The Weather

SOUTH CAROLINA—Rain Saturday; Sunday probably fair, and warmer.

HOPE OF CIVILIZATION.

Today the welfare of the world is in the hands of the American worker. Today civilization's sole hope lies in the spirit and energy of those who labor in America's industries.

THE DAILY THOUGHT

Little bit of sunshine. Then a bit of shade; Little bit of gladness. Then a heart afraid;

Sow oats and rye and reap, quart. Sow oats and rye and then sow more oats and rye.

Plant a little wheat on the side this year also.

At the stock show there was one big hog worth more than a bale of cotton. Moral: Raise more such hogs.

Will grain elevators elevate as other elevators do?

Bosting Belton and the Belton Fair seems to have gotten a habit in Anderson's little suburban village.

Buy a Balo, and boost a bit.

That A. F. operator who broke his typewriter last night must have been trying to write some Russian general's name.

There's almost as much pleasure in giving away something you don't want as there is in getting something you don't want.

Isn't it funny that when a fellow is going to the devil, they call him a good de want.

How's a woman ever to be president? No one can ever attain that position until long after the age of 25.

Those who live under a cloud never see the silver lining.

Just for a curiosity, we would like to see a love affair carried on the way it is in books.

A man may lead a woman to the altar, but it ends there.

COTTON OR CREDIT

Just now there is no question so interesting to the people of this section of the state as what the farmer will do with his cotton and the effects of his action on the welfare of the country.

The arguments of many apply of course to the farmer who is in debt. If there were no farmers in debt, there would be no cotton problem.

Then there are those who contend that the farmer has had several years of prosperity, and that he can stand a loss on one year's crop.

The Intelligencer would not have any who can do otherwise sacrifice his cotton crop, and we trust that the farmers who can hold will not offer a bale for sale.

Hold your cotton if you can but if it is a choice of losing on your cotton or losing your credit let the cotton go.

AS A BUSINESS MAN SEES IT.

Owing to the continued discussions on the condition of the South just now over the business outlook, the following advice, or comments by one of Anderson's leading business men, is quite to the point:

If people don't pay up, the supply men and the banks and the fertilizer companies will not be able to make advanced next year and then things will come to a standstill.

Another thing, keep your money in bank and pay your bills by check.

This is a time for every man to do all he can to relieve things.

better off. A man who comes square to the rack this fall will establish a credit that will be worth a great deal to him hereafter.

When a man's vices are hidden under his virtues there is always someone ready to tear the virtues away.

The parent who gets any enjoyment out of punishing his children isn't going to do the children any good by punishment.

We don't care whether or not there are marriages in heaven—but we would like to know if there are any moving pictures there.

The man who loves a girl well enough to eat her, may not be displaying the most of taste.

Our distrust of mankind comes from knowledge of ourselves.

A new fashion in dress is for a woman to wear electric lights—just as if the men did not see enough already.

Some folks would not give away 10 cents if they did not expect a dollar's worth of advertising.

Mother would be willing that little feet should muddy her freshly scrubbed floor if that were any assurance that the same feet when larger would not wander into forbidden paths.

OUR DAILY POEM

Who started the war? Not I, says the Kaiser. I've been an adviser Of peace from the start.

Who started the scrap? Not I, says Franz Joseph; This war I'd oppose if They'd listen to me;

Who started this muss? Not I, says the Czar; It gives me a jar To think of the shooting And burning and looting.

Who started the fight? Not I, says France; Not by any mischance Would I force the occasion For German invasion.

Who started this row? Not I, says John Bull; And they just had to pull Me into the rumpus.

Who started the war? Though none will admit it, On thinking a bit, it seems certain to us.

That some onery cuss, Some kaiser or king, Must have started this thing. Let us know, we implore! Who started this war?

LOCAL FIRMS USE TWO GOOD IDEAS

Anderson Clothing Concerns Adopted Some Up-to-Date Schemes.

Most business firms know that when business conditions are poorest, then is the time to do the most advertising and Parker & Bolt and B. O. Evans are both well aware of this fact.

