

New White Goods

We are positive that we are showing the newest, prettiest White Goods in this city—the season's most popular of the imported goods. Values up to $1 and $1.25, at

Only 69c Yard

These goods were bought last week in New York and the fact that the season is somewhat advanced, together with the fact that Bailes' had the money and nerve to buy the lot is the reason.

New summer merchandise all over the store and everything at ridiculously low prices.

FIRST CHAUTAUQUA NOW IN FULL SWING

FARMERS RALLYING FOR THE GREAT MEET NOW ON AT WILLIAMSTON

MR. SUMNERS SPOKE

Fine Exhibits, Big Crowds, Able Addresses All Combining to Make Event a Success

Special to The Intelligencer. Williamston, August 5.—Welcomed on every hand with a cordiality peculiar to Williamston people, the Anderson county farmers gathered in that historic and picturesque little city Wednesday enjoyed one of the most interesting and instructive days that they have ever participated in. Not one minute passed during the day without some feature taking place which resulted in some knowledge gained by the farmers in attendance.

The first day of the chautauqua was filled with so many features that it is difficult to describe them all. The presence of elaborate and instructive displays of pure foods as furnished by the state department of agriculture, the exhibit of the Southern railway, the exhibit of the International Harvester Co., and several other exhibits, coupled with the splendid addresses and the music by the First Regiment Band made the first day of the affair even more successful than its promoters had dared promise.

At an early hour yesterday morning the visitors began to arrive in the city and almost without exception the first place to be visited was the exhibit of the Southern railway farm improvement department, and the pure food exhibit as furnished by the state. These two exhibits are located in the Colonial Inn Hotel and the numerous bottles and glass cases, with the background of blue and the white palmetto made a pretty appearance. One of the most interesting exhibits located at this place is from Anderson county—the prize winning oats raised by Wade Drake. Experts from the agricultural department and from the Southern railway are in charge and explain the interesting things to the visitors.

The Band.

One of the features of yesterday's program was the music rendered by the First Regiment Band of Williamston. The band is composed of a set of talented musicians and with S. B. Pruitt as director, this band makes music of which any city might be proud. Selections were rendered at frequent intervals throughout the day.

Farm Implements.

The farm implement display, as furnished by the International Harvester Company from one of the Sullivan hardware stores, was one of the most interesting of the exhibits to be found on the grounds. This exhibit is in charge of E. S. Pleasant and consists of an International motor truck, corn mill and kerosene engine, a disc harrow, a smoothing harrow, a combination corn, cotton and fertilizer planter, a grain drill and a stalk cutter. Mr. Pleasant has the machinery put into operation and explains its workings to the numbers of interested farmers.

The Speaker.

Hon. Asbury F. Lever, a member of congress from South Carolina, had consented to deliver the address at the chautauqua, but owing to the fact that he was too ill to be present he secured Hon. Hattin W. Sumners, congressman at large from the state of Texas. Mr. Sumners has been making his campaign in Texas for reelection and won out over two opponents in the first race with a majority of 12,500 votes. The first time that he was elected as congressman from Texas he defeated 42 opponents. Mr. Sumners is most a South Carolina man, his parents having come from this state and therefore his address was swathed with more than ordinary interest.

The Address.

The first part of the program was taken up yesterday at 11:30 o'clock when the large audience gathered in the spacious dancing pavillion. J. C. Lucworth, president of the chamber of commerce of Williamston, made a few introductory remarks, following which he turned over his duties as chairman of the meeting to R. E. Grabel of Charlotte, assistant manager of the Department of Farm Improvement Work of the Southern Railway. Mr. Grabel made a few remarks in which he urged that every man bring his neighbor along for the second day of the chautauqua and then he introduced the speaker, Hattin W. Sumners, of Dallas, Texas. Mr. Sumners made one of the best addresses than any man in the hall ever heard. It was not an oratorical flight or anything approaching that, but rather a plain heart-to-heart talk of one man to another and of a man interested in the trials and problems of the farmer.

Town and Country.

