hope I may be permitted to say a few words about the present situation in our state without being misunderstood. It gives me deep concern. I am mortified and disappointed that the primary system has failed to develop in the people sufficient political intelligence to enable them to escape the wiles and tricks of demagogues. Audacity and aptitude in repartee, coupled with a striking personality, have made the people an easy prey. Instead of candidates being compelled to discuss public questions and policies, they have been allowed to make appeals to prejudice, and the people, blinded by these arts, have followed and made heroes of men who are wholly unworthy. I have been and still am, accused of inaugurating this method of campaigning. I challenge the production of a single speech of mine wherein I departed from the discussion of public issues, or indulged in unparliamentary language until forced to do so by unfair opponents. The more bitter opponents of the reform movement began the vituperation and abuse that have marked South Carolina politics since 1890. They answered argument with invective; they greeted truth with showers of mud and filth, and they, not I, must bear the responsibility. Two years ago I lamented the same thing, and said I doubted whether I had not made a mistake in giving the people the ballot and teaching them how to use it. But I was impatient. I here reaffirm my confidence in the people—all the people collectively. I believe that the judgment of the whole people, rich and poor, educated and ignorant, high and low, is the surest and truest guide to political action. Their mistakes will be fewer and will be more quickly mended than will the error of any one class be ever so enlightened. I believe this so religiously that I would rather have a bad governor, or a bad senator, elected by all the people than a good one elected by any one class. The whole people correct their blunders; the rule of a class tends to the growth and perpetuation of abuses. I have implicit faith that all the people of South Carolina are going to stamp out Bleascliam sooner or later. The strongest Bleascliams will be leaders as soon as they are convinced that they have made a mistake. If I did not believe this, I would lose all faith in self government. Jefferson's slogan was, "teach the people, and trust the people." To this principle all patriots will give credence, and all democrats will gladly obey. When the demagogue comes along and blinds the people by the glamour of his art, and instills devilry and poison into their minds, good citizens must not despair, but redouble their efforts; for the truth is more powerful than falsehood and must prevail in the long run. Again I reaffirm my faith in the people. The battle between privilege and freedom, between equality and favoritism, is world wide, and ages old. It has brought the cataclysm which we are witnessing in Europe today. The people of that continent are struggling to free themselves from the shackles of autocracy and the divine right of kings. It is a battle between autocracy and republicanism. The contest in South Carolina in 1890 was to overthrow an aristocracy which had come down to us from colonial days. It was a real revolution in which families were divided, father against son, and brother against brother, showing that principle and principle alone moved the people to action. It was my high privilege to lead that movement which emancipated South Carolinians from the thrall of an oligarchy which had ruled the state for a century. That was my greatest work. I taught South Carolinians to know their rights and how to obtain those rights, and the state has made marvelous progress in every way. In education, in some of its aspects, it has progressed more than any of its sister states; for, we have Clemson and Wofford as model schools, the best of their kind, and, if there were less selfishness and more public spirit throughout the state, the lamentable ignorance now existing in some sections would soon disappear. We make special request not only for your own attendance, but also ask that you bring as many of the men in your community as possible, and get them to join the society and assist in this celebration. Yours very truly, J. H. HARRIS, Chm. G. STEIBLING, H. M. HUNTER, T. R. MCCRAY, W. H. MILLS, Secy. Pendleton, S. C., Aug. 10, 1914.

