RETURNS TO UNION.

James Sims, Surrenders to Sheriff Pratt.

Union, Aug. 29.—James Sims, who filled a term in this county 24 years ago named Zachariah Sims, returned to the city yesterday and surrendered himself to Sheriff Pratt. He will in all probability be tried at the next term of the criminal court. Mr. Sims is very well known in Union and is connected with some of the most prominent families here. He is a brother of Dr. Sims of Whitmire and a brother-in-law of Judge W. W. Johnson of this city.

UNCOMMON ITEMS.

Queen Mary finally saw a demonstration of the Tango and at once she liked it.

Fat man in New York who tried to cut his throat was not able to get through the rolls of the fat on his neck.

Philip Neuman, a New York postal clerk, when arrested, said that he only pilfered letters when he smoked cigarettes.

Wood alcohol again. Two died and one was blinded of a party of five who drank wiper purchased from an east side grocery in New York city.

Dr. Louis Brocq, in the Paris Medical Bulletin, says that women are deteriorating as a result of the present day "emancipation." Too much "brain work."

New York police, with characteristic modesty, arrested a number of men fully dressed in bathing suits because they were a block away from the beach, on their way to their hotels.

Leprosy is increasing in the United States, according to Dr. W. C. Rucker, assistant surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service. He advocates a federal leprosarium for their care.

Infant incubators have been more of a failure than a success, according to Dr. E. Chapin, of New York, who says that out of 150 cases in his personal experience he has had not one satisfactory result.

Dr. Duncan McDougall, Haverhill, Mass., says he has weighed a human soul, and that it weighs three-quarters of an ounce. He ought to try poets and new-thought ladies who specialize in soul-culture.

Pellagra in the South is spreading. Now said to be between 50,000 and 75,000 cases. Of more than 6,000 cases studied by the E. H. Thompson Pellagra Commission, 25 per cent have proven fatal.

Dr. Michael P. Barrett, Philadelphia, believes he has found the germ causing pyorrhea, an organism similar to a germ associated with dysentery. Says that Euphite, a component part of ipecac, is a cure.

Wa-be-ne-gow-wes, or words to that effect, sometimes called John Smith, once a chief of the Chippewa Indians, is said to be 125 years old. Government records seem to vouch for this existence as a boy 116 years ago.

Jaes Sturgill, of Sergeant, Ky., 16 years old, is 5 feet, 11 inches tall, weighs 409 pounds, and is still growing. Harry Lewis, Philadelphia, 13 years old, started to "kalk" fish recently, now weighs 190 pounds, and is growing larger every day.

Cigarette smoking among women and girls at St. Louis has doubled in half a year, according to the findings of the St. Louis grand jury, which is inquiring into the sale of cigarettes to minors. Popular among wealthy and society women.

Dr. Oscar H. Alhr, addressing the American Arthopedic Association of Philadelphia, says that "It is a hygienic crime to send children to school before the age of ten years." Under that age the fixed portion at the school desk often causes serious spinal curvature.

Two-year-old Johanna Wiggers, 221 East 28th street, New York city, was found to be the prize baby at the Big Baby Week competition, getting a rating of 99.8 points on her score card. She is twenty-eight months old, 27.1 inches high, and weighs 33 pounds, 14 ounces.

Prof. J. M. Lavyne, of the Academy of Medicine, Paris, said that mental fatigue increases blood pressure more than physical fatigue, that the mental worker is really more fatigued by his day's work, and that in his case "laziness or failure to work hard" can be tested by the state of his blood pressure.

Considerable interest aroused in New York over the taking effect of the Poylan anti-drug law on July 1st. This law prohibits the sale of habit-forming drugs except under rigid conditions, requiring physicians' prescriptions, to be verified, careful record of sales, names and addresses of purchaser and physician, and other similar restrictions.

Clubwomen assembled at the Biennial Convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in Chicago, protested against modern fashions, especially against skirts that "cover but do not conceal," as tending to "break up homes, and as having been designed for the demi-monde of Paris. It was noticed, however, that the beautiful young women in the convention wore the fashionable styles. Meanwhile the president of the National Ladies' Tailor Association, and many women physicians defend and highly praise the prevailing modes.

