SUIT ARISES ABOUT MULES

A law suit has developed over two mules between J. P. Newton and W. E. Gore. J. P. Newton is successor to the firm of Newton & Hall, horse dealers, and it was from the firm that the mule in question was purchased. J. P. Newton has succeeded to the rights of the firm and owns all of the chattel mortgages and notes secured by them taken by the firm when they ran a horse business some time ago.

A claim and delivery action was recently commenced by J. P. Newton against W. E. Gore to recover the possession of two mules described in a chattel mortgage from Gore to Newton & Hall. The sheriff, acting under the claim and delivery writ, seized the mules some time ago and the defendant promptly gave the bond required by law to retain the possession of the mules and later served his answer which reads as follows, in substance:

1st: That on or about the 29th of November, 1919 the plaintiff P. H. Newton, approached this defendant and desired to sell this defendant a mule, and after some negotiation the plaintiff agreed to sell and this defendant agreed to buy of the plaintiff one iron gray mule about five years old, of the size and description to match a mule this defendant then had in his possession and owned, and it appearing that the plaintiff was unable at that time to deliver the mule purchased and sold, it was agreed that the said plaintiff would loan this defendant one bay horse mule, with the understanding that this defendant had not purchased said mule, but held him as the plaintiff's property pending the delivery of the mule actually bought, and under these circumstances this defendant executed and delivered the papers set out in the plaintiff's complaint to the plaintiff, in breach of his promise and contrary to the agreement to purchase and sell, he neglected and refused and still neglects and refuses to deliver the mule actually purchased by this defendant from him so that this defendant alleges:

(a) That the note and mortgage set out in plaintiff's complaint is void and should be delivered up and cancelled, for the reason that it was without consideration and still is without consideration; (b) that the said papers were obtained by the plaintiff from this defendant by deception and fraud on the part of the plaintiff, in representing that if this defendant would execute and deliver the paper, the mule above described as purchased and sold would be promptly delivered and substituted for the bay horse mule, which was never purchased or sold, but loaned,—the plaintiff then and there knowing that this defendant was unversed in the legal effect of signing papers of the tenor set out in plaintiff's complaint.

2nd: That this defendant does not claim title to the bay horse mule described in the plaintiff's complaint, and is ready and willing to deliver the same up to the plaintiff, and is willing and ready to carry out his contract of purchase and sale on the delivery by the plaintiff to this defendant of the mule actually purchased and sold.

The case is thus tied up and will remain so until the same is threshed out in the court of common pleas, probably at the next term, or the first term in 1923.

Business men of Spartanburg will make a tour of this section of the state some time in the month of August. While they are trying to advertise their section and its products before the people of this section of the state, there is a good opportunity for us to advertise ourselves to them, and we ought to take advantage of this trip just as much as they will.

NEWS OF DEATH HERE BY RADIO

In Columbia:
South Carolina today mourns the death of Warren G. Harding.
Partizanship and politics forgotten and cast aside, the state joins with the other states of the union in the country's grief. From all—high and low—there goes out to the bereaved family the sympathy of folk that understand. Where there is sorrow is holy ground and South Carolina treads there today in reverence.

As sign and symbol of a commonwealth's mourning the blue flag of the state with the flag of the nation today will fly at half mast from the staff on the State House dome, from the university buildings and other state institutions. In like manner in every town and city of the state flags on postoffices and government buildings will droop in evidence of the grief that grips the land at its chief executive's death.

From persons in public life whom the course of events had brought into personal acquaintance with Mr. Harding there will go to the bereaved family in San Francisco messages of condolence.

Word of the president's death reached Columbia last night via the Associated Press within a few minutes after his death and as the night wore on the news spread throughout the city. Some time later various persons listening in on the wireless picked up the broadcast bulletin of Mr. Harding's death. Others were told. Shocked and but half believing, citizens who had known the chief executive only from the newspapers expressed their sorrow and their sympathy. The governor, mayor, judges, a United States senator, United States representatives told of Mr. Harding's death voiced the grief that wells up in hearts that are large enough to remember that all was great and good of the man. In South Carolina were men who called him friend.

"I am profoundly shocked and grieved at the news and death of President Harding," Governor McLeod said last night when informed of the chief executive's sudden death. "I have felt that the crisis had been safely passed and that the president was well on the way to recovery. My deepest sympathy and the sympathy of the state of South Carolina go out to his bereaved family in their great sorrow. While differing in views of policies and politics I had and can express a genuine appreciation of Mr. Harding for his patriotism and his earnest desire to serve and to promote the best interests of his country."

