Items of Interest and Personal Mention Caught Over the Wireless on the Streets of Anderson

Committee Has Halted Its Work.

During the absence of J. S. Acker, clerk of the county board, the committee appointed to examine into the whiskey petitions has been forced to halt its work. Mr. Acker, who is in Johnson City, Tenn., will have returned by Monday morning and the committee will then resume its labors and will probably be able to report its findings within the next week or possibly earlier. This has been a stupendous task and the three men entrusted with the undertaking have found it to be very tedious. They are not yet ready to give out any intimation of what they have discovered.

Force Work Through Night.

The large force of men engaged in the construction of the new Blue Ridge station on Main street worked through the night Friday night in an effort to get the first floor of the new building completed. They have progressed to the place where Friday night they were pouring the cement for the floor and it was important that this work be finished in as quick time as possible. This station will be a handsome structure when it is completed and it will be so arranged that travelers will be supplied with every possible convenience. Its location is another strong point and it will certainly be a great improvement over the present inadequate quarters.

Mr. Frickhoeffer Returns Tomorrow.

C. W. Frickhoeffer, who had in charge the construction of the handsome Bell Telephone building in this city, will return tomorrow from his home in Birmingham, Ala., and will spend several days here before leaving for another contract. The handsome building which Mr. Frickhoeffer erected here is a credit to the city and the telephone officials are well pleased with it. They are now making preparations for putting their installation gang on the work of changing the apparatus but say that it will be about October 1, before they can occupy the new quarters.

Everyone Enjoyed The Tennessee Trip.

Quite a large number of Anderson county people returned yesterday from Johnson City, Tenn., where they went on the excursion which was operated by the Piedmont & Northern lines. Among those to make the trip from this section were H. S. Trescott and Herbert Martin of Pendleton and when these gentlemen passed through Anderson yesterday, en route to their home, they said that they had never enjoyed a trip more than they did this one.

Prominent Men Here Yesterday.

The best known of the visitors attending the Travelers Protective Association rally, held in Anderson last night, was W. A. Livingstone of Orangeburg, who is president of the State T. P. A. and Thos. B. Pearce of Spartanburg, who is also high in the offices of the State Association. These gentlemen have both visited Anderson a number of times and they always expect and receive a very cordial welcome here.

Condition Of A Starr Citizen.

News has come from the condition of J. H. Starr and grave fears are entertained for his recovery. Mr. Starr has been ill for some time but that his condition is serious has not been generally known. Friends of his hope that he may yet rally and regain his health.

Miss Chiles Is To Return Here.

Miss Lucia Chiles left yesterday morning for Asheville, N. C., where she will spend the summer months with her brother. Miss Chiles has announced that she will return to Anderson in September and reopen her music school at the home of Judge W. F. Cox. For the last five or six years she has conducted one of the best music schools in the city and has had much success with a large number of pupils. Anderson people will be glad to learn that this is more a vacation and that she will return next Fall.

Will Improve Towers Street.

The street force has gone to work on North Towers street and a number of improvements are now being made. The street is being widened and will be made as good as any in the city. Cement sidewalk will be laid on one side of the street and a brick wall along the other, while curbing will also be put in and the street properly drained. This will be of much convenience as this street is used by a number of vehicles and before this time has not been in very good shape.

Clouds Yesterday Brought Some Relief.

The few drops of rain and the lowering clouds yesterday afternoon brought some relief to this section after the terrible heat of all day. Every body was in a better humor last night and things livened up in a remarkably short length of time. Some sections of the county probably got some rain and information from other sections of the State was that rain fell. The intense heat of the last few days in Anderson county surpasses anything ever experienced here before.

UNCLE DAVE'S LETTER.

"There are two very important questions which must early confront every thoughtful person. The first is: 'Where did my life come from?' and secondly, 'Where is my life going to?' But there is a third question, equally important, and surely as practical: 'What shall I do with my life?' We may not get satisfactory answers to the first two questions; but that third question is one we can answer for ourselves; for that is something we can decide for ourselves.

"Each man finds himself under the law of necessity to work. It is the Divine order. Life depends upon it. Other life in the world is amply provided for by the Providence of the Creator, but man, of all the animals, must work in order to live. Each man finds that he is under the necessity of constant toil in order to maintain his own life. But he also discovers that he is under the law of brotherhood, and must work to help on the cause of humanity. 'No man liveth to himself. We are all so related that our work must react on all others.

"The most serious question which every youth must meet on the threshold of life is this: 'What shall I do with my life? What shall be my job?' To help you answer that question I will say that you need follow your bent. Each of you has one. You have at least one. In all probability you have only one. That is, you have a natural aptitude in one direction. You are best fitted to do some one specific thing. It is very important that you should at the very outset of life rid yourself of the notion that you are very versatile.