Two scientific men have recently claimed to have discovered the secret of the control of sex, in part at least. Dr. Oscar Biddell, of the experimental evolution station of the Carnegie Institution, has experimented with doves, pigeons and frogs, believing that the sex could be influenced. Dr. Israel Fern, of the Medical-Chirurgical Hospital at Philadelphia, has two theories, one that an excess of nourishment is conducive to the birth of female children, and the other that the supra-renal glands have much to do with it, so that when the prospective mother is stimulated by the administration of iodine, which extracts the supra-renal glands of sheep, males are likely to be produced.

SCENE FROM "THE WOLF."

"THE WOLF," a picturization of the great play by Eugene Walter, is ready for release. This wonderful success of the legitimate stage has filmed perfectly and is well acted throughout.

"In 'The Shadow of Disgrace,' by Richard Hildgely, in two parts, Seth is madly in love with Nora, who is without a doubt the prettiest girl in the village. Norah spurns Seth's love for that of Arthur Maitland. They are secretly married, and Maitland leaves for India. Seth intercepts Arthur's letters, and the gossip gets busy.

Anent the Mexican situation, "The Little House in the Valley" will prove a big drawing card. No attempt is made to produce battle scenes, but the Mexican brigand, figure prominently. Winifred Greenwood plays the lead and is ably supported by Ed Coxen, George Field and William Bertram.

In "The Polo Champions," the English polo team, of which the Duke of Mike and the Earl of Jake are members, challenges Foxy Benn, manager of the American polo team, to a championship game.

Through the superior playing of the Duke of Mike and the Earl of Jake the Britishers win. But the Americans resent what surely seems unfair methods and a "free for all" results. The Britishers are saved by a number of American helmsmen.

"Dolly at the Helm," eleventh page in the active life of "Dolly of the Dailies," by Acton Davies. Both the Comed's managing and city editors were taken from their office on account of sickness. Shortly after they left word was received of a large fire and an excursion boat disaster. The masterful way in which Dolly handles these situations only adds more to her long list of creditable achievements.

On the Films

BESSIE LEARN.

Winsome little Bessie Learn is the bright particular star of the happy love comedy which always comes out all right and makes everybody feel happy. Miss Learn has probably played more roles of this sort than any other film favorite.

"The Adventure of the Absentminded Professor," by Frederic Arnold Kummer. Professor Harper's asking Octavius to learn who stole his antiquities was an innovation. All cases before were accidental. Arriving at the scene of the crime he hid, with the knowledge of the professor only, who left unexpectedly. The supposed culprit enters—a struggle—Octavius is held captive until the professor returns.

FUGITIVE TELLS HIS EXPERIENCES

Germans Treated Prisoners in an Inhuman Manner After Capture of Louvain

(By Associated Press.)

Amsterdam, Aug. 29.—The Rosendal correspondent of the Handelsblad interviewed a fugitive from Louvain who gave his experience in that city.

Monday evening, he said, gun firing suddenly resounded in the streets. I did not know its meaning, but some declared that the German troops had fired upon each other. The Germans, however, insisted that the shots had been fired by the inhabitants and that several soldiers had been killed.

The fact is that throughout the night heavy field guns bombarded the town, destroying many houses. We sought shelter in a cellar and at daybreak we prepared for flight. We hurried to the railway station where the refugees were parted and the women and children on one side and the men on the other side of the station square. Near the statue of Gen. Van de Weyer, in front of the station we saw bodies of six burghers who had been shot.

The town was now a flaming mass. At last, escorted by the German soldiers we walked to Campenhout, where we witnessed the shooting of seven priests in a group.

Our party of 73, handcuffed like we were criminals, was locked in a church. Additional prisoners arrived at intervals. Outside the lamentations of the women and children arose. Within the church an imprisoned priest gave absolution.

When we left the building Campenhout was burning fiercely. We were told that we would be freed but we must return to Louvain. Returning to that city, I was once more taken a prisoner and given in front of the German soldiers across the country without rest or food and used with the other prisoners as a cover for the troops.

When we arrived within a short distance of the Belgian outposts, I received permission to go my own way. I arrived at Malines proceeding on a military train to Antwerp. I am unaware of what has become of my wife and children. All my valuables were taken from me. I was told that the Burkomaster and a number of prominent men of Louvain were shot. The city has been cut off from communication with the outside.