The first question taken up by Mr. Sumners was that of the relation between the town and country. He deplored the state of affairs now existing in some sections and said that when a closer understanding is reached between the two sections, then a long step forward will be taken in solving the economic problems of the entire south. He said that it was a pleasure for him to do what he might in helping the farmer because the man who is unwilling to render service to the class of people from which he came is unworthy to hold office. He deplored the fact that some politicians had succeeded in arraying class against class and town against country and warned his hearers to beware of these men.

A Great Change.

Mr. Sumners said that he could remember the time when every community in the south was self-sufficient when they produced all they used and used all they produced, but pointed to the fact that necessity for a change then came and with it an industrial revolution. He recited to events leading up to the coming of the cotton mill and then showed that a great necessity has now arisen for this country having a surplus and asked where the surplus is to come from. He said that the farmer is to the town just what the root is to the tree and emphasized the fact that even though people living in the cities and politicians living there, care nothing at all about the country, if they care for the lawyer, the preacher, the doctor, making his home in the city, they must help the city to prosper. The speaker said that one thing wrong with the country now is that the farmers have listened to too much hot air. They have let politicians come among them and tell them what a friend they are to the poor, working people. Have let these self-same politicians make the American eagle screech in a frenzy and wave his wings on high until the farmer has been deluded and has helped to put men in offices of public trust who will lose no sleep over the troubles of the farmers.

"Quit Lying."

The speaker advised all his hearers that one way to better conditions was for them to "quit lying to each other, to meet each other half-way, to quit arraying class against class, and to unite in the one common cause." The speaker told his audience that "when the politician comes out from town and tells you that all the people in the towns and cities are liars and thieves, instead of riding him on your shoulders as you have been doing, ride him out of the community on a good, stout rail, because the man who will lie to you for your vote, will sell you out to the other fellow for his money."

Touching on the subject of the buyers of cotton making their price for the merchandise they have to sell and then making the price on the farmers cotton as well, Mr. Sumners said that if the southern men did not have any more sense than to accept such conditions, the Yankee financiers should not be blamed for taking the advantage, because it belongs to him if he is shrewd enough to get it. The speaker said that he honored the memory of Jefferson but that the logic of Jefferson's day was not the thing for this age and that the people of the south must awake to this fact. He said that the southern farmers' interests are the interests of all civilization and that the industrial independence of the south will never be gained so long as the south continues to let the farmers' commodities.

The speaker said that it was high time the south is awakening to the fact that the more cotton they raise the less they will get for it. He predicts that the world is soon to wake up some morning and find that there is nothing to eat and then instead of facing the "high cost of living" it will be a question of trying to find enough food to sustain life for the people in this country. He pointed to the fact that many people are leaving the farms for the cities and said that the "back to the farm" movement is all a farce, because to keep the farmer on the farm, you will have to pay him as much as we can earn elsewhere.

Regenerates.

He told of a trip to London, where he saw a striking contrast between the people of the country and the people of the city. He said that the people of London in part seemed to be mental, moral and physical degenerates and said that at the rate people are now moving from the farm to the city in this country, the United States will soon be as bad.

Mr. Sumners says that he has a plan by which a bureau of marketing will be established in connection with the department of agriculture of the United States and this bureau will be forced to aid the farmer in his unequal battle. It will be the duty of this department to assemble the loose pieces of the marketing machinery of the south, assemble them and make of the collection a finished product which will give the farmer a chance to get a decent price for his products.

Enormous Losses.

He pointed to the wonderful losses this country has experienced in the producing of cattle, lambs, hogs and other products during the past 10 years and urged his audience to appreciate the gravity of the situation. He said that his advice to the farmers was to stand up like a man, to face and trade with the rest of the world on the system of equal rights and equal privileges, to see their women out of the cotton fields and into the home where they belong and when fall comes "let the country kid answer to the call of the bell in the little red school house on the top of hill and give him a fair chance as well." Mr. Sumners closed amidst a storm of applause and he was congratulated on every hand.

