May Revise Custom of Advising With The Senate In Executive Session

ANNOUNCEMENT THAT PRESIDENT WILSON WILL MEET WITH SENATE HAS CAUSED CONSIDERABLE SPECULATION AND COMMENT

The Intelligencer Bureau, Thos. H. Daniel, Mgr. WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—The announcement that President Wilson may revise the custom of advising with the senate in executive session, as he revived that of delivering his message in person, has caused a considerable amount of speculation and comment. There has been no substantial objection advanced to the plan, and those who look upon it as unwise base their views upon the probable unsatisfactory results to the president himself.

Senator Lodge has pointed out that the last president to meet with the senate in executive session—the only one—was George Washington. Several times the first president, Mr. Lodge says, was on the floor during executive sessions of the senate when nominations and treaties were being considered. On one of these occasions, however, the Father of his Country is alleged to have remarked, as a result of impatience with some of the action on the floor, that he would "be d—d if he would ever go there again." And he did not again attend the executive sessions of the senate, nor has any other president done so since his day.

Mr. Wilson is a firm believer in "common counsel" and this is perhaps the reason that he is considering the matter of attending the session of the senate. By many of the men who have occupied the White House it would probably be regarded as a lowering of the dignity of the presidential office, but Mr. Wilson is not strong on the studied and artificial dignities that hedge about the position he holds. He has remarked that he is a human being, and not a separate "power" isolated from his fellows by his election to the presidency; and he knows the value of the personal touch.

Foreign affairs, involving the consideration of treaties, and the confirmation of presidential nominations for office, constitute the chief subjects that are considered by the senate in executive session. These subjects are peculiarly close to the president, and it is only reasonable to suppose that many misunderstandings and difficulties might be cleared away by the presence of the president when such matters are being discussed. While it has not been definitely announced that he will revive this custom, it is believed by many of the friends that he will do so, and the general view is that he will suffer neither in influence nor in the public esteem by the step.

It is not certain that the other cabinet members will be under compulsion by the president to leave the members of the cabinet take part in the debates on the floor of the house—would be as generally welcomed. There is less reason for this practice under the organization of the government. The debates of the house are always public, and every word spoken on the floor is published broadcast. This, of course, is not the case with the executive sessions of the senate, where foreign relations, first are not public are discussed. The members of the cabinet can go upon the floor of the committee room, where all work of the house is done, anyway, and what they urge there is no more effective than it would be upon the floor. The subjects in which they would be chiefly interested, of course, are those touching their respective departments, and these can be very effectively influenced without their presence on the floor.

It is frequently pointed out that the members of the British cabinet have the privilege of the floor, and the results there would indicate that the practice is desirable. But the parallel is not by any means complete, for the reason that members of the British cabinet are necessarily members of parliament. The situation in the United States would be similar if the president were required to pick his cabinet members from the membership of the house. And in that case, of course, there would not be the same objection to cabinet members being participants in the debates. At present, members of the cabinet are entirely independent of the popular will, except in so far as it is expressed in their confirmation by the senate. In other words, cabinet members are not chosen by the people, in any sense, and this is the very valid reason why they should take no part in the debates of the people's representatives.

The rumor of Secretary Bryan's proposed resignation has again cropped out. As usual, this story originated in the camps of those who are opposed to any form of continuing trust.

The secretary of state may say or do more being a full in politics; group following the elections and the recent adjournment of congress, it was not unusual that the stock subject of the anti-administrative press should again be brought to the fore. The near approach of the middle of the presidential term made it timely to revamp the old story. The absurdity of the report has evidently not been sufficiently impressed upon the portion of the press which regards the secretary as the beta boy of all patriotically inclined people. Unbiased observers merely smile when the story is trotted forth. Mr. Bryan, however, has recently denied it, and does so more emphatically than he has done in the present instance. He realizes, of course, that his resignation at this time would immediately result in the continuation of the presidential nomination term Mr. Wilson in 1916, and he knows that this would produce just the split in the Demo-

Thanksgiving Thoughts

While others are petting and fuming over the great wars in Europe and in Mexico, as well as the fighting in our own city of Anderson about the Public Utilities, the Savannah river blockade, the White Way, the poor little blind tiger and even the sanctified losses of our own club rooms, which are about to be invaded, let me call a halt, and grasp hold of something more congenial to my nature and my present feelings. Let me do something to make the other fellow feel good and let him do something to make me feel good, to make him laugh and laugh with him. If he has a heavy burden to carry put your best foot foremost and lighten his load. Don't talk of hard times and don't let any one talk hard times to you. Do all the good you can before you die, don't trust that part to any one, do it yourself and do it well. With these thoughts let us be happy and grateful this Thanksgiving Day. I am thinking of my partner today, so I write him a few lines.

