Had I Never.

Had I never, never known thee, Then my heart had been my own, And the voice that now bewails thee Learned to breathe another tone; Like the stars that shed their glory, O'er a dark and troubled sea. Or like some long remembered story, Cherish'd art thou still to me.

Had I never, never seen thee, With the beauty o'er thy brow; With so many friends around thee, Smiling all as thou art now; I had never known the blighting, Of a moment the to part, Or fled from all delighting To a lonely broken heart.

Had I never, never lov'd thee. With a soul entrancing pow'r; flad I never knelt before thee, In that bright and glorious hour: I had never known the sorrow That no joys can now beguile, Or felt how cold and cheerless Twas to live without thy smile.