Got the Cash.

(By Associated Press)

Seattle, Wash., August 5.—The Chilean government was to have paid $360,000 for the armaments, which had been christened "Quilts and Antifogasta" and it is supposed the Canadian government had the same cash. There has been a controversy between the builders and the Chilean government whether the boats fulfilled contract stipulations.

WAR-LIKE RUSSIANS WILL LEAVE ANDERSON

WILLIAMSTON QUARRYMEN ANXIOUS TO GO

READY TO FIGHT

Say That They Will Wage Battle For Their Beloved Country When Chance Comes

(From Thursday's Daily.)

While Anderson and Anderson county have been much agitated over the war which has suddenly darkened all Europe, few people living in this section have taken time to think of what must be the emotions of the laborer from the foreign fields now employed in this country. It is said that the Americans across the water are more than anxious to get home and yet little thought has been given to the people living here, who are originally from some of the countries now in the midst of what promises to be the worst war the world ever knew.

A reporter for The Intelligencer journeyed to Williamston yesterday morning and went down into the quarries of the Williamston Stone company, where about 50 Russians are usually employed. A larger number of foreigners than this will usually be found at Williamston but the Serbians, some eight or ten in number, left Williamston for their beloved "old country" when the first rumblings of war were heard.

Later some of the Russians left and yesterday only about 10 Russians were to be found. One of these was called out of the quarry by the reporter and the purpose of the visit stated. The man giving out the interview was a handsome fellow and his look of suspicion instantly changed when the word "fight" was mentioned. His face flushed, his eyes sparkled and throwing up his hands he said, "Fight—for my beloved Russia I gladly give my life. At the first call I will return and I will not lay down my gun until the breath leaves my body or until the heel of the invader has been driven from our land." His words were hard to understand; he could only speak broken English, but it was clearly evident that he was a man of education and of some refinement. After considerable coaxing he agreed to talk and for an hour the reporter heard strange tales, all founded on the Russian's viewpoint of war. He evidently agreed that war would be hell, if some of the things are practiced by the Russian troops as he told them. He was a soldier in the Russian forces during the Jap-Russia war and he exhibited with pride a deep scar on his left arm, said to be a wound he received from the bayonet of an enemy during a hand-to-hand fight. He told some wondrous tales of what Russia was able to accomplish during the war with Japan and said that the native land would have been a victor, had they been able to hold out for a few more months. He predicts that the forces of Russia will make a name for themselves in the war now in progress that will surpass anything ever accomplished in any war by the troops of any country.

The soldier (and he looked the part when he began to talk of the war, forgetting the quarry and all around him) said that he and those Russians employed with him would be in their own country to take up arms for Russia and fight for her until death, just as soon as some method of getting back could be devised. The reporter left the quarry with a far higher opinion of Russia and her people and of that country's ideals than he had ever had before.

PALMETTO STATE WILL UPHOLD HER DIGNITY

PLANS IN THE MAKING FOR EXPOSITION

ANDERSON'S PART

Moving Picture Films of the Commerce and Industry of This County To Be Shown

(From Thursday's Daily.)

That nothing short of giving the state an exhibit at San Francisco superior to that of any other southern state and befitting the prosperity and dignity of the state was the conclusion reached at the South Carolina Panama exhibit conference held in Columbia Monday and Tuesday. No state in the entire east is making more solid progress right now than the Palmetto state and therefore she should be represented on a fitting scale, according to E. W. Robertson, chairman of the state commission.

The various secretaries of commercial organizations throughout the state were asked to form an advisory board, and this will be done, since representatives from the leading cities of the state when discussing the matter at Columbia agreed to do this. Anderson county will be well represented in the state building, and a moving picture film of the manufactures, commerce and industry of the county will be displayed at the exposition.

Porter A. Whaley of the Anderson chamber of commerce, was one of those to go to Columbia for this conference and he says that the spirit manifested at the meeting by the representatives of the "cotton towns" was something good to behold. Mr. Whaley believes that South Carolina will do her part and will do it well.