"We are all familiar with the old law--'Jack of all trades and good at none.' There is nothing so fatal to success as a futile versatility. Be sure that you can do some one thing, and do that one thing well as you succeed. And you may be well assured that you can do some one thing right at least one talent. Your key to success is to discover what it is. In all probability it is the thing you like. If you like it, you will be more sure to do it well.

"And on the other hand, if you like to do any certain thing and it comes easily, and you do it well, you may be convinced that, in the doing of that thing your life will be a success. One must early learn what he can best do, and then emphatically refuse to be tempted aside from the doing that one thing. We must voluntarily decide to be ignorant of many other things in order that we may be wise in the doing of some one thing.

"Thoreau says that 'the measure of a man's learning will be the amount of his voluntary ignorance.' And he is right. You cannot know everything. You must choose. Your success will depend upon the vigor with which you specialize on some one line of endeavor. A mariner's needle in the factory, before it is polarized, will point in any and all directions, and is of no practical value. After it has been magnetized, it will always invariably point toward the pole--So you will never waver steadily in any direction until you have been polarized by a choice of your ideal career. Then you are something worth while.

"Misery and failure will follow if you try to do the thing you have no taste for. There was much philosophy in the answer ex-President Roosevelt gave to a friend when he was asked how in the world he could do so much work: 'I like my job.' That expressed it. If we like our job, we will get much done and find no friction on the axes.

"Here is the explanation of so much unhappiness. Men try to do the thing for which they have no fitness or taste. My advice is that you keep to what you are by nature. Never desert your line of talent. Be what nature intended you to be and you will succeed. Be anything else, and you will be worse than nothing. Not only the miseries of life are to find their explanation in uncongenial employment, but the failure in life can be traced to the same source.

"No wonder the poet is miserable and a failure when he tries to make horsehoes! No wonder the blacksmith is starving while trying to be a poet.

Do Not Drift Into Job.
"Do not drift into a job. One of the meanest things ever said of me was spoken by a man, who asked by one who had known me as a boy and had lost trace of me and wanted to know what had become of me. He asked this man if he knew what had become of me. His answer was, 'Have you never learned? Why, he drifted into aimless driftwood on the current of life, and at last had never planned a landing place where I had never planned to go. Simply drifted. Implying that I had floated around from being a printer to an insurance agent, a book agent to a Christian Science healer, and then at last drifted into the auction business.

"Do not drift into a job. Think about it. Plan for it. Do not be in too great haste to decide what your life work shall be. Do temporary work, if necessary, to pay expenses, while you are adjusting and finding out just what your settled job shall be. Never take up a lifelong job because some one wants you to. It is fine to have wise advisers, and often your friends may help you to a wise understanding of your own abilities, but never do it just because your friends urge it. "Do not think you must follow in your father's footsteps, and do a thing because he has done it. His tracks may be too big for you, or too small for you. Make tracks of your own. "One of the strongest temptations for a young man in this regard is to go along the line of least resistance. The average youth grows anxious to get on fast. He wants to make money quick. He is anxious to get married and settle in life. And so he quits school at an early age, and goes to college to get a degree. He is taking a short cut to prosperity. In fact, he is taking the long cut to mediocrity and

PRETTY WARM ON THE STREETS

Yes, but it's wonderfully cool and pleasant in the Bee Hive. Four big electric fans keep the air even on the move, and there was one fine Saturday a difference of twelve degrees in the temperature of the store and the streets.

And there are all kinds of desirable summer goods on display that almost makes one feel cool and comfortable just to look at them; and completes the cooling process when one owns and wears them.

Let this store be your summer shopping spot--you'll receive careful, painstaking, intelligent service on even the hottest days.

for some worthy task is not time lost failure.

"Time spent in a wise preparation but gained. Thousands of young men have it ever to regret that they were thus sidetracked from their life plans because they were in too great haste to get to a self-supporting basis. Better go a little slower and carry out your program. You will gain in the end.

"Nine out of ten young men will choose the line of work which will bring them the quickest returns. That explains why the ranks of labor are crowded, and why the few high places of great reward are ever in search of capable occupants. The big reward only follows the long, hard toll. One can learn in an hour to handle a shovel and receive a digger's wage.

Put Originally Into Job.
"It takes years of toil and application to learn a complicated trade and earn the expert's wages. Hence, boys drive grocers' wagons when they ought to be learning a trade. Others are working when they ought to be in school. They are making the fatal error of taking the easiest and quickest way to secure a job. They have not seriously considered what is the one thing for which they may have some unusual fitness. They hurry into life and its responsibilities before they have carefully thought out what is the one line in which they could best win a worthy place after long and careful training. Dean Swift has put this matter in his own quaint and forcible way:

"Brute find out where their talents lie; A bear will not attempt to fly. A rundered horse will oft debate, Before he tries a five-barred gate. A dog by instinct turns aside, Which sees the ditch too deep and wide.

