

What a Woman Can Do.

She can talk faster than a man can hear.

She can say 'No' and stick to it all the time.

She can also say 'No' in such a low, soft voice that it means 'yes.'

She can eat her breakfast in bed and enjoy it. This is something that no man can do.

She can sharpen a lead-pencil, if you give her plenty of time and plenty of pencils.

She can see in a great big selfish hulk qualities which he does not and never did possess.

She can dance all night in a pair of shoes two sizes too small for her and enjoy every minute of the time.

She can pass a display window of a dry goods store without stopping—if she is running to catch a train.

She can appreciate a kiss from her husband seventy-five years after the marriage ceremony has taken place.

She can walk half the night with a colicky baby in her arms without expressing the desire to murder the infant.

She can suffer abuse and neglect for years, which one touch of kindness or consideration will drive from her recollection.

She can go to church and afterwards tell you all of what every woman in the congregation had on and in some rare instances can give a faint idea what the text was.

She can look her husband square in the eyes when he tells her cock-and-bull stories about being 'detained at the office,' without betraying in the least that she knows him to be a colossal liar.

She can rumple up $17,000 worth of dress goods and buy a spool of thread, with an order to have it delivered four miles away, in a style that will transfix the proprietor of the establishment with admiration.

She can go into convulsions at the sight of a mouse, and five minutes later she can listen to her husband's story of his financial ruin with a loving smile on her face and with a courage in her heart that comes not within the knowledge of men.

She can—but what's the use! A woman can do anything and everything, and do it well. She can do more in a minute than a man can do in an hour, and do it better. She can make the alleged lords of creation bow to her own sweet will, and they will never know it. Yes, a woman can do everything, with but one exception: she cannot climb a tree.

A SAD CASE.—A Western paper is in receipt of a short story from Chicago, which is so full of misery that there is no fun in it anywhere but it is told as a warning to ladies to be careful how they accuse servant girls of crime. A man from the Chicago carpet company was sent to a house recently to put down a carpet, and in the work it was necessary to remove a large mirror, and in doing so a beautiful breast-pin fell upon the carpet, which the man gave to the lady of the house. Instead of a smile of thankfulness from the lady, which the man expected, the lady fell down on her knees sobbing and praying, and asking God to forgive her for her injustice. The man was paralyzed, and thought the woman was crazy, but she explained to him, as she put on her cloak to go down town, that a servant girl had been accused of stealing the breast-pin, and was serving a term in the penitentiary for it.

The woman hustled down to her husband's office and showed the pin, and in an hour, work was begun to release the poor girl from prison, where she had been for many months. Who can picture the sufferings of that poor, honest girl, in prison, serving a sentence for a crime which she did not commit, and who can realize the agony of the woman who sent her there? The paper trusts that the poor girl will have been released before this is read, and that the wealthy woman will amply reward her for the suffering she has endured. Such cases are too frequent in this world, where innocence is made to suffer on circumstantial evidence.

—Absence diminishes the ordinary passions and increases the great ones, as the wind extinguishes the candle and lights the fire.
