ELECTRIC CITY SPARKLETS Items of Interest and Personal Mention Caught Over the Wireless on the Streets of Anderson

Mules Killed In Williamston. Two mules were instantly killed in Williamston yesterday afternoon, when struck by the southbound train from Greenville and Frank Foley, the negro occupant of the train, and his son, had a narrow escape. The accident took place at the cemetery crossing in Williamston and the wagon was entirely demolished. Neither the negro nor his son suffered any serious injury.

Anderson Stock Will Arrive Today. Notice was received in Anderson yesterday that part of the stock of yester through J. T. Watt of Clemson college by Anderson county farmers, had arrived in Greenville and an Anderson man was sent to Greenville yesterday afternoon to bring the cattle on to Anderson. It is probable that they will reach here today. There are six head in the shipment now reaching here and others to follow as soon as they can be secured.

Freak Weather In With It's Yel. Anderson people will hardly be surprised at any kind of weather coming up. Yesterday morning the sun was shining brightly at an early hour, later it was overcast by clouds and a skiff of snow fell. There was a precipitate drop in the temperature and throughout the day the cold weather continued. Last night there was a small fall of sleet at about 8 o'clock and those who had been so unwise as to make change in their clothing were hustling to warmer quarters.

Carnival Has Closed Here. Adams Carnival, which has been exhibiting in North Anderson for the last ten days, closed down last night and none of the shows doing any business either during the afternoon or the evening hours. The proprietor of the shows said yesterday afternoon that this was the most unsatisfactory stay that he had ever experienced in Anderson. He said that he had been here five times before and that he made money on all the former occasions, but this time the patronage was "off."

Anderson Teachers Buck from Spartanburg. The majority of the Anderson teachers who attended the State Association in Spartanburg Thursday and Friday, returned to the city yesterday. All told, there were about 100 Anderson county teachers in attendance at the convention. They say that Spartanburg people fairly out-did themselves in their hospitality and made the event one of pleasure in every sense of the word. J. B. Felton, superintendent of education said yesterday that Anderson had the only rural graded school exhibit present at the convention and that it was the cause of much admiration on the part of other teachers of the State.

Mr. Fouche Back from Rock Hill. L. P. Fouche, a well known Anderson druggist, and a member of the Pharmaceutical Board returned yesterday from Rock Hill where he went to attend a meeting of the board. Mr. Fouche is one of the members of the examining board and a number of applicants for licenses appeared before them in Rock Hill. The Anderson man says that he had a nice trip, but that it was a relief to get home after three days spent in York county.

Bird Man May Fly Here. A letter was received in Anderson yesterday from Henry B. Marks, managing director of the Interstate Exhibition Co., in which Mr. Marks stated that he would shortly come to Anderson and confer with local people about putting on a fire works and an aeroplane exhibition in connection with the chautauqua which begins here April 27. It is understood that local people think this would be a drawing card and the majority of them seem in favor of this added attraction to the chautauqua program.

Mrs. King Is Ill at Belton. J. Mack King, supervisor for Anderson county, yesterday received a telegram from Belton saying that his mother, Mrs. Nancy E. King, was very ill. Mr. King left as soon as possible for his mother's bedside. Mrs. King has many friends in all parts of Anderson county who will regret that she is indisposed and who will hope that it may not be of long duration. She is a member of the McClure family which is widely connected in the county.

Five Hundred Clocks Per Year. Keese Jewelry Company yesterday had a very attractive window display of the world-famous "Big Ben" alarm clocks. The entire display was shipped direct from the factory to the Anderson establishment and is the only one of its kind sent to the state. It is necessary for a jeweler to sell as many as 500 Big Ben clocks each year for the house to send these window displays and Mr. Keese has complied with this stipulation, selling well over that number during the past year. The window is quite attractive and attracted considerable notice yesterday.

DR. JAS. P. KINARD VISITS ANDERSON Distinguished Teacher Who Has Many Pupils In This City

Among the prominent educators of the state who attended the State teacher's convention and came by Anderson to visit relatives is Jas. P. Kinard, Ph. D., professor of English at the South Carolina Military College. Dr. Kinard held the same position at Winthrop College for a number of years and acted at times as president of that institution in the occasional absence of Professor Johnson on business. Dr. Kinard has many former pupils in Anderson, as this county has always furnished a large proportion of the pupils at Winthrop. He also has a number of relatives here.

Dr. Kinard is a brother of John M. Kinard of Newberry, for many years president of the Commercial Bank of that city, and recently president of the alumni of the State university and president of the state Bankers' convention. Dr. Kinard's grandfather, Geo. H. Kinard, was for years the sheriff of Newberry county, a contemporary of John Belton O'Neal. His father was Lieut. Col. John M. Kinard of the 20th South Carolina, killed at the head of his regiment in the Shenandoah Valley near Winchester. This distinguished educator was himself trained at the Citadel, and attending for some years took his degree at John Hopkins. He was superintendent of the schools at Newberry and later was elected head of the English department of Winthrop where he remained until last year when he was called to the chair he now occupies with such distinction as the successor of the graceful James Cummings. Dr. Kinard combines what is so rare, the executive knack with the literary and scholarly ability. He is an author of note; his text books being used in many schools of the country. His wife was Miss Lee Wicker of Virginia, one of the members of the original faculty of Winthrop. She is a woman of intellectual and social gifts that have made her the social center of a large circle. Dr. Kinard is a Baptist.

Henry Martin of Liberty spent yesterday in the city on business.
