GERMAN AND ENGLISH FLEETS REPORTED ENGAGED IN BATTLE

of communication it will be long before the progress of the German arms can be recounted to the outside world.

The same applies to the movements of the Austria-Hungary army small detachments of which are operating against Serbia and the remainder doubtless are being sent to check the Russian advance. Beyond the declaration of war by Austria on Russia yesterday little is known of what action Austria is taking, and only meagre details have filtered through of the Austrian army's operations.

London, August 6.—The passage of a war budget for $500,000,000 in the house of commons today without a dissenting voice and the granting of an army increase of 500,000 men in accordance with plans of Lord Kitchener, the new war minister, shows that Great Britain is in deadly earnest.

More Men Needed.

Call to arms issued by the war office tonight says an addition of 100,000 men to the regular army is needed immediately and that "Lord Kitchener is confident this appeal will at once be responded to by all who have the safety of our empire at heart."

The term of service for the new men is to be three years, or until the war is ended. The age of enlistment will be between 19 and 30.

The naval estimates provide for 67,000 additional officers and men, which will make the navy's strength 218,000 men.

There are no illusions in England that the war is certain to be a swift and decisive one. The people are steered for a long and exhaustive struggle.

Fear for Navy.

The admiralty notified the public tonight that the first news from the navy might not be good news. Swift upon the heels of this intimation came the tidings that the cruiser Amphion had been sunk by a mine with the loss of an officer and 130 men—Great Britain's first sacrifice to the war. It is considered that British ships in the North Sea are running greater risks during the first days of the war than the Germans. The royal family shares with the homes of its many subjects the suspense of waiting for news of the fate of the different units of the fleet.

Prince Albert, the second son of the king, aboard the battleship Collingwood, is one of the many boy midshipmen about sharing the perils of their elders.

Personalities Eliminated. There was a dramatic incident in the house of commons today when the feud between Lord Charles Bercford and Winston Spencer Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, was buried. Admiral Bercford shook hands with the first lord and said: "Well done."

The torpedo boat destroyer, Lance, which sent the Hamburg-American line steamer Koenigin Luise to the bottom with four shots, only came out of the shipyards last Saturday hardly dry.

First Prisoners of War.

Londoners had the first realization of war brought home to them tonight when hundreds of commuters taking their trains at the Victoria stations were surprised to see eighty-five German prisoners guarded by English soldiers with fixed bayonets. The Germans were naval reservists taken from their ships and made prisoners of war. A goodly number of naval reservists and also some German army reservists who were attempting to proceed to Germany were held by the authorities today.

Several persons supposed to be spies were arrested today in different parts of England.

MRS. WILSON PASSES AWAY

Without seeking the aid of the president, it was the strain of this, the duties of entertainment and kidney trouble which became chronic last Autumn that sapped her life.

Mrs. Wilson took an active interest in the career of her husband. She has been his constant helpmate and adviser. Her clear judgment on political affairs and broad views on educational questions has been a source of gratification to him for years. With her help he wrote the books and he relied on her judgment. Her devotion to him, according to those who have known the family intimately, was of remarkable depth. Her one thought was for him.

Every morning and every evening during her illness she continued Dr. Grayson's treatment. Dr. Grayson met to tell the President, if she had about an uncomfortable hour. Her anxiety was that he should not be worried, but the president watched her sorrowfully for weeks and realized she was growing worse. He spent every moment he could by her side.

Mrs. Wilson was a woman of simple ways, yet possessed magnetic manner. She was a charming hostess and was ever democratic and modest in her tastes.

When news of Mrs. Wilson's death reached the senate, discussion of pending business was ended immediately by Senator Kern, majority leader.

Interrupting the debate on the shipping bill, he said: "Mr. President, it becomes my duty to convey to the senate the melancholy intelligence of the death of Mrs. Wilson, the wife of the president of the United States. Of course, the president at this hour, has the earnest sympathy of all the people of the nation and as a mark of sympathy entertained here and all through the republic I move that the senate do now adjourn."

