment was in that stupor which few much whisky prodigies, the driver evidently knew him and smiled as he said: "I'll attend to you when we get down here a piece."

In a few moments the car stopped and the driver stepped inside, shook the sleeper and told him in an amiable tone of voice to wake up and get off. But the passenger did neither. Then a gentleman next to him endeavored to arouse him, but beyond a muttered remark that could not be understood he remained a fixture in his seat.

This sort of thing was becoming monotonous when a little woman was seen approaching the car. A slight rain was falling and she dimly picked her way across the muddy street and stepped upon the car. She glanced inside but did not enter, and spoke but one word—"John." It was not a loud "John," but through the befuddled brain of that drunken sleeper it seemed to flash, penetrating and starting into life every faculty, and as though an electric battery had completed the circuit directly beneath him, he sprang up, and as gracefully as was possible he left the car supported by that little woman, whose voice had almost saved him.

The moral of this little incident can be arranged to suit the taste, but the only moral that the female voice made such an effort to convey, cannot be denied.

How to Cure Colds.

First: If a man with the flu has on a new hat, and you have on an old one, change hats with him. This relieves the pressure on the head.

Second: If he happens to be a conventional-looking tramp remark on a loud tone: "It's too bad, but there's not a drop of brandy in the crowd. In case cases out of ten he will walk off using healthy, coherent and muscular Anglo-Saxon.

Third: Should the patient only have a slight attack and regain consciousness, tell him it is not so bad, for him to have in that way. This will undoubtedly make him get up and take off his coat. Then run.

Fourth: Give him plenty of air. This kind of cold is infectious, and often his mouth. Then get a stretch of cloth.

If he won't open his mouth, get a glove-stretcher. That'll make him open his mouth.

Fifth: Carry him into a steam-bath or "fitter's" shop. No man was ever known to come out of one with a flu. —Sax's Pencil and Wagon.

For a Child's Cold.

This being the season for hard colds, I must tell you how I keep them pretty well at bay. When a child sneezes, saying he can't breathe through his nose, I toast him at the fire. Not only the feet but the spinal column, is well warmed. Then he must persist in smelling from the ammonia bottle till he has no difficulty in breathing, the ammonia having penetrated the air passages, causing more sneezing and a copious catarrhal discharge. Then, before tucking up in a warm bed, I give him from three to five drops of camphor on a little sugar, with all the water desired as a drink. I thought my ammonia cure for a cold was wholly original till a friend told me of curing her catarrh of several years' standing with its use, merely inhaling very freely of it both night and morning. Its pungent odor I have found very beneficial when suffering from an attack of tichidoureaux.—Finnish Fair show.

Every declaration of President Cleveland indicates that his means business in the matter of tariff revision. It is related that when the students of the University of Virginia, flanked by the Democratic Congressmen from that State, waited on the President and invited him to attend the commencement at the University on the 27 of next June he said he would so provided Congress adjourned by that date. Congressman Geo. D. Wise, expressed the hope that Congress would adjourn by that date, and then asked the President if he wanted adjournment before the supplies was reduced. The President is reported as quickly responding: "No indeed, I would rather have you stay there until doomsday than fail to do that." In other words, he would fight it out on that line if it takes all summer.—Ed.

Paul Pinding.

You have all heard the story of the painter of olden time who exposed his picture to the public criticism, and put a paint brush under that anybody might point out any particular feature he did not approve. Of course the stupid man soon found out that everybody had some fault to find and his picture was totally obliterated. Just as it was with that artist's picture, so it is with the life-work of the majority. Somebody will be pretty sure to take a crooked and distorted view of our characters and doings, however meritorious they may be. Some will do this willfully and maliciously, others through misunderstanding.

Words of Wisdom.

The world is a book, the language of which is unintelligible to many people.

Have the courage to wear your old clothes until you can pay for new ones.

If the keynote of all your conduct to others had its spring in a fine self-reverence, there would be no discourtesies.

Only the true can really be brave, only the righteous can walk through the darkness and face with a serene soul the mystery of life.

Many a man shall never cease talking about small sacrifices he makes; but he is a great man who can sacrifice everything and say nothing.

It pays best in the midst of the greatest preoccupations to keep in hand continually a certain reserve of time which is not absolutely set apart for any appointed task.

The only way to shine, even in this false world, is to be modest and unassuming. Falsehood may be a thick crust, but in course of time truth will find a place to break through.

Talk about those subjects you have had long in your mind, and listen to what others say about subjects you have studied but recently. Knowledge and timber should not be much used till they are seasoned.

Enthusiasm is the glow of the soul; enthusiasm is the lever by which men are raised above the average level and enterprise, and become capable of great and noble achievements, which, but for it, would be quite impossible.

He that has never changed any of his opinions has never corrected any of his mistakes, and he who was never wise enough to find out any mistakes in himself will assuredly not be circumspect enough to excuse what he reckons mistakes in others.

The cultivation of a good moral spirit demands as a first requisite that the conditions of health be observed. The disposition that claims sympathy on the ground of some supposed hardship of one's lot is unjust. Indifference. A sensible observation of life, gentle laws is frequently the one thing needed to transform a deluded man into a bright and cheerful one.

Lieut. Harrington, who fell at the Custer massacre, married one of the most popular belles of West Point. His wife could not realize that he was dead and has resolutely held out that he will even yet return to her. She brooded over his absence so much that her mind became affected, and in February, 1885, she very mysteriously disappeared from her home in Dallas, Tex. Nothing had been heard of her until her return the other day to her sister. For three years her mind has been a blank. She has wandered about from place to place, supporting herself by doing the most menial work. At last she seemed to regain her reason, and the remembrance of her sister flashed across her mind. She wrote to her and stated her condition. Her sister went to her at once and found her in poverty and looking as if she were 60 years of age, instead of 37. She is now receiving the best attention and is in a condition to recover her mind.

The great mass of the Pennsylvania Democrats are delighted with the tone of the President's message and they demand that Randall and his misguided followers shall fall in line. Should the apostle of protection prove ugly and obstinate, an organized effort will be made to have him defeated at the next election. Randall is realizing his situation and it is generally thought that he will pull quietly in the traces, knowing full well that any kicking against the President's policy means political death for him.—Ed.