"THE BOUNDER"

Post Mortem Praises Lines Dedicated to by Partner, Col. All Nalley. I've noticed when a fellow dies, no matter what his name, a satirical cheer or two whose life was darkly steeped in sin. His friends forget the bitter words they spoke out yesterday. And how find a multitude of pretty things to say. But, if it's all the same to you, just give me the inside. The bouquets while I'm living, and the knocking when I'm dead. Don't save your kisses to imprint upon my marble brow. While counties maledictions are hurled upon me now; say just one kindly word to me while I mourn here alone. And don't save all your eulogy to carve upon a stone. It will not flatter me a bit, no matter what is said; So kindly throw your bouquets now, and knock me when I'm dead. It may be nice to save those things for those you leave behind. But just as far as I'm concerned, I really do not mind. I'm quite alive and well today, and while I linger here. Lead me a helping hand at times—give me a word of cheer. Just cheer the game a little bit; just kindly swap the decks. For I'll be no judge of flowers when I've cashed in my checks. The Rambler.

Frontier while action is being taken against those in Zemplin. Along the east and south coasts of England preparations are being made to repulse any possible attempts at invasion by Germany. Plans have been completed for the withdrawal of women and children from areas which may be threatened and for the withdrawal of live stock and anything that may be useful to the invaders. Rifle clubs have been organized and are drilling.

Germany also fears an invasion by the Allies and is making extensive preparations to guard against such an eventuality, according to a Copenhagen dispatch. It is said the Germans are strengthening old fortresses in the former Danish territory of Schleswig-Holstein and a line of entrenchments along the northern side of the Kiel Canal. It is on the shore of Schleswig, the report says that an invasion is feared.

The general staff of the Russian army in the Caucasus says that the Turkish forces are still retreating before the Russians in the region about Erzerum. A dispatch from Berlin says it is reported there that the British Indian troops along the Suez canal have been defeated and that the Turks are advancing with heavy batteries to destroy the constructive works of the canal and bottle up the British warships now in that waterway.

Considerable diplomatic activity in the Balkans is reported. There is talk of a reorganization of the Balkan league which would bring to the side of the Allies all the Balkan states. The Earl of Beauchamp, first commissioner of works in the British cabinet, in a speech at a banquet to the officers of the Santa Clara ship basin at Plymouth, made a statement which is attracting considerable interest. It is expressing England's appreciation of the peace treaty between Great Britain and the United States he was not at all sure that within the next few months the possibility of future peace would not be along the lines suggested by President Wilson and Secretary of State Bryan.

(By Associated Press) LONDON, Nov. 25.—While the Russian army headquarters remains silent and the Germans claim to have checked attempts on the part of the Russians to take the offensive, the military party in Petrograd has shown its full confidence in the unofficial reports of a Russian victory in northern Poland by celebrating the event. It is even said in the Russian capital that the victory was greater than has been reported previously and there is talk in Petrograd of an entire German army corps having been broken up. Reports received there say that trains have been ordered which will accommodate 50,000 wounded and prisoners. Heretofore Grand Duke Nicholas, commander-in-chief of the Russian forces, has withheld his reports until the work he set about had been completed, so that the world may have to wait for some days yet for his official statement.

In East Prussia and before Craoov, Galicia, the Russians also claim to have brought the Russian advance to a stop. The other side is yet to be heard from in regard to this statement.

Probably the most significant piece of news regarding Russian operations comes from Budapest, where it is admitted the Russian troops again have invaded Hungary and again reached the county of Ung which is about 35 miles south of the Carpathians, and the county of Zemplin, 50 miles south of these mountains. The troops, which invaded Ung, according to this report, have been driven back to the frontier, while action is being taken against those in Zemplin.

Except to the north of Verdun, where the Germans attacked, were repulsed and asked for an armistice which was refused, fighting in the western theatre still is largely an artillery exchange. There is evidence, however, that the Germans contemplate another desperate effort to get through to the French coast ports.

Every report from Belgium by way of Holland shows that the Germans are bringing up reinforcements and guns, but so closely is the secret guarded that there is no indication as to where the blow is to be delivered. It will doubtless be a heavy one, backed by all the men, guns and other machines of war of which the Germans seem to have unlimited supplies.

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Clear skies and snappy temperatures for virtually the entire country for Thanksgiving were promised tonight by weather bureau forecasters. Decade of years failed to show that better conditions ever prevailed on Thanksgiving day than those predicted for tomorrow.

COTTON PRODUCTS COMPANY FORMED
plans and purposes of the new corporation.
The company will be chartered under the laws of Louisiana and will maintain headquarters at New Orleans. It was organized by the Southern Cotton Association, cooperating with the farmers' union and other organizations.
Resolutions will be taken in case of cotton, and in cotton at 10 cents per pound, including bales.
The first object of the Cotton Products Company will be to reduce from the market as much of the surplus of the present crop as possible, and its first business after organization will be to secure loans on negotiable warehouse receipts on cotton held in storage.
The temporary officers of the company will be the present officers of the Southern Cotton Association. Permanent officers will be selected from among the leading producers and business men of the South. The Southern Cotton Association will be held responsible to make satisfactory terms for the very cotton-producing county of the South.
The Cotton Products Company, when organized, will contract with warehousemen, issue negotiable warehouse receipts and attempt to bring about many economic reforms in marketing and handling the cotton crop. It will undertake to stabilize cotton values at prices fair and reasonable to the cotton grower, and otherwise aid in the development of the cotton industry.
