There she finds her father, whom she was led to believe had been dead. That worthy gentleman, enraged, tries with his bare hands to end the life of the hateful Umballah, who intrudes upon their presence, but is dragged away by his retainers. This is brought about when Umballah informs Kathlyne that she is to be the favorite of his harem. This so infuriated Col. Hare that he is about to strangle the dusky Prince, when Kathlyne implores him not to stain his hand with blood.

Umballah staggers to his feet, furious with rage leaves he place vowing vengeance promising to return with the lioner to publicly flog his prisoner. He snuggles up the steps in the court. Bruce, the American hunter, who has found his way into that labyrinth in search of Kathlyne. Umballah suspicious him, questions him and then orders him taken from the palace. In the thorn-room Umballah finds his Councilors, making his complaint, and it is agreed that Col. Hare must suffer for tampering with his sacred person. A big baboon escapes from confinement and is prying about perched upon the prison window in the very cell in which Kathlyne and her father are confined. This alert young woman conceives the idea of communicating with the outer world, sending by it a message to its keeper so that Ahmed will get it and further their plans for escape. She rips the tassel from her shoe, and writes with the Colonel's indelible pencil. "In the palace prison. Help—Kathlyne." She ties this about the neck of the monkey and then it is captured by Ahmed, who, sees the message at once takes it to Bruce. The resourceful American consults with Kamabai, and they conclude to drive an elephant up to the prison window and pull out the bars. This is done, and so much of the masonry comes free that Kathlyne easily escapes through the opening; but Col. Hare, securely chained to the pillar in his prison, is unable to get away. He tells his daughter to leave, as fortune will free him; so she reluctantly hurries away to the Hare bungalow in the jungles of Alaha, as the scene dims.

Kathlyne's safety having been secured, she immediately begins planning how to release her father. The first move in this project is to secure Umballah by strategy. They accomplish this with the aid of the fascinating Pundita, who pretends to have turned against Kathlyne and assumes to wish to effect her capture. Umballah, disarmed by rage, immediately starts out in quest of his prey. On arriving at the bungalow, he rushes into the room, but suddenly finds the door barred behind him by Kathlyne, who is holding a leopard in leash. Thus they take advantage of his fear, and he is forced to sign a release for Col. Hare from the palace prison. Having secured this important document Bruce Kathlyne and Pundita, leaving Umballah guarded by the leopard, rush to the rear of the procession, takes a long distance shot and wounds Kathlyne.

ta and start to a rendezvous in the jungle, where they are to meet Col. Hare, who is to come when released through the medium of Umballah's message. Umballah, having finally effected his escape with great difficulty, returns to the palace—but too late. The messenger has fled his order, the prisoner has been released, and is well on his way toward the coast. The vengeful Parcee prince, however, is not to be so easily outwitted, and starts his retainers on dromedaries to intercept the flight of the Americans. Umballah, coming up with the rear of the procession, takes a long distance shot and wounds Kathlyne.

MILLINERY OPENING

Moore-Wilson.

The forerunner of spring, the millinery openings were held yesterday. At a glance in Moore Wilson's display room is greeted with a bright and gorgeous display of spring millinery and Easter bonnets. The wonderful productions of lace, hems, leghorns, ribbons, flowers massed together into shapes show the hand of an artist. The reading colors shown here were chartreuse and tango.

Several imported articles from Marie Louise were among the most admired creations. One of these being a hair hat.

A number of unusually attractive tailored models from Ehipps, Knox, Gage and Burgeon were the most in demand.

Miss Stephen of New York, an artist in every sense of the word is designer for Moore-Wilson this season.

D. Geisberg.

A profusion of spring styles gathered from all parts of the globe delighted the eye and pleased the throng of women who attended the spring opening at D. Geisberg's yesterday.

The styles for spring are beautiful and different from any ever used. The millinery department this season is in charge of Miss Leslie Treake of Baltimore.

Miss Treake is showing some exquisite hats in the new sheppard, tango toques, Bolero Watteau and Marquis shapes. Her favored colors are September Morn, Virgin Blue, Tango, Flame, Nasturtium and Chinese green.

On the second floor of D. Geisberg's store were displayed nobby spring suits, one piece silk dresses and attractive dancing frocks. The most attractive of these was the Pussy Willow taffeta.

Mrs. B. Graves Boyd.

