GERMAN RIGHT WING BROKEN SAYS UNOFFICIAL DISPATCH

THIS WOULD BE A FATAL BLOW TO THE INVADERS OF FRANCE

GEN. FRENCH EXPLAINS WHY THE WAR IS DRAGGING ERECT MONUMENT TO MEM-

It is Because the Flanking or Turning Movements Must Be Accomplished in a Deliberate Manner-Summary of the War News

While the French and British official statements indicate satisfaction with the situation along the battle front in France and confidence in the outcome, an unofficial report from Paris declares the German right has been broken and is being pursued by the allies.

This report also declares the Germans have been surrounded in the Somme department and that Peronne had been recaptured. The official press bureau at London, while making no objection to the publication of these reports, have declined to take any responsibility for their correctness. Announcement late at night by both French and British officials declared there had been no change in the situation which they previously had reported as favoring the allied army to some degree. A narrative from Field Marshal Sir John French's headquarters, issued at London by the official press bureau gives the reason for the long drawn out battle, which has lasted eighteen days.

Why the Battle Drags. "The extent of the country covered," it says, "is so great as to render slow any efforts to manoeuvers and march around the flank that he has brought with him a huge in order to escape the costly expedient of a frontal attack against natural stone to be erected at San Anheavily fortified positions."

.This refers to the fiercely contested operations of the allies' left flank in an endeavor to outflank the German right wing under General von Kluck. In these operations French and British, heavily reinforced, have been engaged for several days, and the encounters at times are reported to have been unprecedented.

In the far east there are signs of much activity on the part of the Japanese, who are engaged in a land and sea movement against the German concession of Kiao Chow, in Shan Tung province, China.

The Japanese have occupied the heights outside of Tsing Tau, the capital overlooking the German's main line of defence. capital overlooking the German's main line of defence.

Chinese troops have blown up the railroad bridge at Tayu-Ho. six miles west of Wel-Hsein, which also has been occupied by the Japanese and thus are apparently opposing Japanese military opera-tions in Shan Tung province.

ALLIES CLAIM VICTORY!

London, Sept 30 .- 12.1.5 a. m.-A Paris dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says:

"It is said here tonight (Tuesday) that the German right has been entirely broken and is now being pursued by the allies. All the automobiles in Northern France have been requisitioned for the purpose of pursuing.

"Atmored motor cars with mitrailleuses also are being used to pursue the retreting enemy.

The official communication issued at 3 /o'clockdemonstrates unnistakably that the Germans have been surgumed in the Somme department, the French front extending farther east.

Professer Shigetaka Shiga, who has just arrived in San Francisco, is perhaps one of the most interesting visitors who have come to these shores from the mikado's land. His chief mission in this country is to deliver a lecture at the conference to be held at Washington under the auspices of the Pan-American Union, but thus is not Pan-American Union, but that is not what particularly interests us. What tonio, Texas, as a monument to the memory of those heroes who defended and died at the historic church of Alamo on March 6, 1836.

It is indeed one of the ironies of fate that while those gallant defenders pilgrimage to their graves and dedi-cate a monument to their memory.

To describe the heroic deeds of the defenders of the Alamo it is necessary to refer to the birth of the Republic of eTxas. Up to May 2, 1836, the people of Texas were bound by allegiance to the Mexican federal constitution of

In the meantime the Mexican forces under General Santa Anna were stead-ily advancing into Texas with the de-termination to hold the country under the Mexican yoke. Toward the end of February, 1836, Santa Anna entered the city of San Antonio, driving the Texan guard before him. To stay the advance of this formidable army of Mexico, numbering more than 4,000, Colonel Travis with a force of 158 men entrenched himself behind the walls of the Alamo.

Travis, in anticipation of a Mexican attack, had done what he could to strengthen the walls and provide means for defense. But the Alamo was built for a mission, not for a fortress. The walls, though thick, were plain stonework without a redoubt or bastion to command the listenature. pastion to command the lines of the O It was at this critical moment that Bonham, bearing a letter from Colonel Travis, sailled out of the Atamo and went to Colonel Fannin, then at Goliad for reinforcements. Travis' letter was a stirring appeal for 'the 'patriotism' and gallantry of his fellow-citizens and compatriots. 'I am besieged,' he said, "by a thousand or more of the Mexicans under Santa Anna. I have sustained a continued bombardment for 24 hours and have not lost a man. The enemy has demanded a surrender
