Plans for sending a big delegation to the Seattle convention next summer are being put under way. The Shriners won a point in a law suit this week, when Judge H. L. Patterson of the Blue Ridge circuit, issued a temporary injunction prohibiting the negro order which calls itself the "Ancient Egyptian Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine" from using the word "Shrine" in its title. Judge Patterson was called upon by Judge Patterson was called upon by the local temple for the reason that every local judge is a shriner and therefore disqualified. the slavery question in 1844.

The movement, is gaining interest in Atlanta church circles particularly at this time because the Egleston Memorial, a "Northern Methodist" church long established here, is planning a more pretentious edifice near Druid Hills, and it is believed that if the junction of the two branches is put through the new building will be, of benefit to many more members than benefit to many more members than would otherwise be the case.

J. N. Doherty, an Atlanta Elk, is suffering from a rather severe cold contracted by yelling at 2 o'clock in the morning in the chilly. 12 degree weather. It happened because he slumbered in a bath room in the new Elks club until long after the building was closed and the servants disappeared. When Mr. Doherty awoke he found his way to the main floor and located the front door. To his delight it opened easily and when he cised it behind him it locked. Then to his dismay he found that a handsome steel grilled door still barred his path to the sidewalk. He was then between two doors, both of which were firmly locked, and with the morning wind whistling past. with the morning wind whistling past.

The lawyers filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, which was based on the ground that when Frank was absent from the courtroom as the verdict was read his constitutional rights were violated, and when this was done the state courts lost jurisdiction in the case.

In the event Judge Newman issues such an order the State will have its first opportunity or reason for an appeal. It can appeal from Judge Newman to the United States supreme court. Should he deny the writ, Frank can appeal, so it now appears that the condemned man has many months of life before him no matter which turn the case may take.

Should Judge Newman grant the writ, and should he be sustained by the high tribunal, Frank would be discharged from custody, a free man.

His lawyers are making this move in the hope of getting the case before the United States supreme court on its merits.