At Mrs. B. Graves Boyd's everything is a bow of spring loveliness. Mrs. Boyd's hat are always pretty and stylish but this season with Miss Mary Hubbard of Baltimore in charge they are unusually attractive.

A number of fresh patterns and the English sailor were greatly admired. The violet and purple hats were particularly attractive. Then there were hats bedecked with daisies, nosegay, clusters, sticup, uncurled feathers, toques with tulips of ribbon jet feathers and tulle. The spring coat suits, coats and evening dresses shown yesterday were exquisite and the colors were in keeping with the spirit of spring.

Schooner Evidently Lost.

Savannah, Ga., March 17.—Marine men here today said there was little doubt that the schooner Levi S. Andrews, missing since March 3, had been lost with her crew of seven, somewhere off the South Atlantic coast. The Andrews, commanded by Captain Slocum, left Norfolk early in March for Savannah, with coal No ship has reported sighting her since, nor has there been any report that she has put into any port disabled.

INSPECTING RAILS.

Rigid Examination Made by the Southern Railway.

Atlanta, March 17.—Details of the methods by which every rail in the Southern Railway's 7,000 miles of tracks is annually subjected to the closest inspection are given in the March issue of the Southern News Bulletin in an article telling of the steps which the Southern has taken to prevent derailments resulting from broken rails.

The system of inspection which was adopted over two years ago is believed the most rigid and effective possible. The work is under the direction of the district engineers and division roadmasters and is done by the track supervisors and section foremen who closely scrutinize each and every rail while on their hands and knees and with eyes close enough to the rail to detect the slightest discoverable tendency toward weakness or failure and wherever such are found the rail is immediately removed. Detailed reports are made on each rail left in the track so that comparison can be made at the next year's inspection.

THE MANAGEMENT OF THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY FEELS THAT THIS RIGID INSPECTION OF EVERY RAIL OVER WHICH ITS TRAFFIC MOVES EMBODIES EVERY POSSIBLE STEP TOWARD THE PREVENTION OF RAIL FAILURES, A FEATURE OF RAILWAY OPERATION TO WHICH THE OFFICIALS OF LEADING AMERICAN RAILWAYS HAVE BEEN GIVING THE CLOSEST STUDY DURING THE PAST FEW YEARS.

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Father and Mother of Mrs. Frank T. Watkins of Anderson.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Watkins have returned from Spartanburg where they attended the Fiftieth Anniversary of the marriage of Mrs. Watkins's father and mother, Dr. and Mrs. T. H. Law.

Among the visitors from a distance was William Adger Law, the well known financier, who will be the next President of the American Bankers' Association.

Dr. Law is stated clerk and treasurer of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church and is one of the most widely known Southern clergymen. Attracting little less attention than the principle figures in the celebration, Mrs. Law's mother, Mrs. H. M. Adger, ninety four years old, was also an honored participant.

Dr. Law was born and reared at Hartsville, South Carolina, which was founded by an ancestor for whom he was named. Dr. Law graduated from the Citadel at the head of his class in 1859 and subsequently studied Theology in the Presbyterian Theological Seminary in Columbia, from which he was graduated in 1862. He was ordained that year to the ministry and became pastor of the churches at Florence and Lynchburg.

He served as chaplain at Fort Caswell, N. C., in 1863 and evangelist of the Charleston presbytery from 1867 to 1869. He came to Spartanburg in 1860 and served for seventeen years as pastor of the First Presbyterian church. For twenty years he served the American Bible society as field worker. He has been stated clerk of the South Carolina Synod since 1875.

Dr. Law married March 16, 1864, during the last days of the war, at Boswell, the residence of Rev. J. B. Adger near Pendleton, Miss Annie Elizabeth Adger, daughter of the late William Adger of Charleston, and Mrs. M. A. Adger.

Dr. and Mrs. Law have had eleven children. Three died in infancy and a grown son, Thomas H. Law, Jr., died in 1890. They had eleven grandchildren.

The living children are: William Adger Law, vice-president of the First National Bank, Philadelphia; Miss Mary Hart Law, professor of music at Converse college; John Adger Law, president of the Central National Bank at Spartanburg; and president of Barton Mills and Chesnut Mills; Miss Margaret Law, teacher of art at the Byrn Mawr school, Baltimore; Andrew Moffett Law, professor in the University of Texas and Mrs. Agnes Law Watkins, wife of T. Frank Watkins of Anderson.
