The Weather

Washington, Sept. 4—Forecast: South Carolina, Fair Saturday and Sunday.

NEW TEACHERS

Anderson college has increased and strengthened her faculty considerably for the coming session. Among the members of the faculty are Professor Frederic A. Goode, director of music, and Mr. John H. Williams, professor of science. Mr. Goode is a musician of exceptional ability and wide experience, having had advantages both in this county and abroad as a pupil of great artists. Among them were William H. Sherwood, known as America's greatest pianist; Harrison Wild, one of the most influential musical forces of Chicago; Jose Vianna Damotta, recognized as one of the greatest pianists of Germany, and Daniel Protheroe, a distinguished composer of this country.

Mr. Goode as a pianist has received most favorable encouragement from leading critics. He is not only an artist from the mechanical standpoint of his art, but from the interpretive side as well.

Mr. Goode has been especially successful, having taught several years in some of the larger cities and six years in one of the oldest conservatories of the South. His equipment as a teacher embraces a thorough course in the principles represented in the Kullak, Doeppe, Leschetizy and the Sherwood schools of piano playing and wide experience in the application of these principles according to the individual needs of the pupil.

Mrs. Goode, who will be one of the assistants in the music department, is a gifted pianist and a thorough musician. She is a graduate of Judson college and has several years of experience as a teacher.

Mr. John Williams, who will have charge of the science department during the coming year, took his elementary training in the public schools of Nebraska and Missouri. Later he entered William Jewell college, the state Baptist college of Missouri, and completed the regular college course.

William Jewell college is generally recognized as one of the best colleges for men west of the Mississippi river, and full credit is given in the Eastern Universities for the work done there.

After graduating from college, Mr. Williams held the position of superintendent of schools in Ulrich, Missouri, for one year, and then returned to William Jewell to continue the work in science. He was instructor in the Laboratory of Physics and continued his study in other branches of science, taking several courses during the year. He comes to Anderson college believing that science can be taught for an institution or for an individual student only through diligent effort. Laboratory methods will be followed largely in all science courses and the department will be gradually enlarged and new courses added to meet the needs of the people.

What is The Hague between diplomats?

Dog days are over—but not dog-of-war days.

"Mad in Germany" is a better trade mark.

Stick to the boat, the pumps are working. The old ship Cotton will find a safe harbor.

The darkest days have come, and are on the wane. Goodbye.

TO SOUTH CAROLINA'S CREDIT

If the South Carolina legislature should convene in extra session and pass a law staying the time for paying notes, mortgages, etc., what good would it do?

To make such a law effective in the interests of humanity, it would have to have a companion act in every other Southern state. And no other Southern state would pass such an act.

Because they have had such laws before and the people were not benefited as the Constitution of the United States forbids passing such laws. Incidentally the Constitution of this State has the same provision.

Louisiana is the only Southern state, we believe, that has not at some time or other, had a moratorium act which was not thrown out by the courts. Decisions against a stay law have been rendered in Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

Suppose this state should have such a law; suppose the courts should admit that it is constitutional.

Then we would have one lone state with such a law. The credit of the state would be ruined in comparison with the conduct of our sister states. The financial centers beyond the borders of this state would call for their money. The banks would be unable to meet the demands and there would be serious complications, perhaps disaster, followed by suffering.

There is no doubt that the thing to fight for is the preservation of credit. It is no secret that many of the most important industries of the state now have trouble to borrow money.

Should a moratorium act or a "stay law" be passed by the legislature, the credit of this state would receive such a staggering blow that it would be impossible to get ready money for operating expenses.

Upon whom, then, would the hardships fall?

Upon the laboring man, mechanic, carpenter, mill operative. He would suffer. The man who owns the stock in the plants would lose heavily, but when the wheels should again begin to turn, as surely they will do, he would yet have his stock, and after this period of depression our Southern industries will enjoy a great period of prosperity.

But in case of an enforced shut-down, the stockholder would lose only his money, while the working man would suffer for bread.

Millions now keeping up their operations with their warehouses full of the manufactured product and no immediate sale in view. Why do they not shut down? Because they wish to keep their organization intact, to keep their plants in operation, and because they feel a moral obligation to the people dependent upon them.

Instead of a law which will cause the rest of the world to look with disfavor upon our credit basis, or lack of it, under such a law, what we need is a basis of credit that will give substantiality.

One thing would be some arrangement to curtail the cotton crop next year and to make rents negotiable in oats, hay, corn or other saleable produce. The reason why the South is now at the mercy of conditions is because landowners stipulate that rents must be paid in cotton, in lieu of cash.

The present crisis is not for hasty, ill timed or undigested legislation. What the country needs is something to stabilize the credit of the South, not to place it in jeopardy.

The merchants, the bankers, the landowners, who hold mortgages or notes surely will not be grasping at this time. They will be lenient. No honest man will suffer, and no honest man will repudiate his debts. A stay law is not needed.

There is, thank God, a "stay law" written in the hearts of our men of South Carolina who have been carrying the burden of building up the state, and that moratorium is: "Love Thy Neighbor." The people of South Carolina will be brothers in this crisis and every true man will be true to his neighbor.

