Biography of Gen. Robt. Anderson

General Robert Anderson was born in seventeen forty-one (1741) in Augusta county, Virginia, on his father's farm on Middle River near where the Valley Turnpike and the Valley railroad now cross the river, about five miles from Staunton, and possibly a mile and a half from the 'Old Stone Church'.

Now we see Colonel Anderson and General Pickens march against the Cherokee Indians on the northwestern frontier, which is now known as Oconee county, to punish the Cherokees for aiding the British during the war. They busied thirteen (13) of the Indian villages.

Colonel Anderson and General Pickens were again sent against the Cherokee, this time on the Chattoahoochee river in Georgia, as a result of which the Indians gave up all of their land east of the river.

When Robert arrived at his sweetheart's home she was upstairs with the bridesmaids almost ready to be married, but as she happened to look out the window, she saw General Anderson riding up the avenue, and she exclaimed: "By my soul, yonder comes Robert Anderson and I love his little dog better than the other man's whole body."

When next heard from he was living on Long Lake Creek, South Carolina, near Ninety-Six, not far from his old friend General Pickens, but when the massacre occurred in the neighborhood of Forts Ninety-Six, Anderson removed to the Waxhaws, in what is now known as Lancaster county.

Quiet living being restored he returned to Ninety-Six, where he made his permanent home, on Seneca river, near Pendleton. This was just a short time before the outbreak of the revolutionary war, and not long after his father had bequeathed him ten pounds, presumably as a mere remembrance.

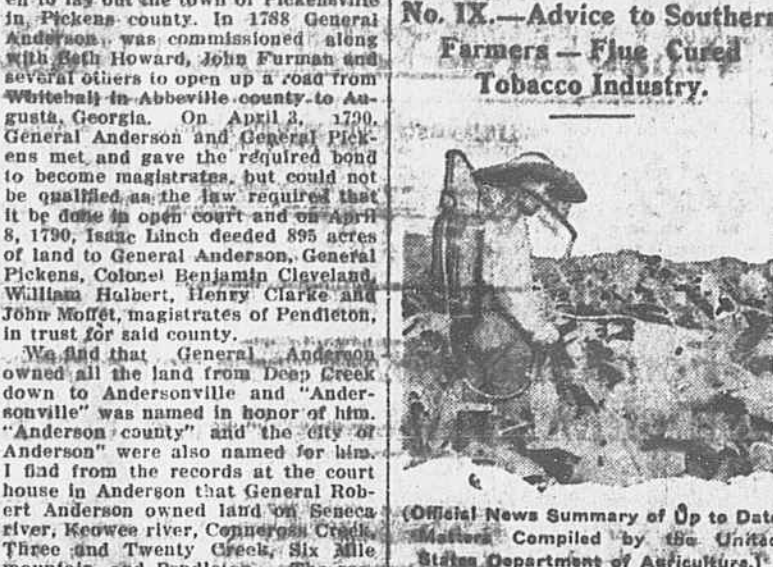

When the disagreement with England threatened to result in war, Anderson volunteered and became captain of company No. 12, which belonged to the same regiment as the company commanded by General Pickens.

Anderson and Pickens served together for sometime, and it was the opinion of the latter that General Pickens' hand of loyalty on their way to Georgia, Captain Robert Anderson was also with Pickens in the attack upon "Stone" Mountain, in the campaign of the 8th of June, Seventeen seventy-five (1775). When General Lincoln was killed in Charleston by the British the militia perceiving the inevitable refused to join Lincoln, but remained out of the city in the hands of the invaders, harassed and plundered.

When the British had not violated their pledges to the patriot men, they probably would not have heard any more about Captain Anderson, as South Carolina would have remained in the power of the British, but after six months these brave general's hearted men could no longer stand seeing their neighbors oppressed as they were by Major Dunlap and other British soldiers, and they rose up and fought under the leadership of Col. Pickens, rendered most valuable service fighting by the front line at the battle of Cowpens, January 17, seventeen eighty-one (1781), for his good service and bravery at the battle of Cowpens, he being promoted to the rank of Brigadier General by Governor Rutledge, Captain Anderson was also promoted to that of colonel.

PRACTICAL TALKS BY GOVERNMENT FARM EXPERTS

No. IX.—Advice to Southern Farmers—Flue Cured Tobacco Industry.

PREPARE a deep and thoroughly pulverized seed bed, well drained and break in the fall to a depth of eight, ten or twelve inches, according to the soil.

Use seed of the best variety, intelligently selected and carefully stored. Cultivate crops give the rows and the plants in the rows a space suited to the plant, the soil and the climate.

Care out a systematic crop rotation with a winter cover crop. Accomplish more work in a day by using more horsepower and better implements.

Apply fertilizer judiciously. Increase the farm stock to the extent of utilizing all the coarse food and idle lands of the farm. Produce all the food required for the men and animals on the farm.

Tobacco Soil Fertilization. It is well known that the organic matter of freshly cleared or broom straw fields is of a kind well suited to tobacco. It consists principally of dead leaves, twigs, roots, pine tags or broom straw and roots.

On old land there is no more important problem in the production of fine, bright tobacco than how to maintain in the soil a sufficient supply of the right kind of decaying vegetable matter, upon which its life and mellowness so largely depend.
