DRAMATIC LETTER

New York, March 16.—There were no first nights at the theatres this week, but sufficient novelty has been provided in the announcement that the Hippodrome engagement of America will close two weeks from tonight.

When the Metropolitan will bid farewell to the diving automobile, the army of Indians, clowns, circus acts and girls, it will mark the earliest closing of the Hippodrome since the huge institution was opened.

Following "America" the Hippodrome will put on "Pinafore" the scenery of which is being arranged by Arthur Wesselin, self-designated Santa Claus of Illusion to old and young.

Ann Swinburne completes a successful engagement at the Grand Opera House tonight, having appeared there this week in "The Madcap Duchess," which made a hit at the Globe Theatre earlier in the season.

dance is one of the young prima donnas who has made wonderful progress in her short career on the stage.

Miss Maude Adams has entered upon her third month in "The Legend of Lenora" at the Empire Theatre. Crowds are witnessing the performance weekly, and there is no doubt that the play could remain all summer.

What a playwright can do with a telephone is shown by Augustus McHugh in his new play of New York life, "What Would You Do?" now running at the Hudson. The piece is full of the most amusing situations and will draw crowds for a long time to come.

It has been decided to keep "The Things That Count," at the Playhouse for the remainder of the season. The play has been one of the notable successes on Broadway this year.

The new performance of "The Laughing Husband" will be given at the Knickerbocker Theatre tonight, and the play will go to the road. It has made thousands of husbands, wives and sweethearts laugh during its New York run, and will no doubt repeat this performance in other cities.

One of the odd features about Frank Craven's new comedy, "Too Many Cooks," at the 15th street Theatre, is the note of surprise it has awakened that nobody ever thought of the thing before. So many misguided souls have gone the troubled way of the country house builder that it really is difficult to account for the long avoidance of the topic by constantly groping dramatists.

That Mr. Craven has touched great numbers of persons "right where they live" is apparent in all fragments of the lobby between acts, where home-roaring reminiscences suggested by comic episodes, just witnessed upon the stage are related with the utmost vivacity.

"Help Wanted" at the Madison Square Theatre, holds over indefinitely. The piece has made one of the safe impressions of the year.

Francis Starr continues her impressive way at the Belasco where "The Secret" will soon attain its 100th performance.

BILLY SUNDAY CAPTURES CITY

He Has Addressed More Than Any Other Preacher In History

(By the Religious Rambler.)

The eight weeks' campaign of Rev. Dr. "Billy" A. Sunday in Pittsburg ends today (Sunday) and with effects so extraordinary as to make the story one of nation-wide interest. Some 30,000 persons—men, women and children—have seen the "evangelist" as going forward in procession of conversion to the city.

There was trepidation in the breasts of some of "Billy" Sunday's admirers when he adventured a city of the size of Pittsburg. Hitherto his campaigns have always been in small places. It was freely predicted that he would not make a dent on the iron city. Really, though, Pittsburg is far more religious than New York, which has exhibited it only by example, credit it with being the sturdy, United Presbyterian stronghold of the community's Scotch-Irish forebears, it still found in the city's life.

To come in a sentence to the most notable fact of the Sunday meetings it is that the evangelist has stirred this unemotional city from center to circumference—from top to bottom. In fashionable clubs and downtown parlors, in the newspaper offices—everywhere—"Billy" and his meetings are the common theme of talk. Every daily newspaper in the city has published the sermons in full every day.

"Billy" Sunday in Millionaire Homes. Regularly three times a day the evangelist preaches. Often he announces in two or three additional addresses. At night and every afternoon he speaks in the big tabernacle especially built for him, which holds some what than 15,000 people. An hour he speaks in a downtown church.

In the mornings the presence has been addressing parlor meetings of women in some most aristocratic homes in the city. "Billy" Sunday is not commonly thought of as an ornament to a millionaire's parlor, but he goes to a millionaire's parlor, but he goes to a millionaire's parlor, but he goes to a millionaire's parlor, but he goes to a millionaire's parlor.

Pittsburg has "taken up" Sunday, and the biggest business and public men of the city have been seen at his tabernacle. Some have "hit the sack" trade." A week ago ten policemen, detailed to the tabernacle went forward in a body. "Pastor" officers said they were going later when they could take their families with them, perhaps the only conventional group of converts ever made by an evangelist. All persons who go forward are enrolled and their names sent to the pastors of the churches.

How the Crowds Are Got. There are very few persons in Greater Pittsburg who have not heard Sunday at least once. Admission has been practically by ticket, so overwhelming has been the demand. The huge auditorium is filled usually an hour before the scheduled time of beginning. The time is spent in singing and hearing the evangelist.

Meetings in eighty districts for discussion and Bible study have been held by the ten persons who make up the Sunday team. These include women workers, socialists for the "down and out," Bible teachers, organizers for personal work, etc. No department of the campaign is more important than the social meetings for working girls.

Alaska in Brief. In 1867, the United States paid $7,200,000 for Alaska. The next session will probably be held in 1917 in connection with the centennial of the purchase.

The agricultural resources of interior Alaska are capable of sustaining the population of Russia, Siberia, Sweden, Finland and Denmark. Alaska is 586,000 square miles in extent. The population in 1910 was 67,000, including natives, but it is holding out a beckoning hand to the seekers of new homes.

The copper mineral production in 1911 was valued at $20,000. The gold production in 1911 was 10,000,000 ounces. The silver production in 1911 was 40,000,000 ounces. The copper production in 1911 was 2,500,000 pounds. Alaska has two notable coal fields larger than any in the United States.

The Alaska railroad bill provides for the construction of a road not to exceed 7,000 miles, to be so located as to connect one or more of the open Pacific ocean harbors of the southern coast of Alaska with the navigable waters of the interior of Alaska. And with a coal field or fields yielding coal suitable in quality and quantity for naval use, so as to best utilize the resources of the agricultural and mineral or other resources in Alaska.