THIS IS QUITE UNUSUAL

Frank W. Shealy, of Lexington, candidate for railroad commissioner, is a farmer and business man. He is practical in all things. For years he followed the occupation of contractor and builder, and he erected many houses now occupied by mill operatives in the city of Newberry.

He has also worked on the railroad as a common section hand, and at one time fired a locomotive—an old time wood burner—on the Charlotte, Columbia and Augusta railway. He knows a good road bed when he sees one, and if elected, the safety of the passengers will be greatly increased, we feel sure.

But there are other things to commend Frank Shealy. We have seen affidavits from persons in Lexington county, stating that when the bank in that town failed, Frank Shealy went down in his pocket and paid people for trust funds deposited in those banks by himself and his predecessors. While that was nothing but right, and common honesty, yet how few others would do that when advised and urged by their lawyers to do otherwise?

We have before us an affidavit from C. M. Ward, for many years, senator, supreme court official, special judge, etc., who states that when Mr. Shealy, as clerk of court, had on deposit $5,600 and that he knows of $5,100 that Mr. Shealy has borrowed by mortgage on his farm to secure money to retire these debts.

It requires pluck to do this, especially as Mr. Shealy had so many rough places to travel in getting to his present station in life, where he is respected, trusted, honored and loved by his neighbors and is popular in his section of the state as the gamecock congressman, Asbury Lever.

SEND WYATT AIKEN BACK

The position of The Intelligencer in regard to the race for congress in this district has been conservative, just the same as it has been with regard to other political contests this year. The paper has not been actively at work for any one and our columns have been open alike to all the candidates.

But now that the campaign is drawing to a close we feel that the paper would be recreant to its duty if it did not express the opinion that Mr. Aiken should not be left at home. We say this with due recognition of the ability of his opponent, Mr. Dominick, who has made a game fight and will be heard from again.

Mr. Aiken has made an efficient congressman; there can be no question as to that. He is on the job every day in the year, as people who have had occasion to deal with him in his official capacity will testify. His colleagues certify that he is prompt and courteous, and obliging to the last degree. As to what he has accomplished, that is difficult to say. What has any preacher, any teacher, any professional man accomplished in life? What shall be the measure?

He is a "white" party man. He has always stood for Democratic principles. He has always voted, in the caucus and on the floor of the house, with the party. He is a seasoned legislator, and he has shared with all other Democratic members of Congress in the credit for whatever good legislation has been enacted by the party since it came into power. At the same time he is independent and fearless to a degree which makes it impossible for him to be said that any other man or set of men does his thinking for him. To be plain, he is so independent at times as to be called "bull-headed."

His vote on the canal tolls question, which many have thought was a mistake from the standpoint of political expediency, is proof of this.

But it is of particular importance, that at this time, congressmen of proven merit should be re-elected. The country is facing grave problems—perhaps the gravest in the history of the country—and it is of the supreme importance that the members of Congress, and especially the Democratic members—should be able to work in harmony with the administration. There is no doubt of the fact that Mr. Aiken stands well at the White House and with the members of the cabinet. All of them know him and respect him for his honesty and ability, and for the dependence that they know can be put in him. They know him and he knows them and they can work together in harmony.

A new congressman would have to be broken in, at best, and there would be risk to run that he might not be able to work in harmony with the President—that through lack of harmony, he would be a source of weakness and embarrassment to the administration, rather than a source of strength and courage, which will be so badly needed.

If there ever was a time when old and tried men were needed in congress it is now, and for that reason, as well as for his ability and efficiency, we think Mr. Aiken should be re-elected, and we think it our duty to say so.

GALLANT BAND WILL SOON HEAR "TAPS"

ORR'S REGIMENT HELD FINE REUNION

PLEASANT SESSION

Names Familiar to Anderson People Figured in 42nd Annual Reunion of Veterans

No reunion held in this immediate section is of more interest to Anderson people than is that of Orr's Regiment, which is an annual event. The reunion was held this year at Wall-halla and survivors of that gallant band say that they never enjoyed a more pleasant occasion.

Massed features throughout the reunion pleased the veterans and several splendid addresses were heard. After the rendition of "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" the roll was gone over to ascertain who of the survivors were present. The roll-call showed the following:

- Veterans Present. Company A—W. A. Barron, Sam Neal, Fred White. Company B—None. Company C—J. M. Hudson, Isaac Snider, R. D. Robinson, J. W. Cannon, C. B. Finley, E. F. Miller, J. W. Holleman, W. H. I, Hampton Legion. B. T. Gunter, Co. A, 1st Artillery. W. A. Brewer, Co. D, 22d S. C. John V. Stribbling, Mounted Infantry, 7th S. C. Cavalry. G. M. McKee, M. N. Mitchell, M. E. Deal, Co. G, 2d Battalion, S. C. Regulars. W. A. Duncan, Co. D, 1st Artillery. Wm. Stegall, Co. D, 6th Cavalry. It is possible that there were others, but if so their names failed to be handed to those charged with enrolling the veterans.

