The People-Sentinel is not questioning the accuracy of the recent cotton crop estimates of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, which have caused a loss of millions of dollars to the Southern farmers, but we do question the necessity for these frequent official guesses which benefit nobody except the speculators and those who want to get the South's chief money crop year after year at less than the cost of production. And no less a writer than Arthur Brisbane, the highest paid editorial writer in the United States, concurs in this opinion. As Mr. Brisbane aptly sums up the situation, these large crop estimates merely serve to put foreign and domestic buyers on notice that a large crop has been made and they can get it at greatly reduced prices by holding off in making their purchases. On the other hand, as we have seen demonstrated during the past few months, if the Department issues a report that is favorable to an advance in prices and would, therefore tend to benefit the producer, Wall Street refuses to believe in its accuracy and depresses the market.

It seems to be absurd to say that the price is governed wholly by the law of supply and demand. In spite of a brisk demand this fall on the part of the mills, cotton has declined steadily in price, there being a difference of more than $30 a bale between the high and low levels. We do not believe that this drastic decline in the price of the raw material has been reflected in the prices for the finished product.

As Mr. Brisbane points out, the government does not make semi-monthly estimates of steel production or dabble along that line with other industries. Of course not. The producers wouldn't stand for it a minute. Then why persist in a practice that works havoc with the cotton growing industry? If estimates are a necessary evil attendant upon the production of cotton, let's make them as few and far between as possible. For our part, we wouldn't object to seeing them abolished altogether.

"Cross Eyed"—Strabismus

Commonly referred to as "cock eye" usually develops in early school life and if not corrected in time results in permanent impairment if not total loss of vision in the deviating eye.

Nearly all cases of strabismus will readily yield to properly fitted glasses or optometric treatment if rendered in time.

Knowing the graveness of this condition when neglected, I offer free my services and glasses to those that are not able to pay.

My drugless examination reveals any tendency toward this condition.

Keeping Pace With South Carolina

THE telephone construction program now in progress in the States of Alabama, Florida, Georgia and the Carolinas is the largest ever undertaken by the Southern Bell Company. The additions and replacements this year will cost $13,320,700.

More than $770,400 will be expended in South Carolina this year for new telephone buildings, equipment, plant and replacements.

The enormous sums of money required to meet this development is largely new capital, which must be furnished by investors who have faith in the future of this State, or borrowed in the money markets.

While this work is in progress your service continues day and night at a higher standard of efficiency and in greater volume than ever before.

Our success depends in a large measure upon your continued co-operation, which encourages the telephone workers to strive to serve you better.
