A Melodious Voice

By F. A. MITCHEL

I awoke, or, rather, came to consciousness, with a soreness all over my body and a burning thirst. I was lying on the ground looking up at the stars. For a moment I did not know why I was there. Then suddenly it all came back to me—a long brown line along the edge of a wood, the order to advance, a volley of clicks as the Confederates cocked their muskets, then a cloud of smoke and a storm of bullets. I was one who fell and for awhile lay tramped to and fro over me. After that I knew nothing. Now it was dark. I managed to change my position by turning on my side. I could see lights moving about. Then I heard the words: "Bring a stretcher." They were not spoken in a man's voice, but a woman's. Moreover, the tones were soft and melodious. Was it the contrast with what might be expected on a battlefield that moved me, or was the voice really sweet? I listened and heard it again: "Poor fellow! Gently, boys. There. Now carry him over there to the surgeon." Surely it was sympathetic. But it was more—it was a voice that I felt sure I would never forget. If I should hear it among a hundred others I would recognize it. We were near enough to Richmond for our cannon to be heard there all day. Doubtless this was some woman from there, who had come out to minister to the wounded. She was, however, giving us her enemies' best attention, for the Confederates had not been in this exact part of the field. She went from me, speaking in that same melodious voice, first encouraging the wounded man being carried on the stretcher. Then I knew by her words that she was kneeling over some other unfortunate. "Poor boy! You should be with your mother instead of here." Those were the last words I heard her speak. I had hoped that she would stay by me, but we were lying very thick, and only a few could be favored. I never forgot the voice I heard on that battlefield. I thought of it all through the period when I was recovering from my wound and wondered if I should ever meet its possessor. I was sent north by sea and after regaining my strength joined my regiment shortly before the battle of Gettysburg. I was with our army before Petersburg and when Richmond was evacuated was one of those who entered the city. While in the Confederate capital I went to a hospital to see an officer who was ill. I was sitting by his cot in a ward containing perhaps a hundred invalids. Near by was a screen used to protect a man who was dying. I heard a voice say: "I will give your message if I have to take it myself." It was the voice I had heard on the battlefield. I was anxious to get a glimpse of its owner, but at the moment the man I was with was endeavoring to impress upon me something he wished me to do for him. As soon as I could get away from him I went for a look behind the screen. I saw only a corpse. That was the disappointment of my life. I made inquiries for the woman I wished to see, but could only describe her as a woman with a sweet voice. It was not enough. There were a number of ladies there with sweet voices. Besides, I was a soldier with other things to occupy me than looking for a woman I had never seen. At any rate, I left Richmond without seeing or again hearing her. The war having closed, my regiment with others was sent north and after the grand review at Washington was mustered out. I had studied a profession before entering the military service and on returning to civil life occupied myself with my profession. I continued to be haunted by that melodious voice. I met women who were attractive to me, but somehow, if I especially liked one of them she was sure to repel me by a harsh tone in speaking. Several years passed, and though I was domestic in my tastes and would have liked to be married I remained single. Being called to Washington on business with the government, I was in the treasury department one morning amid a number of women clerks when I asked one of them where I should apply for certain information I wished.

"Go to the third auditor's office on the next floor above."

"I had found her."

"Were you not on the staff," I asked, "after one of the battles near Richmond in 1862, securing the wounded?"

"I was."

"And when we northern men occupied Richmond did you not see her in a hospital take a message for a dying man?"

"I did."

"I lay near where you were on that battlefield and was near you when you received that message."

"Have you ever seen me before?"

"No."

"Then how have you recognized me?"

"By your voice."

Her notes, though sweet, was not noticeably so. It was the surroundings which I had heard it and the tenderness called forth by pity. And this is how I, a northern man, came to marry a southern woman.

FERTILIZER FACTS No. 10 ECONOMY

Previous Fertilizer Facts have treated with CO-OPERATION, EDUCATION, GREATER PROFITS.

And now comes that subject which is the basis of all lasting wealth as defined above—ECONOMY.

Practically applied, what does Economy mean?

Is it in buying cheap cotton seed, corn and grain that gives you only half a stand?

Is it in you making a pair of shoes out of materials that cost $1.50 that will wear out in sixty days when a pair that costs you $2.00 will wear a year?

Is it in spending fifty cents for a medicine which you think you need when a $2.00 visit from a physician will put you on your feet in a few days?

Is it mixing your own fertilizer unevenly so that some plants get all the nitrogen and run to stalk; others all the potash and bear heavy fruit with no body; or is it buying Commercial Fertilizers where only the most carefully selected materials, thoroughly analyzed, chemically tested and accurately balanced are mixed under careful and watchful supervision by the most modern machinery, which INSURES a uniformity in the goods offered?

At the outside there is only about 30 cents an acre difference in the cost of the two fertilizers mentioned above, and 30 cents is dirt cheap for the insurance on your crop certified to through the analysis on every bag of goods you buy.

The opposite of ECONOMY is EXTRAVAGANCE, which is oftentimes caused by being "Penny wise and pound foolish."

Remember, "strict husbanding of resources and regulation with respect to production" is the accepted definition of Economy. The time to make money on your crop is when you are producing it. The way to make money on your crop is to keep down the cost.

Confering of Beretta Upon Thirteen New Cardinals.
(By Associated Press)
Rome, May 28.—The public consistory at the Vatican, at which the 13th of the thirteen new cardinals created on Monday, was held today and was attended by several thousand persons, most of whom were Americans and other foreigners. A special mission will be sent to take the Beretta to the absent cardinals, as was done in the case of Cardinal

Gibbons. The ceremony attracted much attention, even outside the Vatican, the public being interested in the departure of each cardinal from his residence to go to the apostolic palace. The papal procession and the ceremony which followed were conducted with great pomp. The passage of the pontiff, accompanied and followed by many ecclesiastic, military and civil dignitaries, both going to and returning from the consistory, was most impressive. After the consistory the cardinals gathered in the Sistine chapel to return thanks and then met, presided over the pop, in the consistorial hall, where Pius X. bestowed the cardinal's ring, granted them the privileges of their position and named their titles to their churches.
