German postoffice employees must obtain the special permission of the government before they may marry.

It used to be that women were content to look pretty, but now they want to be strong as well as beautiful.

In an untiled carpet of more importance than good health? Surely not. Let the sunlight in your house.

An automobile concern announces with a great flourish that it will turn out neat, durable machines for $400 each.

No man who is ashamed to get a motor to a baby carriage has any business to butt into the matrimonial game.

The business man who talks to the readers of a newspaper as he talks to the customer in his store is the one who wins.

The stork flies one hundred miles an hour, excepting when carrying twins. The added weight then makes its flight somewhat slower.

A Philadelphia man has gathered statistics which show that women are inclined to marry between the ages of 25 and 35 are only 18 per cent. Those between 16 and 25 the number in the latter are all per cent. Apparently it is rather dangerous to say to the girl that...

Miss Jessie Bartmann of Sharon, Minn., is only a schoolgirl, but she recently exhibited an amount of sense and heroism that few older people would be capable of. She and her father were alone one day in their home and Mr. Bartmann was cutting wood. His ax slipped and he severed an artery in his foot. His daughter had learned how to apply a tourniquet at school, but Mr. Bartmann was so fleshy that she knew she could not twist a bandage tight enough to stop the flow of blood. The patient could give her no help, as he had fainted, but she thought of another plan and quickly executed it. Cutting off the shoe and stocking and trousers to the knee, she set the foot into a twelve-gallon stone jar on about three inches of flour. Then she filled the jar with flour and pressed it down with a stick of firwood. The bleeding stopped at once, for the blood could not penetrate the flour. It was four hours before a doctor could be secured. When he arrived he said that Mr. Bartmann would have bled to death in a short time if it had not been for his daughter's presence of mind.

Bow low your head, do reverence to the old man once like you. The vicissitudes of life have silvered his hair and changed the round, merry face to the worn visage before you. Once the heart beat with aspirations, crushed by disappointment as yours; perhaps, is destined to be. Once, that form stalked proudly through gay scenes of pleasure the best ideal of grace; now the hand of time that withers the flowers of yesterday, has bent that figure and destroyed that noble carriage. Once, at your age, he possessed the thousand thoughts that pass through your brain, now wishing to accomplish deeds equal to a rock in fame, now imagining life a dream, that the sooner he awakes from it the better. But he has lived the dream easy clear through, the time to awake is very near at hand, his eye never kindles at old deeds of daring, and the hand takes a firm grasp of the staff. Bow low the head, boy, as you would in your old age be revered.

Has a man the right to spit asks an exchange, and then it proceeds to answer the question thusly: "You bet he has, and a right to breathe, a right to live, and a right to kick and a right to work, also a right to vote and pay taxes, and to find fault with everybody and everything he don't like. Man has a whole lot of rights, but he should exercise them all like a gentleman."

The women of the Bavarian Tyrol wear long loose trousers during the summer. But the appearance of a "santolin" in breeches in winter would excite as much surprise and comment as it would in the United States. Modesty with them is dependent upon the season. In this spot of the world, most of the outdoor work is done by the women.

"The American woman's foot is the prettiest," says a shoemaker. "It is at once slender and robust and very snappy. The instep is high and beautiful. In a word, a perfect foot—charming and serviceable alike is a pink satin slipper, is a ballroom or is a white, rubber-soled shoe on a tennis court, or in a pair of old shoes in the kitchen."

The mayor of Atlantic City, N. J., issued an order this summer that the girls going in bathing must wear skirts to the knees and the material must not be of too thin stuff.
