WISE MEN, MAGICIANS. SAME THING. THE PRESIDENT'S PLAN. A WOMAN'S CAFE.

The President says farmers can solve their problems, or some of them, by co-operative marketing. Could the President guarantee the farmers against prosecution, based on restraint of trade, if farmers combined, established market places and fixed prices?

A Government board now tells moving picture men that they may not exhibit their own pictures in their own theatres.

If that were sound—of course it is NOT sound—farmers could not sell their own products in their own markets, which is what they SHOULD do.

Canada discovers a deposit of helium gas and the Canadian Government has bought the three producing wells, keeping for itself all helium rights.

In Canada the Government will keep and work these wells for the public benefit, and there will be no Canadian helium "Teapot Dome affair." Give our Canadian brothers credit for that.

And what, if anything, would Government do to help the farmers? A great deal is done for railroads. A Government board watches over them, raises rates when the railroad lacks reasonable profits, and says to the public, "Pay or walk."

Would the Government show interest of that sort in farmers and MAKE the public pay for wheat and potatoes enough to pay the farmer well?

The District of Columbia Court of Appeals decides that the indictments in connection with the stealing of the naval oil reserves must stand.

It would be surprising, gratifying and new if the fact should be established that in this country a man cannot go free even when he steals one hundred million dollars. The general impression was that anything from one million up was quite safe.

A learned Britisher, translating the Bible, finds a mistake in the King James version. The men that the star guided to Bethlehem were not kings or "wise men" they were magicians.

In ancient days, the difference was slight. Unless a man was a magician the superstitious people thought little of his wisdom. That is why founders of new religions have been compelled to perform miracles; or pretend performance.

The great Kepler, working at his cosmic problems, depending on the Emperor for money and protection, had to pretend that he could read the stars and tell the Emperor's fortune, warning him or encouraging him, according to the stars. For the magnificent wisdom of Kepler, one of the world's six greatest astronomer and mathematicians, the Emperor had little use.

In the Swiss village of Piona men drank brandy, and got drunk. There was no cafe and the village was on a "hard stuff" basis.

The men wanted a cafe. The women objected, opened a women's cafe and ran it, supplying the men with light beer and wine and keeping an eye on them. Strange to say, the men who objected at first are now contented, and what is more important, they are sober.

Drunkness has disappeared from the village.

Here we are trying the other experiment, driving out light wine and beer, putting in bootleg whiskey. Time will tell which is the better plan.

P. C. Luther, devoting his life to planting trees, celebrated his sixty-third birthday by announcing his intention to begin planting 10,000 more trees. Charles L. Pack, president of the American Tree Association, wonders who could beat Mr. Luther's record.

It could be done easily if the Government would use half a dozen flying machines to scatter seeds along naked mountain ranges. Swept by fire.