Those Who Have Died since the last reunion were reverently mentioned, and the memorial committee was instructed to draft fitting resolutions in memory of these deceased comrades. They are as follows:

- Company C—John W. Rogers, who died at his home in Oconee on March 2, 1864. Company D—T. E. Simpson, died near Sandy Springs about 3 months ago. Company F—Geo. W. Abbott, who died at Weatherford, Texas, on May 1st; W. Henry Sanders, of Texas, in May, 1914; and U. R. Powell, of Madison, also during the early part of this year. Company G—W. T. Ellis, of Abbeville county, January 5, 1914; and W. R. Moxday on May 27th, 1914. The body included among those to be remembered by memorial Col. R. A. Thompson, of Williams, died on August 7th last past. Col. Thompson was not a member of Orr's Regiment, but he was dear to every survivor of that gallant band, and always met with them in their reunions. Card of Thanks. J. M. Holliday, candidate for commissioner for the 4th district wishes to thank the voters for the support given him in the first primary, and asks that they support him in the second primary. If elected will treat each community the same and work in harmony with the supervisor and other commissioners. 5-3d-5wpd ad

GREAT IS ANDERSON.

Westminster Tribune.

I wish to tell of the great meetings I have been in at White Plains and Beavertown, in Anderson county, at my old home churches.

I left home August 11th, went by private conveyance, reaching White Plains the same day, expecting meeting at night, but the church had arranged for two services each day. So the next day we found the church, with the pastor, Rev. Henry Martin, in the great work for our Master. Prayer service at 10 o'clock, preaching at 11 and 4:30 o'clock and a great band of willing workers ready to lead in prayer and to hear testimony to the love and goodness of God and to help in any way for the advancement of the cause of Christ.

I am much pleased with Pastor Martin, being so earnest in preaching the gospel and so friendly with all he meets. It makes any and all feel welcome and at home in all places. So we had a great meeting, from start to finish, with 28 added to the church—24 for baptism, the ordinance of baptism being on Sunday morning the 24th. I am glad to say the church is in good working order, so ready to do whatsoever their hands find to do, eyes to small boys that had just formed, ready to stand up and bear testimony for Jesus who had saved them. It was great to be in such a great revival and also to meet with old friends some we had not seen in years, and to hear them talk and pray was more joy than tongue can tell.

Then from White Plains to Beavertown for service at night on the 16th. Found a large congregation, with the pastor, Rev. Burriss, and he is a fine preacher, too. And so friendly. It makes any one feel at home and free to take part in the service with him. So I continued in service here until Wednesday night. I enjoyed it very much, but only two had joined up to this time. I am so glad God has blessed me to be in those old home churches and the glorious meetings once more in life, and to meet those with whom we had worshipped in days gone by. While many has been called away, it makes me stop and think as to how soon the call will be for me. Just be ready and all will be well.

Well, I want to tell something about the homes I was in. I visited 48 different homes and was away only eleven days. I found prosperity in most all homes. While all of them are not Christians, they should be, for God is so good to all. We all ought to be saved, so do your best.

To see the great crops of corn and cotton, it is wonderful to behold. While some sections are dry and the crops cut short, yet they have been easy worked. Other sections the crops are fine and we should all be so thankful for this, especially after a dry year.

So I feel we should never murmur or complain, but it should be our theme: "Nearer my God to Thee, nearer to Thee."

HONEA PATH NEWS.

From The Chronicle.

Mr. T. B. Curtis and son, Master Thomas Curtis, of Anderson, were here for a few hours this afternoon. Mr. Curtis is commercial agent of the C. & W. C. Railway.

Miss Vera Shirley returned yesterday afternoon from a pleasant visit to relatives in Anderson.

Miss Belle Kay has been elected teacher of the school at Eboer, about twelve miles west of this place, and will enter upon her work about the first of October. She has had several years' experience in the school and the patrons are pleased at being able to secure her services.

Mrs. Jane Kay, sister of the late George Kay, died last Friday afternoon at the home of her son, James H. Kay, three miles south of this place. She had been in feeble health for several months but seemed to be getting along fairly well until a few days before her death. She was about 77 years old and was a constant member of the Baptist church. She is survived by three children, one daughter and two sons. The funeral services were held at the residence of Mr. James Kay, on Saturday morning, after which the interment took place in the old family burial ground nearby.

A TRIBUTE.

In Memory of Mrs. Ella Franks, who Died Recently.

It was at the still midnight hour when God saw fit in his wise providence to call the true companion of Mr. G. S. Franks and the mother of the dear little ones of that happy home. We can not see in our dim sight the cause of making a plate that happy home, but God knows all things best for all things work together for good to those that love the Lord, and we as friends and neighbors are willing to let our hearts go out in sympathy to that bereaved home for we know not the purpose of God's will, but that one thing that we might do in great hope that we live up to our duty so that when the death angel shall call us that we might be ready to meet with our loved ones that have gone on before.

The death of Mrs. Franks was a great shock to her many friends, but we can realize that she has just preceded us to that great unseen land and that we should all turn our eyes to that great and painless home beyond.

May God in his blessing dwell in that home and comfort the bereaved family. A SYMPATHIZING FRIEND.
