My trouble was with the stomach; I was full and the water was so good that I felt as if I had been washed clean. "From then on the animal is tamed, and if properly treated, unless he becomes 'mushy,' will remain a faithful servant. The question now is whether you want the best broken for work or for the circus. If it is a question of pulling tree stumps or of moving flat cars or of carrying lumber, all that is necessary is to let him see the other elephants at work."—New York Mail and Express.

Privileges of Free Dreams. Nobody associates fire with spiders in any pleasant way. I have often wondered at it, wondered why it was that to sit before a blaze and dream has been by a common consent referred as the privilege of very young girls who, chin in hand, rest there, or as the privilege of hachelors building castles that are one day to shelter the lady whom they love. PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S NEW PRIVATE SECRETARY.

From the New York Independent.

WILLIAM LOEB, JR., was born October 9, 1863, in Albany, N. Y., of German parentage. His education was in the Albany common schools and high school. He then studied shorthand and worked for newspapers and was for a while Bishop Doane's amanuensis. He established a law reporting business and went actively into politics, was made official stenographer for the Albany Assembly, and was private secretary to several Republican leaders of New York. Mr. Roosevelt, when Governor of New York, made him his private and confidential secretary, a position due to his ability and acquaintance with public men of affairs. When Mr. Roosevelt became President Mr. Loeb was retained as his Assistant Secretary and was made Secretary on the elevation of Mr. Cortright to the Cabinet.

BIRTHPLACE OF IRON INDUSTRY

An Interesting Casting Owned by the City of Lynn.

Among the relics in the possession of the city of Lynn, Mass., is the first kettle cast in the Sanguis Iron Works, which was the first successful institution of the kind in this country. The works were built in 1642, at the head of navigation of the Sanguis River, and what was known as the iron works' tract covered the 3000 acres which today includes Lynn and the five surrounding towns. The company which owned and operated these works included among its members several men prominent in Massachusetts at that period, competitors among whom was John Winthrop, Jr., son of Governor John Winthrop.

A table on the site reads as follows:

- THE FIRST IRON WORKS.
- The first successful iron works in the country established here. Foundry erected in 1633. Joseph Jenks built a forge here in 1647, and in 1652 made the dies for the first silver money coined in New England. In 1654 he made the first fine engine in America. Elevated by Lynn Historical Society, 1898.

In the industry, service and salary are not equal terms. The high office was not created for the advantage of the holder, and the calling is degraded into a mere profession when it is made the object of money equivalents. The work of the ministry is more especially in the realm of the moral and spiritual, and therefore can never be "financially compensated in any exhaustive commercial sense." Nevertheless, the minister adapted by conductor and learning to his high calling ordinarily does have, and should have, a salary proportionate to the demands of the field he is filling, and compensations far more satisfactory and worthy of consideration than salaries.

Color in the Arctic.

"My first experience of color in the Arctic," says Frank Wilbert Stokes, in the Century, "led me to believe that, from the most regal purples, golds and crimson of sunlight to the black-purple, grays and gray-greens of storms there existed no intermediate effects. But a sojourn of a year in the north-land proved that Nature's great palette was here set with more varied riches than elsewhere. Especially was this true of the color effects of the long twilight of the approaching winter, the returning light of day, and even in the heart of the polar night."

MALADIES OF THE RULERS.

Nearly Every Monarch Suffers From Some Dangerous Disease.

Mental and physical diseases have in a peculiar measure ravaged royalty; the percentage of afflicted crowned heads being much greater than that of any other group of individuals. Excluding illness of the nature of King Edward's and resembling ourselves to chronic and incurable diseases. It is found that almost every crowned ruler is a sufferer from some dangerous malady.

The czar of Russia has been afflicted with melancholia since his earliest days, and his malady has increased in intensity and in the frequency of its manifestations since his accession to the throne of the Romanoffs. Not all the skill of the renowned mental specialists of Germany, Belgium and France has succeeded in removing the ever present blighting malady of the emperor of all the Russians. It will not be forgotten, moreover, that the present ruler of the Muscovite Empire owes his accession to the mental incapacity of his brother, the natural heir.

Germany's streamer Kaiser lends an embittered life because of his paralyzed arm and an incurable disease of the ear, which will ultimately reach his brain. It will be remembered that the emperor's father, Frederick, succumbed to cancer.

Alfonso of Spain is admitted to be stricken with senility, and it is confidently asserted that the youthful monarch has frequently exhibited signs of insanity.

The Sultan has only very infrequent spells of freedom from melancholia, and harrowing pictures have been drawn of the "kingly malady" reducing Turkey's despotic monarch.

The late King Milan of Serbia was the subject of an ever recurring fit of madness, and the King of Wurtemberg does not enjoy entire sanity. Bavaria's last ruler terminated a wretched existence a frenzied suicide, and that country's present monarch suffers from softening of the brain.

Hapsburgs, Romanoffs, Bourbon and Guelphs have been scourged by the dread disease, which have to a peculiar and striking degree, marked out royalty for their own, and the poisoned blood which has flowed from their veins has cursed a dozen dynasties.

The President's Mended Trousers.

"If you do not believe that Mr. Roosevelt is the most democratic President we have ever had, look at his trousers. I doubt if any of his predecessors ever wore patched garments while occupying the White House."

This was the remark of a visitor at the executive offices the other day as he came out from an interview with the President. Curiosity prompted the man addressed to look at the Presidential trousers when he was admitted, and, sure enough, on the left leg of a pair of neatly creased striped trousers was the evidence that some skilled needle-woman had repaired a rent in the garment. There had been a triangular tear in the leg of the trousers just below the knee, which had been closed very neatly with needle and thread, but the extent of the damage was still plainly visible. As the patched piece was just over the spot where the President received an injury in the trolley accident last summer it looked very much as though the pair of trousers he wore then are still doing duty.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Well Acquainted.

Not long since the notice, "Court adjourned sine die," was posted on the door of a certain court. Some gentleman with an artistic and highly trained sense of humor added a "die" to the word "die" and went on his way rejoicing.

Next day a person who makes a practice of haunting the public buildings and professes acquaintance with every well known man in the vicinity, dropped into the clerk's office.

"See here," he said, "when did Sine shuffle off this mortal coil?"

"What's that?" demanded the astonished clerk.

"When did Sine die? I see the courts are closed on account of it."

"Oh," said the clerk, pulling himself together, "he died yesterday. Did you know him?"

"Know him? I should say I did! Knew his father before him. Too bad, ain't it?"

And Sine's bereaved friend passed out with his burden of sorrow.—Tit-Bits.

Lots of fellows wear themselves out in an effort to have a good time.

Weak?

No matter how long you have been ill, nor how poorly you may be today, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine you can take for purifying and enriching the blood.