The flag of the state, the governor announced, would be lowered to half mast as a formal tribute to the dead president and the governor today will send to San Francisco a telegram expressing his and the state's grief at Mr. Harding's death.

GETS ADVANCE WORTH WHILE

S. H. Harrelson, of Green Sea, S. C., last week took to the cooperative warehouse, his first curing of primings or sand-lugs.

He did not keep a record in his memory of the weight of this first lot he delivered, but he could remember the very nice advance he got on this. The tobacco was in three grades and on these he got advances of nine, seventeen and twenty cents per pound, according to grade.

Mr. Harrelson is pleased at his success with the association this year. He says that last year he recalls that tobacco just as good as this sold on the auction floors for less than the advances that he got on this, and he will of course get the rest of the value of his tobacco as other payments are made.

IN LOVING MEMORY

On July the 16th, 1923, death visited the home of Mr. Wade Barnhill and took from him his loving daughter Artes. She was sick on Saturday afternoon and was taken to Marion to the hospital on Sunday morning. She lived till Monday night. All was done for her that could be done we feel sure. She suffered what no tongue can tell. Her remains were laid to rest last Wednesday in Rehobeth cemetery in the presence of a number of sorrowing relatives and friends.

Dear Artes, your place here on earth cannot be filled, your bright face and precious smiles are gone and you are waiting for us to come to you and we intend by the grace of God to join you in the happy land. She has suffered her last pain and is now sweetly resting in the arms of Jesus. May glorious sunbeams always kiss the soil that covers her last resting place.

Ethel Johnson.

RACKET CAUSES EXCITEMENT

Last Sunday morning, those who were about the streets at an early hour heard a most unusual noise which was hard to locate. It was somewhere in the Taylor building on Main Street.

The racket was described as that which could be produced by a bumblebee increased to about one million his usual size. Those who heard it and wanted to know what it meant said that the noise might come from the working of an electric fan in need of grease and if it proceeded from this cause then the machine might run hot and set the building afire.

It was finally decided that the noise came from the corner of the Sutherland Furniture Store, in a room on the second floor occupied as a bed room by W. D. Lawrimore, a tobacco buyer on the Conway market. John T. Proctor, the town policeman, was called in and he awakened Lawrimore by calling up through the window.

In the course of time the difficulty was located in a closet where one of the fixtures had gone wrong and a few minutes work stopped the fuss.

MAPLE LOCAL NEWS:

The Maple School Improvement Association met Thursday night last. A short program and an address by Mr. D. L. Lewis, State Supervisor of Rural Schools was the feature. The following article, of which the author is unknown was found on the desk and read to the audience by the president of the association: "S. L. Moore said to Joe Jordan that Grier Cox told S. T. Smith in the presence of Supt. E. C. Allen, that J. Hamp Long had stated to John Anderson that he overheard Miss Mattie Thomas tell Miss Gray as a secret that R. M. Jenrette had quoted in the Conway papers as saying to Amos Long that Wilbur Jones was going to consent with Coker Anderson and Miss Ruth Phipps that the best thing to do every other Thursday night was to attend the Maple School Improvement Association."

The Maple B. Y. P. U. is large and is still growing. We now have on roll fifty or more members. Many of these are from Good Hope and Poplar. Our aim is to make our Union the largest in the County. At our meeting Sunday afternoon Miss Lula Moore was elected Assistant Bible Reader's Leader, so if Mrs. Cox should happen to be absent Miss Moore will serve in her stead.

The Good Hope Quartette, composed of Messrs. M. C., Bert and Hallie Holmes and Kelly Dorman were present and sang some two or three hymns. Messrs. M. C. Holmes and Kelly Dorman made short but interesting talks. The church was filled with young folks from several nearby communities.

S. T. Smith, Boyd Jollie and James Jordan spent Saturday and Sunday in Georgetown, returning in time for the B. Y. P. U. Sunday afternoon.

Rev. T. H. Patterson will fill his regular appointments here next Saturday night and Sunday.

FOR CHILD HEALTH

Dr. Richard L. DeSaussure, representative of the Child Health association, is visiting Horry and Kershaw counties to determine in which of the counties a child health unit will be established, the expenses of which will be borne by the association, according to information given out yesterday by the state health office.

Three counties, Chester, Kershaw and Horry, are making bids for the unit. Dr. S. J. Crumrine, who is also a representative of the association, has recently visited Chester county. The announcement as to which of these three counties will be selected for the establishment of the unit is awaited with considerable interest.

Dr. James A. Hayne, state health officer, in speaking of the visits of these two representatives to counties in the state, said the state health office had expressed its intention of cooperating in the work. It is not known at what date the association will announce its decision as to which county has been selected for the unit.—The State.
