Munro Appeals Case.

Paris, July 8.—Conclusions were submitted to the tribunal of the Seine today by P. G. Renaud, designated by the public prosecutor to make a report of the case involving Miss Dolan, of Brookline, Mass., Henry Munro, a Paris banker, and the customs department of the United States. He said: "The civil tribunal of the Seine has no power to authorize the Munro bank to give information confidential in its nature. The secret of business affairs and private interests must be respected." Munro was sentenced to jail for refusing to disclose the amounts paid in France by Miss Dolan for dresses seized by the American customs on their arrival in Boston. He has appealed.

CALL TO ARMS COL. STRIBLING

URGES FARMER TO GET READY FOR STATE MEETING TO BE HELD HERE

UNION IS ALIVE

While No Great Acts Are Being Performed Latent Organization Is Powerful

Farmers look up and take notice. The bugle call of reveille is now ringing over hill and dale for the awakening of all ye slumbering farmers union men to shuffle about and get in your trappings and regalia and get ready to line up a strong force to welcome the state union to Anderson on the 21st of July.

Farmers, you have not forgotten the fact that Anderson county led the state in the introduction of the Union, and all the whole country now takes pride in pointing to Anderson as the banner county of the State and a leader in progressive good things.

Like all other organizations of church, school, political reforms and revolutions, the farmers' organizations have their alternate periods of strenuous activities and lethargy.

Yes, the Farmers' Union has passed through several of the hardest fought and most successful battles ever waged by any organization. Victory always came with it peace of mind that induces a period of rest and of sleep that is as necessary with our union as any laborer after a hard day's work, or a soldier after a hard fought battle—but as eternal vigilance is the price of liberty, the old guard of the Farmers' Union—that faithful cordant that has kept up a unit of the Union and pressed the guard through the camp, watching over the banked fires whilst the main rank and file of the Union slumber—now call out to all to rally in line on the 14th of July at Anderson and enjoy the meeting of the old comrades in good works.

Not Dead, But Asleep in Victory
If you believe that the Farmers' Union is dead, just let the price of cotton fall to about six cents and the farm supplies stand at trust or monopoly prices and we will assure you that although the Farmers' Union may be as silent as the tomb of the dead, they will then rise up again with the fire and fury and unity of purpose as of old.

Good Work of Farmers' Organization
Now and then some thoughtless farmer and others ask, "what good have farmers' organizations done for the farmer?"

Now ever mother, son daughter and parent of the whole rural mail route has a practical answer to this slow question every day, and if this great demonstration of good accomplishments by organized farmers is not sufficient, let all such come out on the 14th of July when they can get enough information to convince any reasonable one of the fact that farmers in one form or another have practically gotten, or will soon get all their demands in some reasonable form or other. For instance, we did not get the "sub-treasury" as demanded by the Ocala platform, but we have something better in the name of "regional banks."

Neither have we the "green back currency," but we have something better through the power of the regional banks and the treasurer of the nation who has already placed many millions of dollars for the specific purpose of moving farmers' crops.

Wall Street gamblers, who could breed a panic at will, or set up fictitious prices and rob the farmers of the profits on their products have not yet been put entirely out of business but their panic breeding has been given a little more to our national treasurer, who can fill the needs of money as fast as Wall Street.

Gamblers can reduce the supply of money. The Smith-Lever bill, now nearly through congress is making Wall Street gamblers in cotton tremble in their boots at the thought of these shackles that are sure to control their nefarious steps.

J. C. STRIBLING, Chairman of Committee on Good of the Order Farmers' Union.

MAY ACCEPT TERMS

New Haven Road May Accede To Demands of Government.

Washington, July 8.—The government's anti-trust suit to dissolve the New Haven railroad system may yet be avoided if New Haven officials will accept terms of a bill for the separation of the New Haven and the Boston and Maine, passed by the Massachusetts legislature before it adjourned Tuesday night. Officials here, however, regard it as not improbable that the suit may be filed sometime this month.

Attorney General McReynolds agreed to hold off the suit while the railroad and state came to an agreement, but not later than this month.

Scenes Attending the Costly Fire That Swept Salem, Mass.

Photos by American Press Association.

SALLEM, MASS., almost entirely wiped out by flames, is now gallantly endeavoring to rebuild and resume business. Many places of historical interest were lost, although Nathaniel Hawthorne's birthplace was saved. The loss was $15,000,000 and six lives. The photos show a view of the flames at their height, with survivors watching the destruction of their homes; also refugees removing furniture from their houses.

COTTON RED SPIDER IS ON THE WARPATH

Clemson College Prepares Catechism Covering Questions Asked of the Pest

Clemson College, July 7.—The cotton red spider is on the war path in South Carolina this season. Conditions have been very favorable for the pest's development for several weeks and he has on tomato plants in large numbers and is pouring into the cotton fields. The mite is likely to do much damage if care is not taken. In view of this fact, A. F. Couradi, entomologist of Clemson College, has prepared the following catechism, which covers the questions usually asked about the pest.

- 1. What is the red spider? Answer: A very small, reddish, spinning mite on the under sides of cotton leaves.
- 2. At what season are they injurious? Answer: During dry weather. Keep your eyes open for them when dry weather sets in.
- 3. How does one know when they first appear on cotton? Answer: By the infested leaves turning deep red on the upper surface. Examination of the under surface of such leaves will show the red spider moving about. The earliest sign is that a blood red spot.
- 4. Do they spin webs? Answer: Yes, they work under webs, which are hard to see at first but which can be easily seen when the damage becomes severe.
- 5. How is the damage done? Answer: The leaves become red all over, become distorted and brittle and drop off.
- 6. What parts of the plants are attacked? Answer: The leaves; the lower leaves first.
- 7. How do they spread? Answer: By crawling. No doubt they are also spread by birds, domestic animals, workmen and wind.
- 8. Has the red spider natural enemies? Answer: There are several species of insects that attack them and, during some seasons, do much good.
- 9. What are the food plants of the red spider? Answer: There are more than fifty recorded. Among the most important are the apple, poke weed, cowpea, bean, okra, wild blackberry, jimson weed and others. Violets and poke weed are especially bad because they furnish winter food.
- 10. How is it controlled? Answer: Keep close watch on cotton when dry weather sets in so that you will notice the first signs. Carefully burn the plants showing signs of them. When large spots have become infested use one of the red spider sprays.
- 11. What are these sprays? Answer: Potassium sulphide and lime sulphur solution are considering the best two.
- 12. How are the sprays prepared? Answer: Potassium sulphide costs about 25 cents a pound at drug stores and is used at the rate of 3 pounds to 100 gallons of water. Lime sulphur solution, unless made at home as far as orchards, is not so easily secured in local markets. It costs about 20 cents delivered and is used at the rate of one gallon to 30 gallons of water.