The motion was silently agreed to and the senators quietly withdrew from the chamber. Majority Leader Underwood of the house, hurried to the floor as soon as he received word from the white house. He stopped the discussion of the Moon railway mail pay bill.

"It is my sad duty," he said, "to announce to the house the death of Mrs. Wilson, wife of the president of the United States. I think the house should show the proper respect at this time and I therefore move the adoption of the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the house has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the president of the United States."

"Resolved further that a committee composed of the speaker and one additional member from each state in the union be appointed to attend the funeral.

"Resolved further, that as a mark of respect the house do now adjourn."

The resolution was adopted in silence.

Mrs. Wilson has been in poor health since last February, when she fell and strained her spine. She later recovered from that injury, but in the meantime kidney trouble set in and gradually her condition grew weaker and weaker.

About two months ago her condition began to grow serious, and two weeks ago Dr. Grayson became alarmed. Noted specialists were called in and trained nurses were kept in constant attendance. She continued to grow worse, however until serious bleeding spells came on Monday and Tuesday.

Mrs. Wilson was fifty years old when she came to the White house in robust health. Always a home lover, she immediately, nevertheless assumed the arduous duties of the wife of the President. She took an active part in public affairs and frequently received delegations calling on the president when he was too busy on other matters. Her dining her last illness, she frequently refused to be informed of the grants of the United States and of the world.

News of her serious illness was kept from the public until yesterday when it was admitted her chances for recovery were slight. Her condition continued to grow worse. Dr. Grayson this morning gave out a statement in which he described her illness as "alarming."

During last night and early this morning she was kept alive by oxygen and stimulants. At two o'clock this morning Dr. Grayson gave out another statement in which he said Mrs. Wilson had had two striking spells during the morning and she was conscious, but growing weaker. This was the last word to come before her death.

Mrs. Wilson was Miss Ellen Louise Axson, daughter of a Presbyterian clergyman and was born in Savannah, Ga., and was a student at the New York Art League when she met Mr. Wilson, who was then taking a post graduate course at John Hopkins. The President and Mrs. Wilson were married June 24, 1885.

Mrs. Wilson was a sister of Professor Stockton Axson, head of the department of English literature at Princeton, and of the wife of Dean Edward Elliott, of Princeton.

A landscape gardener and painter of well recognized ability, Mrs. Wilson devoted much of her time to artistic subjects. She took personal charge of the gardens at "Prospect" while Mr. Wilson was president at Princeton and also of the White house of what is called an out-door woman. Her skin was smooth and girlish and her eyes, until recently, sparkled with health. She was known as a beautiful woman.

Mrs. Wilson's indoor life has been devoted to books and artistic pursuits. Her paintings have taken prizes in competitions. Her social obligations forced her to omit some of her accustomed artistic and literary recreation when she became mistress of the white house, but as "the first lady of the land," she was ever ready with advice and material help, wherever a good cause might be served.

Her domestic life is described as having been attractive. She had knowledge of domestic arts, and was a good cook. It is related of her that she liked to prepare dishes, or have them prepared under her own personal supervision for the President, and that she always made it a point to prepare for him the orange juice he has with his breakfast.

ADD MRS. WILSON—3 EM dash. Three telegraph operators were busy at the white house tonight receiving telegrams of sympathy from all parts of the country. The messages came from men prominent in political business and official life and from many who had no personal acquaintance with either the president or Mrs. Wilson.

J. P. Morgan, Mayor Mitchell, of New York; former President Taft, former President Roosevelt, all members of the supreme court, and cabinet, sent telegrams. Most of the cabinet expressed admiration for the manner in which the president has handled foreign and domestic problems during the time of his great trouble.

BULLETIN.

Vienna, August 6.—The Russian ambassador to Austria-Hungary was given his passports tonight.