Yesterday morning all the customers and friends of the B. O. Evans company received a letter from that concern in which there was enclosed a ticket for the evening performance at the Bijou Theatre.

Parker & Bolt hit upon a splendid idea in securing the mechanical man for their window display. Throughout yesterday afternoon crowds of people stood before the window of this store and tried to get a glimpse of the man.

The tract of land in Pendleton, although it was known as Pendleton county and there was no town of Anderson.

that they had arranged an extra performance to take place in their window today from 11 to 12:30 o'clock.

BIG FLOUR MILL IS A POSSIBILITY HERE

TO BE LOCATED IN PIEDMONT SECTION

CHANCES ARE FINE

Said to be a Movement on Foot to Establish Such a Mill in One of Three Up-State Cities.

The man furnishing the information was bound to secrecy, so far as names were concerned, and yesterday he could tell nothing definite in regard to a proposition which contemplates the erection of an immense flour mill in Anderson.

It is understood that one of the well known flour milling companies of the west has sent several agents to South Carolina to look over the field and it is said that the mill will be built within the next year.

Information available yesterday was to the effect that the mill is to be of 500-barrel daily capacity and that it will be extensively advertised when actual work is begun.

That the mill is to be built is a certainty, but that Anderson will get it is by no means a settled fact.

POSITIVELY MATTERS GROUP Faley's Honey and Tar Compound cuts the thick chocking mucus, and clears away the phlegm.

INTERESTING RECORD IN OLDEST VOLUME

SHOWS DEED TO TOWN OF PENDLETON

FOR BARLEY CORN

First Book and First Page of Volume Ever Recorded in Anderson, Very Interesting.

Numbers of Anderson people pride themselves of what they know about history, yet few of them know that in the mammoth volume in the office of the Clerk of Court there is to be found more interesting history than can be learned from the text books of the country.

One particularly interesting volume to be found in the files is Book A, number 1, which chronicles the beginning of public records in Anderson county.

The tract of land in Pendleton, although it was known as Pendleton county and there was no town of Anderson. The Andrew Pickens name to in the article was the name of General and was a man of great importance to the community.

the community. It is presumed that the town of Anderson was named after the Robert Anderson referred to in this article.

Notwithstanding the fact that the old record says that the cash consideration for the entire 885 acres was only five shillings, there is another record that on May 19, 1790, the same parties paid to the said Isaac Lyner the sum of 25 pounds.

This old record, like many others to be found in the court house, furnishes some very valuable records.

NEGRO IS ACCUSED OF BURNING BARN

Henry Williams Placed in Jail Here On Charge That He Set Fire to White Man's Barn

Following a fire on the plantation of Jim Whitefield, a well known white farmer living a mile from Townville, Henry Williams, a negro about 18 years of age, was brought to Anderson yesterday and placed in the Anderson jail to await trial on the charge of arson.

Williams denies that he had any connection with the fire and claims that he was on his way home when he noticed the blaze and stopped to watch the barn burn.

AD TALK

Comment on Florida Citrus Exchange Advertisement

The Intelligencer reproduces this Full Page Ad (Reduced) together with the greater part of a review of this page ad, written by Mr. Jefferson Thomas, one of the foremost Advertising men of the country.

The Florida Citrus Exchange is a cooperative NON-PROFIT-MAKING organization of orange and grapefruit growers.

If the Management of a Non-PROFIT-MAKING Business, whose sales this year will total over FIVE MILLIONS of dollars can see their way clear to DOUBLE their ADVERTISING APPROPRIATION on account of this temporary depression, isn't it about time for the "little fellows" to tear a leaf out of the book of these "big fellows" who have made such great successes?

This is a NON-PROFIT-MAKING concern which can afford to double its advertising appropriation. Please note that!

You want to know how they can afford to do it?

Simply because they have had the past experience that advertising IS NOT AN EXPENSE, but instead IT IS THE GREATEST SALES FORCE IN THE WORLD.
