SHERIFF SETS OFF HOMESTEAD

There were further developments last week in the S. O. Jenrette store seizure at Loris, S. C., when the sheriff decided to set off the homestead as claimed by the debtor and thus the executions would apply to what might be left over.

It was reported that nothing was left over after the setting off of the homestead.

This will end the warrant which was issued last week against the deputy, as it appears that no delivery of the goods as sold was ever made, although the goods were auctioned, the highest bid was made by the deputy himself, doubtless because some question had been raised about the homestead right.

under contract with the association, as to its legal aspects under the exact terms of that contract; there appears one thing that the association has overlooked that may be a controlling factor in deciding this matter for the present season. We will now try to explain what this point is that they have overlooked.

There can be no doubt that the landlord can, if he will, control the sale of all tobacco raised on his land, for he will sell his own share on the cooperative plan as he ought to do under the contract he made, and can cause the tenant to agree, when he lets him the land, to sell his share with the landlord in the association. The tenant or share cropper, having agreed to sell his crop in that way, makes it possible for the whole crop to go to the association, under and by means of the two contracts. Now as the association had not enforced the claim to the laborer's part last year, for the reason which they have only now advanced; and having given no previous notice that they would raise the claim this year, until after the farming plans and contracts for the year of 1923 had been made, and the crop actually produced and being marketed before making their position; can they successfully at this time establish their claim to this side share of tobacco? They stood by and said nothing as the contracts were being made with the croppers on lands, they stood by as the tobacco was being cultivated and cured, and now when it is being sold they come in and lay claim to something that the landlord cannot give them, and they say that they will make him pay the five cents per pound.

Even if the association can enforce this claim that they now make in the courts of the land, will they not be placing on their own members a burden that those members will resent, under the circumstances existing this year as we have explained above? Will it pay the association to hold up the five cents per pound out of other tobacco of the members that they may have in hand to settle off this claim for the five cents per pound of outside shares on other lands?

When the one half of a tobacco crop that has been raised by a laborer on the farm is set apart to him as his pay for raising the crop, the law says that this share belongs to the laborer and that he shall have the right to dispose of it as he sees fit. The landlord is powerless at this time to make him go and sell it in the association.

There is another trouble which may arise in this matter. Farm labor is scarce and getting more and more so as negroes leave the South for what they seem to think are better chances in the North. It is not every farm laborer that yet understands the benefits to come to him by cooperative selling. It will take a still longer time to open his eyes to this great advantage, and until this can be done there is no way to force him to agree with the land owner to sell his share of the crop with the land owner with the association. The landowner must let his fine tobacco lands lie idle. He has more than he can work himself and he cannot get farm labor because they had rather work at something else than to go into something they do not understand. In this way valuable lands may go untended and be of no service to anybody.

In our humble opinion this claim as made this year is going far away from the right course the association should take. They should reconsider the matter and change their plans and if they still think they are entitled to have this tobacco, or the five cents per pound damages for it, they should announce now that they will enforce it next season, but will be content this year with the landlord's part of it only, in all cases where the laborer refuses to come in with his share voluntarily.

HAS COTTON OPEN

The second open cotton for the season of 1923 to be sent in to the Horry Herald office, came from William Marlow who is operating the lands of George J. Holliday, at Galivants Ferry.

The letter which brought this second open boll seen here this season, was dated on August 8th and was received here in Conway on August 9th. This boll from Galivants Ferry must have been open about the same time as the boll from the farm of S. W. Martin was open and picked; but the Herald has no way of telling which was open first but can only record the first bolls in the same order in which they are received at the Herald plant.

RAISES POINTS ON SHARE CROP

(By an Ex Tobacco Grower)

Last year the farmer who worked for a share of his crop and he had not signed the association contract, sold where he pleased and the landlord was not held to account at the rate of five cents per pound, if he, the landlord, is under contract with the association and his farmer sells his half on the independent floors. This article states reasons why the claim, whether legal or not, should not be enforced this year.—Editor.

There seems to be some conflict of opinion about the rights of the Cooperative Tobacco Association in the share crops raised by farmers working lands on that plan.

It is admitted by the association in the start, that if they really had any claim to the share of the cropper who had not signed the cooperative contract, they did not endeavor to enforce that claim last season. Last year the tenant's one half of the crop when parcelled off to him as his wages for raising the crop was disposed of by him in whatever way he chose and the landlord from whom he had obtained his land was not held responsible for the damages of five cents per pound provided for in the landlord's contract, speaking now of a landlord who signed up in the association while his share cropper had not signed up.

It has been announced in a number of newspapers recently that the association have now put forth the claim that the association is due to have and sell the laborer's portion as well as the landlord's portion in cases where the landlord is under the contract and the laborer is not. They assign as a reason for not having enforced this idea last year, that contract for farming lands had been made before the association contracts had been signed, and therefore they did not claim the laborer's shares of the tobacco crops last year. They now announce that they are entitled to all of the tobacco raised on the lands of their members, and this seems to be the substance of the claim as now made, regardless of whether the lands were rented out for a cash rental or on shares of the crops.

Laying aside the direct question as to whether the cooperative contracts will cover the shares of the workers on shares where those workers are not