desire special privilege with the ballot. That was a good thing, all must admit. Now, is Tillmanism to blame because the people have used the same ballot with which to elevate a demagogue? Yes, I taught the people that they had a right to govern South Carolina, and I proclaim the principle, now. They do have the right, even if they elect a hundred Bleascliams. "Teach the people and trust the people." We will, in the end, have better government at the hands of all the people than we would have if any one class ruled. The people will rectify their blunders as soon as they have become convinced of their error. It would be just as true to say that democracy causes socialism and anarchy as it would to say that Bleascliam caused Bleascliam. Had my health continued good, I would have taught the people the folly of Bleascliam two years ago, pointed out the difference and stemmed the tide which Jones found himself unable to cope with, and all for the gratification of his own selfish ambition. A large per cent of those who two years ago, and now, are yelling "law and order," want a law and order of their own contriving. They are not ready to admit that, politically speaking, all white South Carolinians are equal. They think themselves divinely commissioned to rule, everybody else. And this, not Tillmanism, is the true cause of Bleascliam. The plain people saw this, resurrected Bourbonism, and thinking it was the "right" thing to do again, look Bleascliam in preference to all. Bleascliam is a mere symptom. The real cause is bigotry, political intolerance, and social injustice. I call upon you, my fellow citizens, you who know and claim to want a better, and higher, than to broaden your sympathies. Stop railing about "law and order" and treat your next-door neighbor with a little more consideration. Though he lives in a hotel, though he lives inside of a school room, he has the same right to vote for Bleascliam as you have. Do not vote against him; and you have no more right to question his motive than he has to question yours. Learn that great truth, set on it to the utmost, and my word for it, Bleascliam will disappear—and it will not disappear until you do so. Then, too, a certain class of our fellow citizens have been very unjust and unreasonable with their dealing with the poorer people, treating them with no consideration whatever, and showing a contempt for them. This is especially true with regard to those who work in the cotton mills. In many communities the people in the mill villages are a class apart, looked down upon and not associated with. No wonder socialism and the I. W. W. are getting a foothold among these citizens of ours. It was not so once, and it ought not to be so now. We all should address ourselves to the remedy lest it bring dire disaster upon the commonwealth for, in the last analysis, white, only is absolutely essential for the continuation of good government. If these poor men are trampled under foot as they have been taught to believe they are, they will join with any movement, no matter how radical and ultra, to get revenge. This is the secret of Bleascliam's hold on the people who work in the cotton mills, and we ought by every means in our power to break that hold by showing the same respect and considération for them that we do for others. As for those who compare Bleascliam with Tillman the man, they are, for want of a better term, what I call maliciously ignorant. Bleascliam and Tillman were both popular idols, and through the resemblance ends. I had definite ends to accomplish my personal character and private life were always above reproach and my integrity was never questioned save by a few slanderers who merely asserted without attempting to prove. There is just enough similarity between Bleascliam and Tillman to deceive the ignorant and furnish a bludgeon to the vicious. I do not believe Governor Bleascliam ought to be sent to the United States senate, because he is not worthy of the honor; and so believing, I would be recreant to the people of South Carolina if I did not say so. But do not misunderstand, I speak as a citizen merely, and I fully realize and recognize the right of the humbliest man in South Carolina to differ with me. A man's ballot is his own, and no other man has a right to criticize him for using it as he chooses. I am not near the grave to tell any lies, if I ever had the inclination to do so. I have nothing to gain by speaking; hence there is no selfishness in my utterances. But I love the state which has honored me so long and in such a marked degree; and I want to warn our people—those who will listen to me—before it is too late. I repeat, there is absolutely no element of personality or selfishness in it. All my ambitions—and I thank God they were worthy ones—I have been satisfied. Therefore, I speak as it were, from a mountain top, looking down upon my fellows, who must in a few years follow me to the grave. I am over a man's utterance ought to cause the people to pause and listen and think mine should. For all essential purposes I speak as one who is dead. If I allowed selfishness to influence me, I would quietly work to have Bleascliam sent here, because there is nothing more certain than this: Willie Woodrow Wilson is president, Bleascliam will get no recognition in the way of patronage whatever. I have had little or none, but I would have it all hereafter with Bleascliam as a colleague. If a republican should follow Wilson, Bleascliam might in a way duplicate or repeat my attitude towards Cleveland who did not recognize the Tillmanites in South Carolina as democrats at all. If the unhappy difference among our people in South Carolina shall continue and Bleascliam become the dominant factor in the state, Bleascliam might in time play the role of Mahone in Virginia. All signs, however, point to the triumphant re-election of President Wilson and the continuation of the democratic party in power. There is one striking thing about Governor Bleascliam as a leader and a statesman to be very seriously considered. It seems to have been his right of eye to this time. He has been in public life since 1850. He came to the front the same year. I did, if there is such a great leader now, more worthy to be followed than Tillman, more worthy of admiration and trust, how has he succeeded all these years in hiding it? What has he ever done in a constructive way to benefit the people of South Carolina? Let those who are his sponsors answer. I have demonstrated my statesmanship and ability to lead in a dozen ways. Without even mentioning what I have done in Washington as a senator, I have many monuments to my credit in South Carolina—Clemson and Wilthrop in an educational way, the constitutional convention, which relieved the people of the state of the menace of negro domination, by the organic law under which we live, the primary system of choosing candidates, and the despised and slandered dispensary, which only failed because the corrupt politicians in the legislature got hold of it and the anti-Tillmanites egged them on to destroy it. But in spite of all their machination and cunning, it still survives locally in many counties. All these are largely my handwork. In God's name let those who were formerly Tillmanites but now Bleascliam shouters, show what Bleascliam has done of a similar character. They cannot do it, and they owe it to themselves to pause and analyze things, and recover their reason—if they can. They can undo some of the wrongs they have perpetrated and restore the state's good name, which Bleascliam has made a byword and a hissing. The 25th of August will tell the story, and I watch the result with confidence. (Signed) B. R. Tillman.
