means of reaching the inaccessible parts of the earth at some future period after the full development of its powers. We have had any quantity of experience in ballooning in a small way, and the main thing which has kept it alive is the gratification the public has experienced in witnessing ascensions. Viewing the matter from the standpoint, something more should be done, some. ger thing on a grander scale, and that which lies nearest within reach seems to be an ocean vovage."

PROFESSOR KING'S THEOPY. "I think the voyage can be successfully accomplished. Prof. Wise said that he thought the trip could be made in three or four days, and gave as his reason the theory that three miles above the water there were two constant, rapid currents of air, one going west and one going east. His plan was to get in the east current and then the only difficulty would be to keep the balloon in the air a sufficient length of time. Now, there is nothing to support this theory and I do not base my offer upon it. The general direction of the wind on the ocean is east and I feel confident that the balloon would reach its final destination when once started on its way and for a certainty it would not again come in more than ordinary skill and judgement and a balloon of large proportions fitted up with unusual appliances. It will have to be capable of floating in the air a number of weeks. It will start upon an errand the true nature of which we have previous practical knowledge. We would probably encounter a storm the effect of which we can only imagine. We would have constant waste of water beneath us which we may be driven by unforeseen circumstances. We may be blown north or south out of our course and so be delayed in reaching our destination. But not withstanding all this I think it can be safely accomplished, and that the accomplishment of this feat will be fruitful of discoveries of the greatest value to science as related to me-
