Anderson Lost In The Eleventh Inning

SPARTANS COP ANOTHER EXTRA INNING CONTEST FROM LOCALS

SUMMEY PITCHED

Did Good Work, Striking Out the First Three Batters To Face Him

Anderson lost the second extra inning game of the season yesterday afternoon when Spartanburg ran in a run in the ninth inning and tied the score. Both pitchers did excellent work, and it was on a little hard luck that Anderson lost the game. Summey was the box for the locals and started the game in grand style. He struck out the first three men that faced him. The scoring was done in the sixth inning for Anderson, when Watson singled and was sacrificed to second by Graydon Childers (he sacrificed him one more, and Bull brought him home with a two bagger. As far as Anderson was concerned that was all the scoring to be registered. The Spartans scored in the ninth inning, with two men out. Panella was hit and the next two men, Bowden and McArthur, hit safe. That tied the score and the game was won in the eleventh inning, with two men down. Panella doubled and scored on a single by Bowden.

The admiral is spending his spare time in writing the memoirs of his interesting and varied career afloat and ashore.

PICKENS GAVE QUIET HEARING

(Continued from page 1.) today. He said that the governor appoints the commissioners in the general election, and that these in turn appoint the managers. According to the new primary rules, the executive committee appoints the managers in the primary, and that it would be seen to that all these managers were anti-Blease men. He charged that the only reason that the regulations in the primary had not been made the same as in the general election was that the governor had to appoint the supervisors of registrations and that the members of the state convention knew that he would have kept the registration books open during the months of July and August, so that every white man could have registered. Governor Blease warned his hearers that if an anti-Blease governor was elected that the primary requirement would become the same as those of the general election. Jennings Defends Rules. Mr. Jennings answered the governor as to the new primary rules. He said that if these had been designed to disfranchise the governor's friends, then they were a complete failure, as the governor had said that all of his friends had already enrolled. The speaker said that he admired the governor for his frankness "you always know where he stands" he added. "However, I do not agree with him as to his ideas of government." Both Governor Blease and Senator Smith received each a large box of flowers. Senator Smith got another small bale of cotton, and Governor Blease a broad brimmed Panama hat.

HOW DRY WE ARE

Parkersburg, W. Va., July 17.—To avoid paying the federal tax a local brewing company today had deputy internal revenue collectors supervise the destruction of 170,000 gallons of beer. The beer, left over when West Virginia went dry July 1, was run out of the vats into the Little Kanawha river.

COTTON CLASSING MARKETING

Cotton classing is receiving much attention at this time from cotton growers as well as manufacturers. Cotton marketing has, of course, always received attention and will continue to do so. A bulletin on "Cotton Classing and Marketing" has just been published by J. G. Coman of the textile school of Clemson College. The essential details of these two problems are stated with a clearness that will enable any one to understand them. This is volume IX, bulletin 4, and may be had free by any citizen of the state upon application to Clemson College.
