

THE VILLAGE COURTSHIP.

BY CHARLES SWAIN.

Tapping at the window, Peeping o'er the blind;— Tis really most surprising, He never learns to mind! 'Twas only yester evening, As in the dark we sat,

My mother asked me, sharply—
"Pray, Mary, who is that?"
Who's the', indeed!—you're certain
How much she made me start.
Man saam to lose their windows. Men seem to lose their wisdom Whene'er they lore their heart.

Yes; there he is-I see him! The lamp his shadow throws Across the curtained window— He's stepping on his toes! He'll never think of tapping, Or making any dia;
A knock though even the lightest,
Is worse than looking in!
Tap! tap!—Would any think it?
He never learns to mind. 'Tis surely most surprising-He thinks my mother blind.

'Tis plain I must go to him; It's no use now to cough;— I'll ope the door just softly, If but to send him off! 'Tis well if from the door-step He be not shortly hurl'd-Oh, man, there ne'er was trouble, Till be came in the world! Tapping at the window,
And peeping o'er the blind;
Oh, man! but you're a trouble And that we maidens find!

A GOOD NAME. " A good name," says Selomen, " is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favor rather than river and gold." Children, choose it, Don't refuse it, Tiva precious diadem; Highly prize it, Don't despise it,

You will need it when you're men." Love and cherish, Keep and nourish,
'Tis more precious far than gold; Watch and guard it, Don't discard it. You will need it when you're old.

Agricultural.

From the Cultivator, CATCHING RATS.

It is not a very easy matter to extripate rata; they are endowed with more sagacity than they generally have credit for, and force the corks in. under the promptings of self preservation, often clude plans which are laid for their capture.

A writer in the Ayrshire (Scotland) Agriculturist, appears to understand the business of rat-trapping, and gives some directions on the subject, which we think worthy of remembering. He recommends pan or other convenient vessel, and place the round and square wire traps; and in on the stove; put in the borax, and then order to take the rats, he states that "it is in the first place necessary to remove their suspicions, to get the better of their cunning; in short, to throw them off their guard." He thinks this can be most effectually done by "fastening the doors of the trap open for a night or two, so that the rats may have free ingress and egress," He supposes that rate, as well as many other animals, possess the power of conveying intelligence to each other; and when one has found a delicious morsel, he will convey the intelligence to his comrades. As bais, he prefers bacon, fried till it is somewhat burned, with plenty of grease. He recom-mends that the trap be visited early in the morning, for if the cats remain long in the traps, it will be the means of frightening the others, so that it will be difficult to catch

When using the trap, you will find your success immeasurably enhanced by using a few drops of the following mixture upon the mess used as a buit. It is the prepara tion generally employed by professional rat-catchers, and is that to which they have imputed such wonderful effects, such as decoying the vermin into one spot and there destroying them wholesale. I must, however, confess that I have both sought and met with some of the most talented and successful professors of the art of rat-catching, without witnessing such miracles. I once, however, did see a tame rat, (Edinburg, at the back of the Castle, in the year 1887) which, having been previously smeared with a certain composition-that which I am about to describe was let Horse Showing, puts a gutta percha protections in a vault, and in less than half an arrows the cale of the foot, and secures hour returned followed by some half-dozen deny, which seemed enamoured of the deny, or of the seems that hung about him, that they suffered themselves to be taken alive in the rat outcher's lanes, without even offering to bite. The preparation I rat-catching. It is as follows :

Powdered assafortida, & grain. Essential oil of rhodium, 3 drachms. Essential oil of lavender, 1 scruple. Resential oil of lavender, 1 seru 1 drachm.

BUTTER PRESERVED BY BOILING.

A physician who has travelled through Switzerland describes a process of preserving butter as adopted in that country, and which he states to be far preferable to the English plan of salting. The process is as follows: - Into a clean copper pan (better no doubt tinned) put any quantity of butter, say from 20 lbs, to 40 lbs., and place it over the fire, so that it may melt slowly, and let the heat be so graduated that the melted mass does not come to boil in less than about two hours. During all this time the butter must be frequently stirred say once in five or ten minutes so that the whole mass may be thoroughly inter-mixed, and the top and bottom change places from time to time. When the melted mass boils, the fire is to be so regulated as to keep the butter at a gentle boil for about two hours more; the stirring being continued. But not necessarily so frequent as before.

The vessel is then removed from the fire and set aside to cool and settle, still gradually. This process of cooling is supposed always to require about two hours. The melted mass is then while still liquid, to be carefally poured into the crock or jar in which it is to be kept. In the process of cooling there is there deposited a whitish cheesy sediment, proportioned to the quantity of butter, which is to be carefully prevented from intermixing with the preserved butter. The gaseous grounds are very palatable and nutritious and are con stantly used as food. Butter so prepared will last for years perfectly good without any particular caution being taken to keep it from the air, or without the slightest addition of salt .- Globe.

This plan of curing butter has been practised by some of the Tartar tribes for centuries. Two weeks ago a claim for a patent to Mr. Merriman, of Illi., appeared in our columns to accomplish the same object, but by very different and more simple means .- Scientific American.

SELF-SEALING FRUIT CANS .- Take a common fruit-jar, with a tin cover, made like a shoe-black box. The jar and the cover will probably cost a dime, and hold a quart. Any of the cements that are used for sealing cans or jars will do for this. Heat your fruit, either in the jars or in some other vessels, and pour it in the jars, (previously warming them.) Now pour enough cement in the cover to give the bottom and side a thin coat. When the cement becomes slightly stiff, apply the cover over the jar, the jar having been well filled, and turn the jar upside dozen; and here is the invention. As fruit jars have a lip, you now have a little trough to fill with cement, and the work is done. Let your jars get cold standing on the covers, and put them away in the same position. It is the steam escaping in the common way of sealing or soldering cans, that leaves so many of them imperfect. My plan entirely obviates this difficulty, as the steam or vapour is always on top of the fruit. This arrangement, you perceive, is really a chemist's pneumatic trough, and there is no danger when your fruit has cooled down and created a vacuum, that the extended atmospheric pressure will SOAP FOR WASHING .- The American Agriculturist is responsible for this reeipe:-To each pound of common hard soap, add from a half to three quarter ounces common borax, pulverized, and one quart of water. Put the water in a tin add the soap, cut in small, thin pieces. Keep them hot, but not boiling, several hours, or until the soap is dissolved. When cool, it will be double the quantity, and thus save at least one-half. Rub the dirtiest part of the clothes with this compound, and soak them over night, if convenient, or an hour or two in the morning. This mixture does not cut the hands, and is adapted to all sorts of clothes-calicoes, flannel, &c., as well as white cotton or linen. They are to be washed, boiled, and rinsed, as usual, but the labour of rubbing is greatly lessened.

DETING PLANTS .- Plants may be dried in such a manner as to be exceedingly beautiful-retaining the whole of the volatile oil and aroms, and their true colors. To effect this, they must be dried in a dark, close room, and not, as is usually the case, by exposure to a current of air and the action of light. When the separation of the aqueous particles is effected by their evaporation, and they are tolerably dry, they are to be submitted to pressure in small quantities, enveloped in a slighly absorbent paper, until the oil appears on the surface, and which is known by its discoloration; by this, all change of color by the action of the light or farther action of volatile matter by evaporation is prevented. In pot herbs, as well as medicinal plants, this will be found a very decided improvement.

HORSE SHOEING -- William Mills, Eeq., the author of a recent English treatise on tion across the cale of the fast, and secures the shoes on the fore feet by only three nails in each. He has followed the practice with six horses for seven years, and considers a larger number, as very bung-