But man we find the only creature Who led by folly, combats nature, Who when she loudly cries, 'Forebear!' With obstinacy fixes there. And where his genius least inclined, Absolutely bends his whole design.

"To help you answer that question, 'What shall I do with my life?' I would say in the second place, put yourself into your job. Go at it with energy. You will fall if you are half-hearted. Throw all your vital power into it. Put originally into your job. Use your brains. Think. Take initiative. Be not afraid to be original. Have self-confidence. Get out of the beaten path. Be yourself. Put thoroughness into your job. You must go to the bottom if you expect to go to the top.

"It is fine to have friends to help you up, if you can hold yourself up, when you are placed there. Otherwise your consciousness will only make you pitiable and despicable when, like Humpty-Dumpty, you take your inevitable tumble. "You must put honesty, law, your job. I mean by that you must give a fair day's work for a fair wage. Do honest work. Scorn to be a deceiver. Be no party to any dishonest measure. You can well afford to lose your job, if you do so to preserve your honor as an honest man."

JAPAN DEMANDING BETTER TREATMENT

Latest Note to the State Department From the East Is Exceedingly Insistent

Washington, June 26.--Japan's protests against the California alien and law, brought conspicuously before the public again by publication of correspondence between the Washington and Tokio governments, was discussed with interest here today in official and diplomatic circles. Secretary Bryan said Japanese note of June 10 last, which re-opened the subject, would be made public with the American reply within a few days.

It is known that Japan, abandoning the idea of negotiating a new treaty to guarantee the property rights to its subjects, now has asked for a reply to its note of August 26 last, in which the United States was pressed to stop the "obnoxious discrimination" resulting from the California legislation.

"There is but one remedy," this note said, "and the Imperial government is unable to escape the conclusion that the duty of applying that remedy devolves solely on the government of the United States."

One phase of the negotiations disclosed in the correspondence which attracted particular interest was said to suggest the possibility of an issue entirely new in the history of the United States. In connection with the promise by the Japanese government to grant land ownership to Americans appeared the words "reserving for the future, however, the right of maintaining the condition of reciprocity with respect to the separate states." This, it was pointed out, appeared to be a distinct reservation by the Japanese government of the right to retaliate directly on the Californians by singling them out among American citizens for exclusion from the right to possess real property in Japan.

"I HAVE BEEN GOVERNOR"

(Columbia Record.)
"I have been governor for the past three years and nobody else has been," said Governor Bleas at St. Matthews. Yes, Mr. Bleas has been governor for the past three years and, in the meantime, almost every part of the machinery of government has been added with, disorganized, put out of gear or broken down completely.

The governor has interfered with the co-ordinate departments of government, the judiciary and the legislature, with the result of gravely impairing their dignity and capacity for usefulness.

He has interfered with and impaired the effect for good of the work of the judges and juries of the state by turning out of the state penitentiary over twelve hundred convicts sent there to expiate crimes of the most aggravated character, running the entire amount from murder to burglary and larceny.

He has interfered with the discipline of the military arm of the government, with the result of disorganizing the national guard and causing the withdrawal from South Carolina's aid and military supplies on the part of the federal government, but the humiliating revocation of the invitation that had already been extended our soldiers to participate in the annual encampment and school of instruction. He has interfered with the administration of the affairs of the state hospital for the insane, with the result of driving from it the able, trusted and experienced head of it and his woman assistant (demonstrated to have been the most faithful and efficient member of the staff) leaving them with its hundreds of afflicted inmates to the protection and care of the least efficient. (And, by the way, when the campaigners open up on the asylum subject, as, we believe, they inevitably will in this campaign "before many more moons," something is going to break loose in South Carolina, or we are no prophet.)

The governor has interfered with the state treasury and its method of raising revenue to keep the wheels of government going, with the result that this state is confronted with the prospect of an absolutely empty treasury in August and the probability of the general assembly having to be called together in extra session to repair the blunder brought about by his veto.

FISHERMAN'S LUCK

J. Hope Smith, Bard of Poplar Tent, Talks Poetically of Concord Fishermen.
Charlotte (N. C.) Observer.
Concord fishermen have won a nook in the fishermen's hall of fame. Their activities and success at the time-honored sport have caused J. Hope Smith, the bard of the Poplar Tent, to break into poetry and immortalize Dave Fowlke's catch of a 25-pound carp in verse. They have pulled the inhabitants of Rocky River, Cold Water, Coddle and Buffalo to the banks as such an alarming rate that they have now centered their activities on the Catawba and their action has created a panic among the fishes of the stream as these lines will show:

"Fisherman's Luck."
Said the cat to the carp, in the Catawba River,
"Where are you going this beautiful day?"
Said the carp, "I am off to the ocean forever.
For I've got to keep out'er Dave Fowlke's way."
Said the cat to the carp, "I think you are clever,
And I want to go with you, for I see very plain,
If all of us fishes don't get out'er this river,
Those Concord fellows will drive us in-selne."
