PRESENT DAY SOCIAL CONDITIONS

Written for The Intelligencer by Rev. J. T. Mann, Neal's Creek Correspondent

There are many, many noble men and women in the world who seek to make life a blessing to others. Some of these are wealthy, while others belong to the middle class. But there are certain social conditions that I think can and should be remedied. We should never forget that Christ for purposes of his own choosing lived among us as a plain unassuming man, not ashamed to do honest work; for we have reason to believe that he worked in Joseph's carpenter shop. His life is a glorious example of the dignity of all honest work; and no true follower of His, though he ride in a private palace car, will scorn the man who keeps up the track over thoughtful observation must see that the which the carvons. And yet the tendency of this age with some at least is to drift away from this Christ-like view, toward the caste idea. True, all are not equals in wealth and mental attainments, but that does not mean that those more fortunate should hold themselves aloof from their fellows who have not been thus favored; but on the other hand these conditions open to the more fortunate as a great door of opportunity, which if they will enter, they will prove that what they have is God-given help, and inspired by those of talent and influence, these unfortunate brethren and sisters will in many cases take a new hold on life; and success will be theirs, because their effort to rise has been seconded by those who had the power and best of all a desire to lift them up.

GREAT MINDS OF THE SOUTH MADE STATESMENSHIP STUDY

The members of the R. E. Lee Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy recently enjoyed a most remarkable paper prepared by Mrs. T. A. Ruffin, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. W. A. Ruffin of this city. Mrs. Ruffin wrote for the subject: "The great minds of the South devote themselves to statesmanship rather than to literature." The following is her paper: "To those who are grossly treacherous to this question may be found in the results of a similar investigation made by a father to ascertain the bent of his son's mind. Wishing to know what profession his son would choose, he arranged for the boy to take a fine, a piece of money and a glass of wine. He reasoned that if he showed an enthusiastic preference for the Bible and ignored the money and the wine, it was an indication that he would be a preacher. If on the other hand his preference fell on the money he was going to be a lawyer, or a merchant or a banker, but if he chose the wine, then was no hope for him and so he sat watching through the keyhole for the boy to enter the room and make his choice. The globe came, but not as the father had anticipated, for, while examining the articles on the table, he put the money in his pocket, the wine in his hand, and pushing the Bible under his arm, strode out of the room; and into the street. 'No soul,' gasped the old man, 'is going to be a politician.' In his remarkable series of studies of the 20th century, Dr. Lyman Abbott has pointed out the grave danger of a nation of politicians. Each nation of our country has undergone different experiences, however, in its pioneer work from those of the South. The northern and western pioneer fought and exterminated the Indians and settled down to peaceful pursuits, not however, without car brother pioneers of the north having tried and failed at the experiment of profitably working negro slaves. As soon as they learned that they could not make money from the labor of their slaves, they sold them to the planters of the South and settled down as peacefully as their puritanical blood would permit them to do, performing their own labor. The Atlantic conditions in the North and West are more conducive to physical energy than they are in the South and the planters of those sections rarely did not object to doing their own work, but it did hurt their feelings horribly to see the southern planter working in idleness, rolling in luxury, as a result of slave labor. This one doubt furnished the incentive for 'Vada Terra Cables' for it must have been better to have his own slaves to work for him than to have the laborer who would not work for him. The South has not suffered in a literary sense because her great minds devoted themselves to statesmanship, for her history when recorded by the impartial historian will afford for future generations a sublime and heroic record. continued resistance to the oppressive legislation of England, their seven years of struggle for independence when they poured out their treasures and blood like water? Who can doubt the mettle of a people who embarked upon an unknown sea without chart or compass in the establishment of a republic in the face of the predictions of the entire world that it could not endure? And who can doubt the statesmanship of a people who have made of a nation of the first power, and that almost within the life time of men and women who still survive?

Coming on down through the years where the South's intellectual giants prevailed in the halls of Congress against the aggressions of those who would deprive her of her constitutional rights, let the reader of the future history learn the story of how the flower of our country fought for four long years and went down to honorable defeat. Names of Palmetto Heroes in Confederate Cemetery, Cleveland

A few months ago I visited Camp Chase, a Confederate cemetery, near the limits of the city of Columbus, Ohio. While there I became interested to know just how many of the 5,000 Confederates buried there were native South Carolinians. I made a careful list of these and am enclosing some of them with this letter. If you have space in your paper I should like to have you publish these names.

"EVERYBODY GETS IT FREE"

For two weeks we are sending you this paper free to prove to you the merits of The Daily Intelligencer. If you like it, let us know how much. Special to The Intelligencer. Pandleton, Route 4. Our Sunday school at Fant's Grove has been reorganized and is progressing nicely. Mr. Dean Collins is superintendent and Dewey Brock is secretary. Mr. Billy Swamy had the misfortune of breaking his leg at the ankle last week while carrying a stick of wood into the house. The doctors say his leg may have to be amputated. We hope the old saying about ice hanging on the trees, Feb. 14, fruit will hang there next summer, will not fall this year. The fruit trees along with all other trees were beautiful on them during that day. Mrs. Margaret Bryant has returned home after spending last year in Australia. Mr. J. B. Felton and Miss Garlington visited our school at Fant's Grove last week. A society was organized for the purpose of getting money for our new school building. We hope everybody will take an interest in this work as the school is now being taught in the church. Mr. Laylow Stewart of Pandleton, attended church at Fant's Grove last Sunday. Mr. B. Wilson of Belton visited Mr. C. H. Duncan recently. Mrs. Belle Patterson who has no more seems an invalid, is no better. Mr. A. P. Williams of Portman, spent last week in our community.

BANKS TO CONTINUE TO INCURR COSTS OF FEDERAL RESERVE ACT

Washington, Feb. 17. (AP) 97 per cent of the national banks of the country already on record as formally accepting the term of the federal reserve act, the office of the comptroller of the currency has announced today. The act, which took effect on Monday, Feb. 18, requires that all national banks accept the act by the 15th day of the month. The act is mandatory upon banks and is inquiring what penalties will be incurred by failure to comply. "Any failure to comply," said the comptroller, "will constitute a violation of the provisions of the federal reserve act, and subject such banks to the penalties imposed by section 5 of this act, and may involve a forfeiture of their charters prior to the expiration of the first year, should the penalty be enforced." Whether such banks may be permitted to enter the system later, under regulations to be prescribed by the board, has not officially been announced, but according to the comptroller's office, this is a right. "It is our hope," he said, "to believe that more than 99 per cent of the banks will be prepared from the close of the year." The new schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed. Arrival and departure of trains from Anderson, S. C.
